FIRMS EYE CHALLENGES

Contracts Contain Inflationary Hikes

. . . PAY BOARD SET UP PATH

The New York Times

By MICHAEL C. JENSEN

New York — A number of companies across the country are studying the possibility of challenging inflationary second- and third-year pay increases that are built into their existing labor contracts.

The opportunity to challenge future increases that exceed 5.5% was made possible by a ruling Monday night of the Pay Board, which stated that contracts now in existence will be honored unless chlalenged by a "party at interest" or by five or more members of the 15-man panel.

Board May Do It

The Pay Board does not expect a large number of corporate challenges, and some businessmen feel the board could end up doing much of the challenging itself.

However, a number of corporate officials said they were studying a variety of approaches, although none was prepared to declare that a challenge would definitely be mounted.

One executive made it clear that there would be industry-wide discussions before a decision was reached. Another said he believed the Pay Board members would take care of any inflationary increases, so the role of the individual companies was "academic."

Another asserted that when a combination of cost-of-living increases and annual increases outstripped his company's capacity to recover such costs by raisnig prices, a challenge might be consdiered.

Some chaos in the challenges is anticipated if a large number materialize. "There are 100,000 contracts a year that are entered into," said an AFL-CIO spokesman, "and about 300,000 contracts in existence. That would take an awful lot of reviewing."

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co., for example, has 130 separate labor contracts .

Organized labor expects that challenges might be made by individual businesses where the corporations are relatively strong, but may be made by the business members of the pay board as a surrogate for industries that are fragmented, like the independent truckers who bargain with the Teamsters.

Anonymity Desired

Few executives were willing to talk for attribution on the sensitive subject. "Look, we're right in the middle of Bargaining with some of our unions," said the top personnel officer of a major eastern corporation.

"I can tell you that the first year increass we've already signed have run about 15%, and the three-year package was 20% to 30%. This same pattern exists industrywide, so there'll be a lot of looking at each other before we decide whether or not our company will be the one to bite the bullet."

Some executives said they would wait to see what sort of price increases are allowed by the Price Commission. One said he anticipated paying a cost-of-living increase next spring, with the anniversary date for a wage increase falling due later in the year.

If the cumulative impact of the increases became too great, he said, a challenge would probably be made.

A number of companies said their top personnel and labor relations executives were in Washington Monday for briefings on the Pay Board rulings.

No Problem To Some

Not all companies have a problem, it was pointed out. Honeywell Inc. of Minnespolis, for example, is currently in the second year of a two-year contract with most of its unions, and thus has few problems with built-in increases.

Some such companies, however, said there will be a tendency to negotiate one-year contracts if the Nixon program is still in effect when their present contracts expire.

Many concerns, like the General Electric Co. in New York, were the scenes of conferences of labor and compensation specialists to determine a course of action.

Others, like the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. of Akron, Ohio, have contracts that don't step up until next summer, and said they are taking a wait and see attitude.

"Under our contract, the next step-up is in July, 1972," said a Goodyear spokesman. "It will be 26 cents an hour. That's about 6%, which isn't too far off the guideline, so we aren't doing anything right now."

PROSECUTION CLAIMS . . .

Panther Newton Shot Policeman

Oakland, Calif. (AP) — Presenting its case against Huey Newton for the third time, the prosecution argued Tuesday that the defense minister of the Black Panther Party shot and killed an Oakland policeman four years ago without provocation.

The defense said the officer, John Frey, shot Newton in the abdomen when Newton began reading his constitutional rights from a book and Newton did not know what happened after he was wounded.

Opening arguments were made to a Superior Court jury trying Newton, 29, for the third time. He is charged with manslaughter.

His face red and shaking a finger two feet from Newton's face, Deputy Dist. Atty. Donald Whyte said a bus driver would testify Newton used a 9-mm pistol to shoot Frey four times.

"You will hear the voice of John Frey as he blurts out the last moments of his life on a piece of tape — the last moments of what otherwise for John Frey was a most routine day of his life," Whyte said.

The prosecutor referred to tapes made from the policeman's patrol car radio transmitter.

Charles Garry, defense attorney, said after Frey stopped Newton's automobile in West Oakland, Newton read his constitutional rights from a law book.

Frey, Garry said, called Newton a "nigger" and then "hit Mr. Newton, knocked him to his knees, pulled out his gun and shot him in the abdomen."

Garry objected again to the composition of the jury, saying "although 38% of Oakland is black, not one black person is on the jury." The judge admonished Garry not to refer to this.

Nuclear Plant Sites Attract 'Fishermen'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of four articles by Outstate Nebraska Bureau Reporter Sam Thorson on the atomic power plants and their effect on the Missouri River.)

By SAM THORSON
Star Staff Writer

Ft. Calhoun — Every Monday morning, Norm Stuckey and three warmly-dressed associates rise early and leave Lincoln for a fishing trip on the Missouri River.

Arriving at the Blair Marina at 9 a.m., they stow their equipment aboard two flat-bottom outboard boats and head downstream toward the Ft. Calhoun Nuclear Station, under construction near here by the Omaha Public Power District (OPPD), the integrated (wholesale-retail) supplier for the Omaha area.

Cruising along selected stretches on both riverbanks, the men employ breastwaders and seine, electric shock and long-handled landing net, to catch hundreds of fish ranging from minnows through river carpsucker and gizzard shad to flathead catfish.

Also At Brownville

On Wednesday morning the crew shoves off again, this time from Brownville, and spends the day fishing the river near the Cooper Nuclear Station, under construction by the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD), which provides power, largely wholesale, for the rest of the state outside the Omaha area.

Stuckey's job is not commercial fishing, but biological research for the state Game and Parks Commission. The Game unit is coordinating 12 governmental and private organizations in a study of the river's ecology — before and after the nuclear power stations begin production.

Nuclear power plants, besides producing cheaper power, have important environmental advantages over fossil-fuel plants, according to power spokesmen. Whereas fossil fuel plants burn "dirty" carbon-based fuels, releasing tons of hydrocarbons into the air, the "nukes" generate power by controlled, "clean" atomic reduction with no air pollution whatever, power officials say.

Tightly Monitored

Atomic Energy Commission standards provide that nuclear fuels and wastes must be tightly monitored so that radioactive emissions never exceed 5% of the natural or "background" radiation from the atmosphere and common building materials such as concrete, brick and timber. One could live next to a nuclear plant for 30 years, power experts say, without absorbing as much radiation as from a dental X-ray.

Yet environmentalists have warned of another potential source of environmental degradation connected with nuclear power production: thermal pollution. Nuclear reactors use atomically-heated steam to drive their power turbines, and require a coolant to reconvert the steam to water. The most convenient coolant is river water.

The power industry is quick to point out that river water spends less than a minute in a plant's cooling system, and is never exposed to radiation. And contrary to a widespread impression that the nukes pour "hot water" into the river, the coolant water at capacity operation is heated some eighteen degrees fahrenheit above the "ambient" or natural temperature of the river — meaning the heated water may even be quite chilly in the wintertime.

Could Cause Change

But with some 400,000 gallons of water a minute flowing through the cooling system of the larger Brownville plant, or 1-10 of the river's flow during its slack winter season, biologists say the ambient temperature could be raised enough to cause a substantial change in the river habitat, with an unpredictable effect on the entire biological food chain leading up to the larger fishes — including commercial species like channel catfish.

The attitude of environmental observers, then, is "test the water before you jump in."

Hence the 12-agency study, one of the first of its kind in the country. "None of us are opposed to the use of the water as long as it has no detrimental effect on the environment," said Stuckey's boss, Game and Parks Research Division chief Earl Kendle, whose job it is to co-ordinate the whole project.

"There has been a shortage of facts needed to decide whether the nuclear plants should be situated on the river or somewhere back off the river where the water would be cooled in a pond or cooling tower" before being released, Kendle said.

The outcome of the study will not be binding on OPPD and NPPD, he said, but will be published, and "could result in a stand by our commission or any of the others" regarding the location of the plants, or the desirability of pre-cooling the water before it is released.

Labor Criticizes Wage Controls

Miami Beach, Fla. (AP) — AFL-CIO leaders voiced mounting criticism Tuesday of new federal wage controls in reactions ranging from caution to a call for a general protest strike of the labor federation's nearly 14 million members.

"We have introduced a resolution for the AFL-CIO convention opening Nov. 18, to take whatever action is necessary, including a national work stoppage or general strike," said the executive board of the 500,000-member Amalgamated Meat Cutters Union.

"The Pay Board has robbed scores of thousands of our members of fairly negotiated and noninflationary wage increases which were due to be paid in September under agreements worked out more than a year ago," the Meat Cutters said.

Its pay hikes were blocked by the wage-price freeze imposed by Nixon Aug. 15 and presumably cannot be paid retroactively without a special ruling from the Pay Board.

"Under the guise of 'fighting inflation,' the Pay Board majority has taken money out of the pockets of hard-working and hard-pressed food workers and put it in the treasuries of immensely wealthy corporations," it said.

'Freeze Into Poverty'

"In addition, the 5.5% pay increases ceiling has the effect of freezing millions of Americans into a state of poverty," added the Meat Cutters statement.

The Meat Cutters and several construction union leaders urged AFL-CIO President George Meany to quit President Nixon's 15-man labor-industry-public Pay Board, which Monday ordered a general 5.5% limit on future pay hikes.

The five labor members of the Pay Board, including Meany, were outvoted 10 to 5 by the industry and public members in the decision which also ruled out most retroactive pay for the current 90-day wage-price freeze and indicated some scheduled pay hikes could be rolled back.

"If President Meany wants to resign from the Pay Board, he has my support," said President Edward J. Carlough of the 150,000-member Sheet Metal Workers.

But some other construction union chiefs, including three on the AFL-CIO Executive Council, cautioned against a labor walkout from the Pay Board at least until more details and specific decisions on wage hikes are available.

The three council members who contended labor could better argue its case from within the board were President Peter Fosco of the 600,000-member Laborers Union, Maurice Hutcheson of the 900,000-member Carpenters, and S. Frank Raftery of the 135,000-member Painters Union.

Board 'Stacked'

But Raftery charged that the Pay Board was "stacked" against labor, and Iron Workers President John Lyons, another member of the Executive Council, said if decisions of the board continued on a 10-5 vote against labor, "it would not make much sense to be on the board. The vote might as well be 10 to nothing."

President Charles H. Pillard of the 950,000-member International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and other labor leaders expressed fear that the Pay Board's provision for possible rollback of previously negotiated wage hikes would amount to nullifying legal labor contracts.

These could involve millions of workers and billions of dollars in wage hikes in steel, telephone, trucking, construction and other industries in which three-year contracts have already been negotiated with wage hikes coming due later this year and next.

District 145 Voters Reject Bonds Again

For the third time voters of Lancaster County School District No. 145 at Waverly have rejected a school bond issue.

In the latest special election Tuesday, a $1,875,000 bond issue lost by 27 votes. The unofficial tally was 880 for, 907 against. Ten absentee ballots could not change the outcome.

The funds this time were intended for a new elementary school at Waverly, and for the addition of six classrooms and a cafeteria and dining area to the elementary school at Eagle.

Last March voters turned down a $1,290,000 bond proposal, and a year earlier a $1,992,000 bond issue was defeated.

East Butler Bonds Nixed

Lincoln Star Special

Brainard — By only three votes, residents in the East Butler School District 2-R Tuesday defeated a $200,000 bond issue for a two-story addition to the existing school building in Brainard.

The unofficial vote was 382 for and 385 against.

A spokesman in the Butler County clerk's office said the total includes mail ballots as they were all in at the time of the counting Tuesday night and officials were given the go-ahead to open them and include them with the tally.

Legislative Council To Forego Full Meeting

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislative Council's executive board Tuesday formally decided to forego a full meeting of the council this year to receive legislative study committee reports.

The council is composed of all 49 senators and normally assembles prior to each legislative session to hear committee reports and recommendations.

But most senators agreed that the Legislature's move to annual sessions rendered such a meeting this year unnecessary.

Recommendations from the study committees will be presented to the 1972 session in bill form, and time may be reserved for committee reports while the Legislature is in session.

Sen. William Swanson of Lincoln, chairman of the five-member executive board, said a poll of senators showed 31 opposed to a full council meeting. Three favored such a session, one was undecided and the remainder did not respond.

In other business, the board approved a list of prospective architects for the proposed new University of Nebraska fieldhouse and hired an assistant clerk of the Legislature for the 1972 session.

Dennis Gemar, 27, of Omaha, a former staff attorney for the revisor of statutes in Colorado, was employed as Clerk Vincent Brown's assistant effective Dec. 1.

A graduate of the NU College of Law, Gemar will receive $1,000 a month. His appointment will be subject to review prior to conclusion of the 1972 session.

The board decided to inform the State Building Commission that it has formally approved all five prospective fieldhouse architects proposed by NU's Board of Regents.

The list includes Leo A. Daly Company, Davis-Clark and Associates, Dana-Larson-Roubal and Associates, Kirkham-Michael and Associates, and Henningson, Durham and Associates.

Plans and architects for the fieldhouse must be approved by the executive board, according to legislation enacted earlier this year.

Nixon Says Foreign Aid Necessary To Peace

(c) New York Times News Service

New York — President Nixon, speaking at a Republican dinner here Tuesday night, said the world peace he believes is in sight would be imperiled if the Senate fails to restore the foreign aid program. Nixon also chided Congress for not acting on his domestic programs. (More on Page 25.)

Jews' Plight Pooh-Poohed

Washington — A House subcommittee investigating the plight of Soviet Jews was told by a State Department witness Tuesday that Jews in the Soviet Union were not living in a state of terror nor had their condition worsened in recent years. In its testimony, the department spokesman said he was attempting to counter the impression that Soviet Jews were undergoing unusual ordeals.

New York — Unions whose members lost wage increases during the freeze announced plans to make special claims to the Pay Board for exceptions from the retroactive adjustment restriction included in the wage guidelines.

Rehnquist Challenged By Civil Rights Men

World News

Washington (AP) — Spokesmen for civil rights groups struck Tuesday at William H. Rehnquist, one of President Nixon's Supreme Court nominees, and challenged testimony he gave to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

But they took no stand either for or against Nixon's other nominee, attorney Lewis F. Powell Jr. of Richmond, Va.

An administration spokesman defended Rehnquist against allegations of racism.

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., counsel for the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights and a spokesman for Americans for Democratic Action, called Rehnquist "a laundered McCarthyite."

"He is a lawyer without compassion for blacks and other minorities and a lawyer who never once has spoken up for the Bill of Rights," Rauh told the committee.

Also testifying for the conference, Clarence Mitchell said the nomination of Rehnquist, an assistant attorney general, was "an insult to Americans who support civil rights."

A Foot In The Door

Through Rehnquist's nomination, said Mitchell, director of the Washington bureau of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, "the foot of racism is placed in the door of the temple of justice."

Mitchell and Rauh were the leadoff witnesses as the committee, after completing its questioning of the nominees, began taking testimony from about 30 persons who have asked to be heard.

The Justice Department, meanwhile, denied that Rehnquist is or ever was a member of the ultraconservative John Birch Society.

Rehnquist submitted his affidavit denying Birch membership to the committee Tuesday afternoon and Sens. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., both indicated their acceptance of it.

But Rauh and Mitchell said his denial should not be allowed to end the matter and asked the committee to look further into it.

This brought a rebuke from Kennedy who told Rauh "your suggestion is completely unwarranted and uncalled for."

Kennedy went on to say that as one who has some reservations about the Rehnquist nomination he feels that allegations about Birch membership are not serving the cause of those who may oppose the nominee on other grounds.

"You have left an atmosphere that I think is rather poisonous," Kennedy told the witnesses.

Rehnquist's record in the racial field was defended by Arthur A. Fetcher, a former assistant secretary of labor who now is with the U.S. delegation to the United Nations. He is a Negro.

In a speech to a Republican fund-raising dinner at Phoenix, Ariz., Monday night, Fletcher cited Rehnquist's role in the so-called Philadelphia plan through which the administration has sought to increase employment of blacks in the building trades.

FELT GUILTY

Because he felt guilty receiving government checks, Kenneth P. Rushlow says he's donated nearly $4,000 to the Peace Corps. He received a medical discharge from the Navy in 1947 because, he says, he had tuberculosis. It was later discovered the disease was inactive, but the disability checks continued. Rushlow started donating to the Peace Corps, not wanting to keep the money.

Nader Says GM's Secrecy Better Than CIA's

©The New York Times

Washington — Ralph Nader told a Senate subcommittee Tuesday, "We know more about the CIA . . . than is known about the internal workings of GM (General Motors)."

The consumer advocate attacked virtually all aspects of corporate secrecy as the small business subcommittee on monopoly opened a series of hearings on confidentiality of business information.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., said that of the world's 100 leading "money powers," measured in terms of either gross national product or net sales, a recent study by the Congressional Research Service showed that for the first time more are corporations than countries, with 51 businesses and only 49 nations listed.

Nader cited a wide range of corporate information that he said should be available to the public, the government and other businesses. He said financial, product, environmental, employment and tax information on major corporations and their activities should be readily accessible and suggested the creation of a national corporate data bank to store and aid in the release of such information.

Nader said it was also necessary that corporations and trade associations make available information on their political activities, costs of government contracts and who owns the major American companies.

"The FTC (Federal Trade Commission) has data showing that if the leading oligopolistic industries were broken up into smaller units it could mean a 25% drop in prices," Nader asserted as he attacked federal agencies for aiding companies in keeping information secret rather than trying to disclose such data.

Several New Ones

Nader made a number of recommendations on corporate secrecy practices to the committee. While some of the proposals had been presented before by Nader, such as making corporate income tax returns public and increasing disclosure of corporate activities, the consumer spokesman detailed several new plans. Among these were the following:

—Legal definitions of "trade secrecy" and "confidentiality" that would set forth what could be kept secret under the regulatory acts and administrative regulations that apply to business activities.

—A standard that any information submitted by a business to any governmental unit should be available to the public in absence of a showing that a business' need for secrecy outweighs the public right to know the information.

—Corporations should be required to report sales and profits on each individual line of products or services they sell, rather than being able to consolidate such figures in one report.

—Sanctions should be provided against government officials who fail to disclose information that should be public under the freedom of information act. He suggested that such sanctions might include responsibility for costs of suits to compel disclosure, as well as possible suspension of those officials from their positions.

"This information is critical to the future of the country," Nader said. "It will affect the most fundamental issues that face us."

Tentative Agreement Made In Colorado Prison Strike

Canon City, Colo. (UPI) — A tentative agreement was announced Tuesday in a week-long strike of 1,000 prisoners at the Colorado State Penitentiary.

Prison Warden Wayne K. Patterson said the agreement included no concessions, but said he would personally study requests made by prisoners through a new prisoner advisory committee.

The prisoners had demanded better food and a general upgrading of prison life.

Patterson said the agreement with the prisoners was made Monday, but announcement of the settlement was withheld to ensure the tense prison situation would calm down Tuesday.

Patterson and the five-member prison committee met several times Monday to iron out the agreement.

27.6% Slash In No-Fault Car Insurance Premium Proposed

Boston (AP) — A sharp decline in claims under Massachusetts' no-fault automobile insurance plan has led Gov. Francis W. Sargent to recommend a 27.6% reduction in next year's premium rates.

If Sargent's recommendation is approved, the state's no-fault plan will have reduced the cost of compulsory bodily injury insurance by 42.6% in two years. The 1971x premium rates were decreased by 15% from the 1970 level.

The Massachusetts Insurance Division has said automobile liability insurance claims filed in the first six months of 1971 dropped 34% under the new law. The average cost of an individual claim fell 52%.

Sargent's recommendation will be submitted to the State Insurance Department at rate hearings set for Friday.

Industry Suggested 18½%

Because of its savings under the no-fault law, the insurance industry has recommended an 18.5% reduction, comapred to Sargent's recommendation for a 27.6% drop.

A modified no-fault plan, applicable only to compulsory bodily injury liability coverage, went into effect Jan. 1.

The plan provides for settlement of claims under $2,000 out of court. Under the plan, the motorist's own insurer pays him, regardless of who is to blame in the accident.

The governor has signed into law a bill extending the no-fault concept to property damage insurance.

Sargent said the Insurance Department also will recommend a 35% reduction in rates for commercial vehicles.

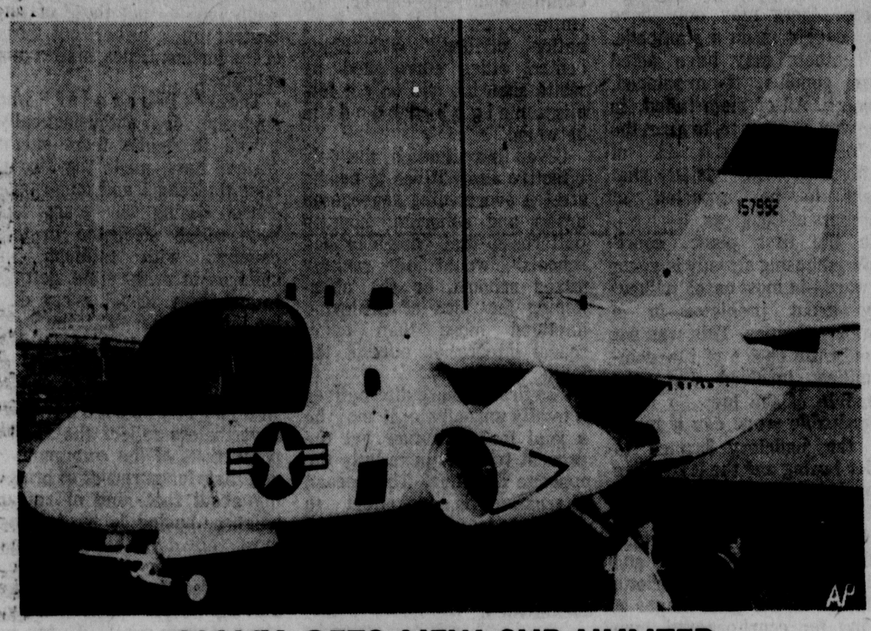

7.8% Hike Under Old Way

The department's "studies show that under the old system, increases of some 7.8% (in property damage rates) would be in order" next year, Sargent said.

"This contrasts with recommendatons made by companies for increases of some 13.6%."

The governor said, however, that the extension of no-fault to property damage "will prevent any increase."

The Insurance Department also is looking into the possibility of rebates on this year's premiums or further cuts next year beyond the 27.6 per cent recommended by the governor, because of the savings to the insurance industry.

NAVY GETS NEW SUB-HUNTER

Newsmen get a look at the Navy's newest anti-submarine airplane, the S3A, at its first public display. Shown at the Lockheed plant in Burbank, Calif., the aircraft will carry homing torpedoes, mines, depth charges, rockets and missiles. The new plane has a range of more than 2,000 miles.

Accident Rate High At Kansas City Southern

(c) Washington Star

Washington — A Midwestern railroad, whose management has been accused by the Interstate Commerce Commission staff of draining rail assets to finance other business ventures, is one of the least-safe railroads in the United States, according to a government report.

But a spokesman for the conglomerate, Irvin Hockaday, a vice president of Kansas City Southern Industries, said the government study did not mean that the railroad had skimped on maintenance expenditures. In fact, he said the railroad had outspent the industry average for the last five years on maintenance of the trackway and structures.

The Federal Railroad Administration's annual compilation of accident statics shows the Kansas City Southern Railway averaged 34.33 accidents per million miles in 1970.

With the exception of a small Illinois line, the Illinois Terminal Railroad, the KCS figure was the highest of all Class 1 railroads — those lines with $5 million or more in revenues each year.

But the report shows that of the 110 accidents on KCS last year, 88 were derailments — and of these, 49, or more than half, were due to "defects in or improper maintenance of track." Calculations showed that on this basis KCS had 15.2 accidents per million train miles that were due to track conditions.

Only the financially ailing Missouri-Kansas-Texas (MKT) Railroad came close to the KCS rate for accidents due to poor track conditions with 14.4 per million miles. MKT also forms the base of a conglomerate, KATY Industries.

Third worst on the basis of track conditions was the Chicago and North Western Railway, owned by the Northwest Industries conglomerate, with 8.6 accidents per million miles due to poor road bed.

A check of Federal Railroad Administration accident reports shows that starting in 1965 KCS has shown an increase in the overall number of train accidents per million miles every year with the exception of 1967. The 34.3 rate for 1970 is more than triple the 9.5 rate in 1965.

The management of Kansas City Southern Railway founded its conglomerate concern, KCS Industries, in 1962 to aid the railroad in diversifying into nontransportation businesses.

He Can't Explain It

Hockaday said in a telephone interview from his office in Kansas City, Mo., however, that while he could not explain the climbing accident rate, the company had increased expenditures on maintenance of way and structures 70% from 1961 to 1970.

By comparison, he said, the average rate of increase of such expenditures by Western railroads generally during that period was 14%, and by U.S. railroads over-all was 20%.

"It doesn't seem to me that you can attribute the comparison here to failures to spend money on maintenance of way when we've outspent on a district and total U.S. railroad basis," he said.

Free Medical Care Law To Be Effected

Washington (AP) — The administration moved Tuesday to implement a 1967 law requiring states to provide free preventive medical care for about seven million poor children eligible for Medicaid.

Top priority for medical screening, diagnosis and treatment goes to children under the age of six. The services are to be extended to all other eligible children under the age of 21 by July 1, 1973.

The regulation will be effective 90 days after publication in the Federal Register.

Cost of the new proposal is estimated at $20 million this fiscal year ending next June 30, $40 million in fiscal 1973 and $200 million in fiscal 1974.

The bill for the original proposal was estimated at $900 million to state and federal governments, which split costs about equally under the $6.2-billion-a-year Medicaid program.

Treatment Required

All participating states will be required to treat children for defects in hearing, sight and dental work "for relief of pain and infection, restoration of teeth and maintenance of dental health subject, however, to such utilization controls as may be imposed by the state agency."

Only Mississippi, Tennessee and Virginia now routinely treat those defects, HEW officials said. Nineteen states provide some visual care and 20 treat dental problems.

A new regulation applies to 48 states, the District of Columbia, Guam and the Virgin Islands. Alaska and Arizona do not participate in Medicaid.

The final program differs from the original by setting minimal standards rather than requiring treatment for all disorders, HEW officials said.

Its coverage varies according to each state's Medicaid plan, but promises federal matching funds for more extensive services for children even if not provided to adults.

Periodic Complaints

Since then-President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the legislation as an amendment to the Social Security Act on Jan. 2, 1967, there have been periodic complaints from congressmen and welfare organizations that it was not being implemented.

EVENTS
IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

A week of absence from the office was concluded with a Sunday visit in rural Nebraska, in search of the colorful and clever pheasant. The pheasant population, for those interested in it, appears to be about average and the cost of this meat for the table probably still comes out to an astronomical amount per pound.

Most families could live for months on T-bone steaks for what most men spend trying to put a pheasant in the larder. But it is good sport and wives should recognize that the sport of the thing is worth something.

Aside from pheasants, what you see in rural Nebraska is a lot of agriculture. This statement would catch no one by surprise but the fact is that most of us take agriculture for granted, perhaps knowing that it has some problems but seldom seeing anything personal in those problems.

Over a period of time, one notices quite a change in the character of the countryside. Corn, wheat and milo fields seem in some areas to stretch forever across the land, running as far as the eye can see and disappearing at the horizon.

There was a time when such immense fields of grain were the exception rather than the rule. Right now, the harvest of this grain, except wheat, of course, is well ahead of average. Most crops have now been gathered into storage.

The harvesting has been done, however, with costly and complicated machinery. If corn or milo has been blown over by the wind, special attachments scoop it up and feed the grain into a giant hopper so that precious little of the crop is left in the fields.

Farmers have poured many thousands of dollars into the machinery with which they now plant and harvest their crops and you see one farmyard and field after another dotted with the new equipment. Along with this, you see fewer and fewer farmsteads but better looking ones.

Agriculture has been in a long period of survival of the fittest and the effects of this are obvious. Irrigation is another practice that is evident throughout the state, even though there are hundreds of thousands of acres of land that remain to be brought under such a practice.

One also sees in rural Nebraska less and less wasteland. There are large tracts set aside from grain production but they represent good land held in reserve and covered with a healthy crop of grass.

The timber areas are largely disappearing and the barren wastelands of the past can hardly be found at all. Even the hills are being leveled to facilitate irrigation and to conserve the soil.

As you see all this and contemplate the tremendous technological advances on the farm, you have to marvel at the whole process. It is, indeed, a fantastic transformation that has taken place in the heartland of America but most people do not appreciate it, much less understand it.

The Geneva newspaper, The Nebraska Signal, recently repeated a statement it attributed to an eastern newspaper. The eastern newspaper was of the opinion that a $600 million increase in federal payments to farmers next year would mean an increase in consumer food prices.

If grain costs more, it reasoned, all the products of grain, including meats, would cost more in the grocery store. How stupid can people be?

The only increase farmers will get is in the area of acres taken out of production. For what they grow, the government will loan and guarantee exactly what it did this year, barely enough to eke out a living.

And the eastern establishment gives no thought at all to the strides that have been made in agricultural technology to provide the American people with high quality food at bargain prices in today's inflated economy. One doubts if the story of farming will ever be understood until it is too late.

'We're Not Going Back 100 Years! Just To 1954! . . .'

Down But Not Out

Although supporters of the constitutional amendment to permit voluntary prayer and meditation in public school failed to gain the necessary two-thirds approval in the House Monday, Rep. Emanuel Celler knows that the issue won't be buried for long. "I suspect that in a few years it will be back," said Celler, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and an opponent of the amendment.

Those who have worked for the amendment as an answer to landmark U.S. Supreme Court decisions outlawing prescribed prayer in New York schools and Bible-reading in Baltimore schools in 1962 and 1963 appeared undaunted after falling 28 votes short of approval and promised even quicker action — defeat at the polls in 1972 of those 162 representatives who, as they put it, "voted against prayer in school."

Proponents of the school prayer amendment have worked diligently in the intervening eight years and undoubtedly are correct in their claim that a great majority of Americans support the constitutional change — whether they understand it or not. An Opinion Research poll early in 1971 indicated that 80% of the American people favored putting prayer back in the public schools.

The difficulties facing many congressmen were summed up by Rep. G. V. Montgomery of Mississippi, who said "a vote for this bill will be a lot easier to explain than a vote against. The people we represent want this and it's up to us to give them what they want."

We reserve our commendation, however, to the 162 members of the House — not including Nebraska's three representatives, Charles Thone, John Y. McCollister and Dave Martin, who voted for the amendment — who somehow seem to have greater respect for the Constitution and the idea that government at all levels should stay strictly neutral in the area of religion.

One of them, Iowa's Fred Schwengel, reportedly a religious man who carries seventeen prayers in his coat pocket, believes that the amendment is not necessary anyway because God was not thrown out of the schools by the Supreme Court decisions. Voluntary prayer is permissible anywhere, he feels.

The amendment, in those terms, really is unnecessary. It would be tragic to do damage to constitutional principles just for the sake of a popular political issue.

Labor Seeks Rules Change

Although challenged by labor and in the Congress, the President's Pay Board nevertheless buckled down and Monday night came up with what must in the overall sense be termed reasonable Phase II guidelines to apply to the fight to end inflation.

The 5.5% annual increase in negotiated wage increases and in non-union pay raises allowed by the board after the end of the wage-price freeze may seem somewhat low to many people but it clearly is not suffocating. And the board decided to allow all other previously negotiated pay increases to take effect after Nov. 14 unless they are successfully challenged as "unreasonably inconsistent." It would appear by this that the board is attempting to steer away from a totally rigid course.

The most important decision reached by the board — and one which was necessary if Phase One was to accomplish much of anything — was to forbid with limited exceptions retroactive payment of wage increases cancelled by the 90-day freeze.

The new formula was approved by a public-management coalition on the Pay Board, with labor representatives on the short end of a 10-5 vote.

Although the five labor chiefs on the board did not threaten to quit, the ban on retroactivity faces a test in Congress — where last week the House Banking Committee approved Phase II guidelines which, among other concessions, would grant back pay from previously negotiated contracts. A court test is a further possibility. And then there was the cry raised Tuesday by the Amalgamated Meat Cutters for a general strike threat to force reversal of the new pay regulations.

The official AFL-CIO answer to the Pay Board decision will come out of its Miami convention next week. Labor — which had opposed Phase I because it did not apply evenly to all segments of the economy — now wants the rules changed in Phase II, solely for its benefit.

TOM WICKER
Fear In The House

WASHINGTON—Those liberal Democrats who joined southerners and most Republicans last week in prohibiting the use of emergency desegregation funds for busing programs were dead right about one thing. Busing is a political scare word and voting against it was the popular thing to do.

It was also, for those numerous liberals who knew better, rank demogoguery. Some others may only have been caught up in a stampede. Still others may have acted from genuine, if misplaced, concern. All of them failed, in one way or another, to meet the ordinary standards of leadership and vision that ought to be expected of members of Congress.

In the first place, court-ordered busing already is going forward—in most cases without any great problems—in a number of cities. This was not usually the choice of the communities involved but the mandate of the law. So what conceivable sense can it make for the judiciary branch to order busing and the legislative branch to prohibit any federal aid in paying for it?

The net result will be that communities like Nashville and San Francisco and Charlotte will have to find other means of paying for court-ordered busing, to the obvious detriment of school operating budgets that already are hard-pressed. That means, in turn, that if Congress maintains its anti-busing position, to which it was encouraged by President Nixon, the courts at the least will become more reluctant to order desegregation by busing. No doubt that is exactly what was wanted by many who voted against busing, northerners as well as southerners.

Everyone should be clear about what that means. To prohibit busing or to make it impossible is effectively to prevent any real chance of ending racial segregation in the schools of most urban areas. As Sen. Abe Ribicoff has put it, urban segregation outside the South is based not on dual school systems but on "dual societies;" or, as the Kerner Commission said earlier, the United States has become "one nation, divided," with black central cities surrounded by white suburbs, and only a few mixed neighborhoods in between.

Given that situation, the only effective alternatives to busing are (a) overcoming segregated urban and suburban housing patterns so that "neighborhood schools" would be racially mixed schools, or (b) abandoning any idea of achieving anything more than token school integration outside the South.

The first of these alternatives is totally unrealistic; it may be a goal for the future but the present trend is in exactly the opposite direction. The second alternative is in effect to choose to leave intact most of the nation's school segregation—for most of it is in the urban North, as can be amply documented.

Even so, if it could be shown that busing is destructive of "quality education"—of which there is precious little in American schools, neighborhood or otherwise—perhaps a case might be made against it. If Mrs. Edith Green, for instance, really believes what she said in the House ("The evidence is very strong that busing is not the answer to our school problems"), she ought to make the case.

But she can't and hardly tried, other than for such fatuous remarks as, "We cannot go back 100 years to make up for the errors of our ancestors." Where it has been ordered, busing makes up mostly for the deliberate intentions of school board members, zoning commissions, real estate interests, city officials, community leaders and politicians — not those of ancestral times, either, but those of the forties, fifties, sixties and seventies.

Those "liberals" who supinely or enthusiastically bowed to public fears might instead have made the strong case that short and long-range school busing for years has been widely accepted in this country, with millions of children in every state getting to and from school every day by that means; that the best evidence is that both black and white students benefit educationally from attending white-majority school that nevertheless reflect the racial proportions of the community; and that, for purposes of bringing about that kind of racial balance, busing is by far the most effective — in some cases, the only — method.

It evades the question to say that the people oppose busing. Many of them surely do, but in no small part because they are encouraged by political "leadership", from the White House on down, that arouses fear and prejudice, rather than counseling common sense, courage and fair play — that panders to the worst rather than relying on the best qualities of the great American people.

JAMES RESTON
World Scene Duplicates American City

WASHINGTON — Two great forces are at work in the world today, one driving the nations together and the other setting them apart. Everywhere it is obvious — it is almost a cliche —that no nation can by itself control the problems of war, the arms race, money, overpopulation, hunger, disease, the drug traffic, or pollution but at the same time the spirit of nationalism and protectionism is rising, and the institutions for world cooperation like the United Nations are under severe attack.

The evidence of this dangerous paradox lies plain before us. We know the facts about world hunger and runaway population, about the nine million refugees from East Bengal and the danger of war between India and Pakistan. They have all been in the front-page headlines, along with the dollar crisis and the world monetary crisis, but they seem to be beyond our understanding. They are too complicated, or, as we think, too far away. We hear about them vaguely but we do not FEEL them.

The facts, however, remain, even if they seem remote, abstract and beyond our comprehension. The contemporary world today is a little like the modern American city: part black, embittered and revolutionary slum, and part white and prosperous. The main difference is that in urban America, the poor are a minority, and in the world at large, now being rushed together by modern transportation and communication, they are the vast majority.

The reaction of America political and public opinion to this present division between the rich and poor nations of the world is also comparable to the reaction of the white majority to the black minority in our own country over the last century. Even during the battles over slavery in America, most Americans knew something about the inequality of American life. Mr. Lincoln told them the Republic could not endure half slave and half free, and most of his successors in the White House, after abolition insisted also that it could not live happily with a deprived black minority. Again, however, after pointless miseries and eventually great progress, we are still struggling with this dilemma in a violent and revolutionary atmosphere.

Maybe this analogy is not quite accurate—analogies never are—but what is happening in the world today, or so it seems here, is at least comparable if not similar to our own national experience with the American poor and particularly with the American blacks over the past generation or so.

What we were eventually brought to see at home, after long periods of prejudice, indifference, confusion and hopelessness, was that we still could not evade the facts of inequality. What we were unable to do on principle and by foresight, we were finally forced to do by fear of violence.

The guess here is that this long and tragic national experience is now being repeated on the world stage. Our assumption at home in the past was, first, that we could avoid the confrontation with the silent impoverished black minority, and then that maybe we could ride out the confrontation with the power of the aroused "silent majority," but in the end it didn't work.

In the end, it probably won't work either in the world. Poverty is an infectious disease—our own affluent children in their expensive rags dramatize the point. With modern communiations, the word has finally got through to the populous slums of the world, where most of the human family exists, that hunger and disease are not inevitable but intolerable.

This is really what Prime Minister Gandhi of India has been saying here in the last few days. She was not asking for money, but for recognition of the alarming facts of modern life in the underdeveloped nations, and she may have been more successful than she realizes.

For while the Congress of the United States is now talking about foreign aid as if it were some kind of parliamentary maneuver or dirty trick on America, there are at least some officials here and elsewhere who see the dark horizon on the world and the developing class war between the rich northern nations and the poor and populous majority in the under-world of the sunny slums below the equator.

Liberals and conservatives alike in the Congress voted against the foreign aid bill for a variety of reasons, and many of them are even supporting Treasury Secretary Connally's hard Texas power politics, not because they want to go isolationist or protectionist or particularly because they like Connally, but because they want to find a new system that will recognize the interdependence of the modern world and force all the trading nations to accept a more equal sharing of the burdens in what is obviously an unequal and dangerous confrontation with each other and with the hungry and embittered majority of the human race.

Stanley-Livingstone Saga Reaches Back A Century

WASHINGTON — One hundred years ago, on Nov. 10, 1871, Henry Morton Stanley found David Livingstone at Ujiji on Lake Tanganyika. Stanley and Livingstone. To many people they are only characters in a 1939 movie remembered mainly for its climactic line, "Dr. Livingstone, I presume." But the dramatic meeting between the American journalist and the Scottish explorer-missionary did more than provide one of the most famous newspaper scoops of all time. It also changed the course of African history.

By the mid-1860s, David Livingstone's journeys of discovery and his battle against the African slave trade had made him a hero in his native land. "So great, indeed was his fame among all classes of the British people," Sir Reginald Courland later wrote, "so powerful his influence on public opinion, and so far-reaching the effect of what he said and did on Africa that he must be ranked among the greatest of the great Victorians."

Thus, when Livingstone disappeared on his last African expedition, the proprietor of the New York Herald sensed a big story. James Gordon Bennett told his ace correspondent, Henry Morton Stanley, to spend as much of the paper's money as was needed, "but FIND LIVINGSTONE."

Stanley did, of course. He arrived at Livingstone's Lake Tanganyika camp on Nov. 10, 1871, with a large caravan of food, medicine, cooking utensils, cloth, and other necessities. For Livingstone, weakened by illness and malnutrition, it meant almost literally a new lease on life. His answer to Stanley's famous greeting was, the latter recorded, "Yes."

Stanley lived with Livingstone for four months, during which they explored the northern reaches of Lake Tanganyika. Livingstone, however, rejected his benefactor's pleas to leave Africa. Although in declining health, he was determined to stay until he had found the "fountains" — possibly the source of the Nile — described by Herodotus.

Livingstone's final trek took him south to Lake Bangweolo, which he had discovered on an earlier journey. It was there that he died, kneeling in prayer by his bed, on May 1, 1873. His body was returned to England and buried in Westminster Abbey.

But the story does not end there. On hearing of Livingstone's death, Stanley resolved to return to Africa to complete the explorer's work. Accordingly, he organized an Anglo-American expedition that spent almost three years exploring the heart of the continent.

Politically, the Stanley expedition led to the founding of the Congo Free State under Belgian auspices and to the partition of hitherto unappropriated regions of Africa among the nations of Western Europe. Stanley made two more trips to Africa, became a British subject, sat in Parliament, and was knighted. In number of geographical discoveries he, not Livingstone, is now acknowledged as the foremost explorer of Africa.

Livingstone would have applauded Stanley's discoveries if he had lived to hear of them. On the other hand, he no doubt would have opposed the carving of Africa by European imperialists. Livingstone wanted some European colonization of the continent, but only to discourage the slave trade. He lived by the precept he preached — "Fear God, and work hard."

ANTHONY LEWIS
Doctors Protest Charge Of Money-Making; Elements Of Greed Too Obvious To Ignore

LONDON — American doctors are an articulate group. That much is shown by the reaction to recent columns criticizing aspects of medicine in the United States. The doctors wrote, some in a defensive or abusive vein, but many in constructive disagreement.

Not surprisingly, they were especially irritated at the comment that too many American doctors care too much about money. For the medical profession to top all others in income, it was said, is evidence of a sick society. That phrasing was doubtless unduly provocative.

Doctors, and some of their wives, asked why people who had studied and trained for so long should not get the highest financial reward. Was it better to enrich pop singers, or athletes, or journalists? Dr. William A. Rolston of New Orleans wrote:

If the professions were be salaried in proportion to their value to humanity, as indeed they should be, it is logical to assume that the medical profession should be among the highest paid."

But America is not Erewhon, and men are not paid according to their social deserts. Among doctors, for example, the most highly trained may well be found in research work or teaching, at modest salaries.

No, the reason that doctors do so well in the United States (median income over $40,000 in 1969) is largely supply and demand. They control a scarce commodity desperately wanted by the consumer. And some — not a majority, but enough — are greedy in using their economic leverage.

What happened after Medicare began is no secret. Seeing that more money was going to be available, many doctors simply raised their fees. When a patient complained to one distinguished general practitioner, he replied that others were doing it and he might as well get his share. As a private British doctor, a Harley Street specialist, said to an American the other day: "There is too much commerce in your medicine."

Some American doctors said as much in writing here. Dr. Harry H. Gordon, of the Einstein College of Medicine in New York, wrote: "One point is critical — that so many physicians have adopted the mores of their affluent patients in pursuit of the dollar. There is too little sense of a calling, too little appreciation of the satisfactions that come from helping people."

Now in fact most American doctors are dedicated men and women who work immensely hard and long for whatever they earn. Too much moralizing about their income is not in order. But the elements of greed in the profession are still significant for a practical reason: The aim of assuring all Americans medical care without fear of bankruptcy — as the country now earnestly desires — cannot be achieved unless any new system modifies or limits the law of supply and demand in medical economics, including doctor fees.

The Medicare experience makes that clear. If the federal government were now to supply vast new funds for private medical care without any change in the system, the result would be to inflate costs enormously.

The doctors point out, fairly, that they are not the only cause of medical inflation by any means: hospital and drug and other costs mount, too. But taking one problem at a time, it is clear that any new federal program will have to take a new approach on doctors' fees. One possibility would be to provide fixed levels of compensation for doctors serving certain numbers of patients on a panel, as in Britain.

An English doctor now living in New York, Arnold Miles, raised a question about all this that many may ask. He wrote:

"In the U.S. a man is judged by, and lives for, material gain. Until the values of this society change, it is surely hypocritical to expect doctors voluntarily to be less materialistic than their neighbors. Dedication is not an accepted form of currency, so why should not the doctor live by the current ethic?"

Yes, the materialist values of our society ought to be questioned altogether, if that is what Dr. Miles means to suggest. There are enough horrors in the tax system to occupy reformers for a long time. But it is not unfair to begin with the area of medical care.

No society can be called civilized that allows the money ethic to dominate in matters of life and death. The United States, one way or another, is going to reconstruct its way of delivering medical care. And many doctors are coming to accept — as they did in Britain a generation ago — that the process will require a fresh social commitment from them.

The problem is not, in the end, whether it is right or wrong for doctors to earn more than other people. It is that American doctors have allowed their powerful spokesman, the American Medical Association, to make the mode of private practice and fees an obstacle to necessary change.

Embattled Miss World

Signs of "No More Miss World" and "Capitalism Breeds Sexploitation" will once more grace the front of London's serene Royal Albert Hall on the evening of Wednesday, Nov. 10, to protest the increasingly controversial Miss World contest. Members of the Women's Lib Movement, to whom Kate Millett's "Sexual Politics" is as a Bible, will be out in force—hurling everything from invective to stink bombs at the police who will be guarding the ceremonies.

Last year four women were brought to trial for endangering the contestants, for throwing smoke bombs, and for assaulting the Bobbies. During the trial at a Bow Street court, one of the women charged with offensive language suggested that while her behavior offended no one, there had been "plenty of evidence that a large number of women were insulted by the contest." One of the short-haired and braless defendants suggested that "the only offensive weapons we had were our voices and we still have those and intend to use them."

Charges By Colin Called Unfounded

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster County Commissioner Robert Colin's charges concerning operational procedures at Lancaster Manor were termed "as unusual, unfounded and irresponsible" Tuesday by Rex Earl of Colonial Homes which operates Lancaster Manor for the county.

In a prepared statement before the county board, Earl said that according to the opinion of Colin, completion of the audit of Lancaster Manor could show cause for a further investigation.

"The audit has been completed and every red cent of the county's money has been accounted for by Lancaster Manor and Colonial Homes, Inc.," he said.

Earl said that the auditor's office recommended that $200 petty cash fund be eliminated and that this has been done and the balance in the fund will be returned to the county.

He said that the "minor errors" in calculations on the depreciation schedules totaling $228.91 has been corrected and that the recommendation that a more sophisticated accounts receivable system be established is being studied to determine its feasibility.

Earl noted that Colin alleged that he called for a complete audit of Lancaster Manor by the state auditor's office but that Colin had made a request for the audit was denied by Francis Walls of the auditor's office.

"It should be obvious to all that Commissioner Colin had no information to justify calling a 'special audit' which was the routine audit that he wanted credit for calling. Again, his charges have been, as usual, unfounded and irresponsible," Earl said.

Commissioner William Grossman said that he felt Earl should be complimented because the state auditor's report "indicates that things were in pretty good shape," and that claims about the results of the audit "were pretty much unfounded."

In response to Earl's comments, Colin said he had a thick file to go through on Lancaster Manor but that he would "have an answer in about three days," in connection with Earl's statement about the audit.

Thirty-Five Residents Returned To Westview

Thirty-five of the 40 former Westview residents forced out of the facility by fire Sept. 24 have been moved back to Westview, it was reported Tuesday.

Lancaster County Welfare Director J. Earle Trabert told the commissioners that the 35 Westview people were moved Monday after a re-evaluation by physicians last week.

One of the former Westview residents is hospitalized, according to Trabert and one has been placed in a skilled nursing facility while the other three are remaining at Lancaster Manor where they all had been housed on an emergency basis since the fire.

Trabert said everything is in order for approval of a board and room license for Westview as soon as a stainless steel sink which has been ordered is installed.

The commissioners agreed that a re-evaluation of all Westview residents should be made periodically so that any needing nursing care may be moved into the proper facility.

Trabert said he was in the process of attempting to hire a licensed practical nurse for Westview as recommended earlier.

Commissioner Robert Colin said he was out at Lancaster Manor when the bus arrived to pick up the Westview people to return them to Westview and "I never saw such a happy group of people."

He said there were "very few dry eyes on the trip because they were so happy to get back to Westview."

Colin commended the new Lancaster Manor engineer, Eugene Hogan, who offered a driver and truck to haul some of the things which could not be put on the bus back to Westview.

However, he criticized other Lancaster Manor personnel for "not helping in any way" to move the Westview people out of Lancaster Manor.

Rex Earl of Colonial Homes which operates the Manor said that his people were not informed that the Westview people were moving out until they saw the bus drive up.

He said that Lancaster Manor residents were having to eat "left-overs" Tuesday because food had been planned for the Westview people on Monday since Lancaster Manor personnel were not informed of the move.

However, Trabert said that he had informed the head nurse at Lancaster Manor, Mrs. Patricia Cole, that the Westview people were being moved out on Monday.

Colin Objects To Bids On Drapes For Manor

Lancaster County Commissioner Robert Colin, who has openly pushed competitive bidding for county purchasing of most items, objected Tuesday to accepting the bids on draperies for Lancaster Manor and suggested "calling around" to see if there were other possible bids.

Rex Earl of Colonial Homes which operates Lancaster Manor for the county told the board that specifications were picked up by four prospective bidders but that only two bids were received after the notice to bidders was advertised for the statutory three weeks.

Colin said, "I can't imagine there aren't more people interested than this" and suggested that other possible bidders be called to see if they might be interested.

Commissioners Kenneth Bourne and William Grossman both indicated that since bids had been advertised and opened they didn't feel they could legally attempt to get further bids unless all bids were rejected and the bidding were started over.

With Colin voting against the motion, the other two commissioners accepted the low bid submitted and awarded the drapery contract to Rader's of Omaha which submitted a bid of $9,261.75.

The only other bid was $10,615.92 submitted by Brandeis.

In other business, the board by a vote of two to one appointed former commissioner Ralph Harlan of Hickman and Marlo Burg of Waverly to the City-County Air Pollution Appeals Board.

Colin, who had submitted the names of Burg and Richard Suiter of Hallam, objected to appointing Harlan stating that "I don't think Harlan is qualified" for the appointment.

Colin had made a motion which died for lack of a second that Burg and Suiter be appointed and then voted against the motion which passed.

Large Apartment Complex Planned In Sarpy County

Omaha (AP) — The largest Omaha-area apartment-type project in recent years, more than 1,000 two to four-bedroom condominiums, is planned for a site near Interstate 80 in northern Sarpy County.

Mill Valley Co., Inc., has asked the Sarpy County Planning Commission for rezoning which would permit the development on 225 acres. Joel Katleman, company president, has developed other apartment projects in the area.

When completed, the project is expected to cost about $35 million, engineers Elliott & Black, Inc., reported.

First to be built would be 1,000 condominiums which would be sold for slightly more than $30,000 each, the firm said. A 608 acre commercial site also is planned.

Ferguson Plans To Open Meeting Of 'Stockholders'

Democratic senatorial candidate Donald Ferguson of Lincoln will attend the first in a series of campaign "stockholders meetings" in North Platte Nov. 20.

Ferguson is financing his campaign through the sale of stock certificates in the "future of this state and nation." They serve as symbols of the type of campaign he intends to pursue, he said.

Commission Okays Program Funding

The Region II Crime Commission approved Tuesday an application for a $33,600 federal grant for continuation of the "resource officer program" with the schools in Lincoln and Lancaster County.

Under the special program, police officers and deputy sheriffs with particular qualifications in education are assigned as resource and liaison personnel to the city and county schools.

Approval of the application clears the way for its submission to the State Crime Commission for review.

The requested grant would cover a period from Feb. 1 through Aug. 31.

The commission also approved an application to pay the tuition of 64 law enforcement officers who are attending the University of Nebraska for specialized education in off-duty hours.

Tuition cost for the group for the 1971-72 school year was estimated at $18,000 by Charles Huff, the commissioner's executive secretary.

In other action the commission accepted the resignation of Ben Goble as a voting member. Goble tendered his resignation because of possible conflict of interest between his federally-funded position and membership on the commission.

The commission also received without taking action several recommendations from the Lincoln League of Women Voters regarding a correctional system separate and independent from law enforcement bodies.

The League urged the commission to appoint a committee on corrections to assist in developing a 24-hour correctional staff to be officed in the County City Jail Complex.

It also recommended the juvenile offenders should be referred without exception to Juvenile Court rather than the current system which permits the county attorney's office to refer some juvenile offenders to adult court.

Also proposed was a committee on research and statistics so that intelligent planning can begin for future correctional needs.

It was noted the present jail complex has twice reached capacity and there is a need to begin projecting its future use together with the possibility of regional jails, work farms or similar supplemental facilities.

Evidence Termed Sufficient, Though Thin, In Ortiz Case

By United Press International

The Nebraska Supreme Court was told Tuesday there was thin but sufficient evidence to convict Lawrence Ortiz of Omaha of first degree murder.

The statement was made by Asst. Atty. Gen. Calvin E. Robinson during oral arguments before the high court on an appeal of Ortiz' conviction from Buffalo County District Court.

Ortiz was convicted in the August 1970 death of Charlotte Elaine Whittington, whose body was found in a burning field near Elm Creek.

Buffalo County Public Defender Jeffrey L. Orr, representing Ortiz, said the last time Ortiz saw the woman, she was alive. He said the state failed to prove otherwise.

"There is not one shred of evidence to show purpose why Lawrence Ortiz would want to kill the decedent (Mrs. Whittington)," Orr said. "In fact, the state's evidence was contrary."

He said it was brought out during the trial that Ortiz wanted to marry her. Orr also said Mrs. Whittington was a "known narcotics user" and felt her life was in danger.

Truckers Get Freight Rate Hike Of 6%

The Nebraska Railway Commission Tuesday granted truckers a permanent 6% rate increase on most truck freight shipments within the state.

In effect, the decision continues in effect a temporary rate hike granted Aug. 10, just five days before President Nixon ordered a wage-price freeze.

The new permanent order allows a 6% boost on shipments weighing less thatn 10,000 pounds, and a 3% hike on those over 10,000 pounds. The earlier temporary order was for 6% in both categories.

Commission Chairman Eric Rasmussen said the order affects only Nebraska-based truckers handling general commodity items.

Curtis Backers Name Earl Luff Fund Chairman

Earl Luff of Lincoln Tuesday was named Lancaster County finance chairman of the Citizens for Curtis Committee.

The statewide committee, seeking funding for the 1972 re-election campaign of Sen. Carl Curtis, is headed by Lincoln insurance executive E. J. Faulkner.

Luff is president of Lincoln Steel Corporation.

Faulkner said the committee has "sufficient manpower and enthusiasm to encourage me to predict that this part of our campaign will be completed by the end of the year."

Hastings industrialist Hal Lainson is treasurer of the state committee.

Official Claims To Wheat Crop Reduces Prices

Pierre, S.D. (AP) — The president of the South Dakota Wheat Producers says record crops in America have had disastrous effects on markets and prices. Arvid Ambur of Presho said concern over the worlds' growing wheat supply will prompt discussion at the group's meeting in Pierre Saturday. He added that something must be done in Congress to give stability to the consumption-production situation.

Brauer Will Speak

S. H. Brauer, secretary of the Nebraska School Improvement Association, will speak at a meeting of the Lincoln Republican Women's Club at 1:30 p.m. Friday at the First Federal Savings and Loan Association, 1235 N.

Construction Of Power Buildings Will Begin Soon

Hastings (AP) — Construction of buildings for the Don Henry power center here are to begin at once with A. Borchman and Sons of Omaha in charge.

The firm was awarded the contract on a 5-1 vote of the Hastings City Council Monday night.

Last Oct. 11, the council overruled the recommendation of the Board of Public Works and awarded the contract to Kealey Construction Co. of Hastings on a higher bid than Borchman.

An attempt at last Tuesday's special City Council meeting to award the contract to Borchman was defeated for lack of a majority, but the council did rescind earlier actions.

The work will cost nearly $421,000, which is about $8,000 lower than the Kealey bid. General construction is expected to be completed early in 1972, with the new center to be in operation by next summer.

James Cancels Visits To Omaha

Omaha (AP) — Three Omaha appearances by a deputy secretary of defense, Brig. Gen. Daniel L. James, have been cancelled, Offutt Air Force Base officials said Tuesday.

Gen. James the only black general in the Air Force, was to hold a Thursday news conference, attend an Omaha Press Club luncheon and a Forgotten Americans Committee banquet on Thursday.

Offutt spokesmen said the Defense Department reported Gen. James' visit was cancelled becaue of official Defense Department business. The spokesman said the visit may be rescheduled at a later date.

Plant To Convert

Cleveland (UPI) — Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. says it will convert the westerly units of its Lake Shore Power Plant at Cleveland from coal to low-sulphur fuel oil at a cost of $12 million. The company said the conversion will enable the whole plant to comply with Cleveland's new air pollution code.

Courses Developed For Tech College Instructor

Cooperation between the Lincoln Technical Community College and the University of Nebraska Teachers College is leading to development of teacher training courses for tech colleges instructors, the college board was told Tuesday.

"We think this is a tremendous breakthrough," said Robert Glenn of the tech staff.

At the board's monthly meeting, Glenn outlined the new program, which he said will begin next semester.

Statutory Requirement

He said the effort to establish a program for tech college instructors was a response to statutory requirements for teacher training and to the fact that most Teachers College courses "are geared to elementary and secondary teachers."

"We wanted the university to work with the person teaching in adult ed," Glenn told the board, which also serves as the board for the Lincoln Public Schools.

He noted that many teachers come to the college with the required field experience in their occupational specialities, but with little classroom work in education.

Committee Established

A Teachers College steering committee has been established, Glenn said, to draw up plans for the program.

In other matters, the board heard a report on renovation of a leased warehouse to be used for tech college programs in industrial technology and okayed consolidation of the tech college and Manpower automotive programs in the facility.

The facility, a former trucking warehouse on North 17th Street near the NU campus, is being leased by the college.

Expansion Asked

The board was told the State Departments of Education and Labor had asked the Manpower training program to expand the automotive programs from service-only orientation to include internal engine mechanics.

The state will pay the $6,000 necessary for the program expansion and consolidation, and the state will refer students to the program here.

The board was also told the Manpower program had been awarded a certificate of merit from the regional U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare office for its building maintenance program.

Darrell Grell, director of Manpower's skills center, said HEW noted that 57% of the program's trainees are handicapped, and that 71% are placed in training-related jobs.

Blue Valley Advisory Board Is Being Planned

The formation of a Blue River Valley Basin Advisory Board made up of residents of the basin area is being planned by the board of directors of Vision-17, the economic development organization for southeast Nebraska.

Jack Wolken of Tecumseh, Vision-17 president, said the board is taking action after adopting the problem of flood control and water retention in the Blue Basin as a key item in its 1972 program.

George H. Frye, Vision-17 regional coordinator, said the organization became involved following a series of meetings with representatives of the Corps of Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation and basin area citizens.

Frye said residents report a need for flood control and water for irrigation. He said the initial advisory board will consist of two persons from each from Butler, Gage, Saline and Seward Counties.

4-H Development Group Elects Council Officers

The Nebraska Association for 4-H Development at their annual business meeting here elected officers and new members of their executive council.

Two new members were elected to serve on the association's executive council for three year terms. They are State Senator Wayne Ziebarth of Wilcox and Joe Hunckfeldt, president of the Gering National Bank at Gering. The two replaced Joel Andrews of Alliance and Jack Quackenbush of Beatrice, whose terms expired.

The association re-elected three officers: John R. Cooper of Humboldt, president and also a holdover member on the executive council; Dr. John L. Adams, director of the Agricultural Extension Service at the University of Nebraska, vice president; and state 4-H Leader W. M. Antes, secretary-treasurer.

The association is made up of persons interested in the 4-H program in Nebraska. The group cooperates with various individuals and organizations to provide financial and organizational assistance for the advancement of the 4-H club work in Nebraska.

Union Supports Don Ferguson For Senate

North Platte (UPI) — Local 7406 of the Communications Workers of America (AFL-CIO) announced Tuesday they would support Donald Ferguson, Lincoln, for the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator.

The local made the announcement in a statement issued here. Members of the local are from North Platte, Gothenburg, Lexington, Minden, McCook, Oxford and Trenton.

Ferguson has announced he will hold his first "stockholders'" meeting here Nov. 20, 7:30 p.m.

The candidate, one of four so far announced, said he planned to finance his campaign through sale of stock certificates.

Tipping Like Capitalists, Chinese Come To U.N. For First Time

United Nations (UPI) —The Communist Chinese came to the United Nations as a member for the first time Tuesday, tipping like capitalists but lunching on the blueplate special.

After paying for the American breakfast with a $100 bill, the six-man advance party from Peking had an economy lunch at the Roosevelt, a midtown hotel frequented by businessmen.

The Chinese also got their first tour of the skyscraper U.N. headquarters, received a warm greeting from normally reserved diplomats, saw some of New York from a red limousine and began clearing the way for Thursday's arrival of the full 46-man delegation.

People who attended the Chinese said they were pleasant and easy to deal with. Jack Mauk, the chauffeur who drove them to the U.N., said they inquired whether he had had a good night's sleep.

Mainland China, which has not had an official representative at the U.N. since it was denounced as an aggressor country at the start of the Korean War, was voted membership last month in both the General Assembly and the Security Council.

The full delegation, headed by Vice Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua, will arrive in two groups Thursday from Paris.

A six-man advance party headed by former newsman Kao Liang is in charge of preparations: securing passes, confirming accreditation, making arrangements for seating and other routine matters.

Staying At Hotel

The advance crew is staying at the Roosevelt, a 50-year-old hotel within easy walking distance of the U.N. headquarters in midtown Manhattan.

The six breakfasted in the hotel coffee shop on orange juice, toast, tea and three bacon and three sausage omelets.

They paid with a $100 bill and waitress Edna Flora said they left a "good tip."

Kao, Hain-hsi and Lin Chiao-sin then made their first trip to the United Nations while Chia Tzu-cheng, Tien Jung-tsein and Liu Chen-piao stayed at the hotel.

After a tour of the U.N. building and a series of meetings with protocol, security and public relations people, the three visited the delegates entrance where they were warmly greeted by Romanian Ambassador Gheorghi Diaconescu, a strong supporter of Communist China's admission to the world body.

Later, sipping coffee in comfortable chairs and a couch around a low, wooden table in the North Delegates Lounge, the three exchanged greetings with members who voted for their admission and chatted with Albanian Ambassador Sami Boholli and four other members of the Albanian mission.

Albania sponsored the resolution admitting Communist China and is the unofficial Chinese host.

No members of the United States delegation were on hand to greet the Chinese.

The three who visited the United Nations, accompanied by Petraq Pojani, counsellor to the Albanian delegation, joined the other three for lunch in the Roosevelt restaurant.

Five of the Chinese and Pojoni ordered grilled breast of chicken with madeira sauce, risole potatoes and tiny Belgian carrots — at $2.95 the least expensive item on the menu.

The sixth Chinese had a minute steak sandwich with fried potatoes ($5.50). They all had ice cream (90 cents) for dessert.

Senators To Debate On Aid Bill

Washington (AP) — The Senate began its foreign aid debate all over again Tuesday on a $2.3-billion program Secretary of State William P. Rogers termed inadequate.

While Republican leaders discussed an effort to get more money, Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., called the program "a grab bag for everyone but the American people who foot the bill." Fulbright said there should be more cuts.

Rogers and Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird took the administration's case for foreign aid to a meeting with Republican senators. Rogers said he will be talking to some Democrats, too, as the Senate acts again on the program it voted to kill Oct. 29.

The House is to take up Wednesday a joint resolution including authority for the Agency for International Development to keep spending money, at a rate of about $2.6 billion a year after Nov. 15, when current spending authority expires.

Mansfield To Oppose

But Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said he will oppose any such resolution until Congress has completed action on legislation authorizing the program.

The Senate agreed to spend six hours on each of two foreign-aid bills, a $1.1 billion economic assistance measure, and a military aid program of just under $1.2 billion.

On that timetable, senate action would be completed by the end of the week.

Recommend Strongly

"I recommend very strongly that a continuing resolution be passed by the Congress," Rogers said. The resolution would be temporary, extending no longer than the current session of Congress.

"I think there is an understanding that defeat of this bill would be a catastrophe for the foreign policy of the United States," Rogers said.

Laird, just back from South Vietnam, was quoted by Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., as having said the Saigon government is in "a state of shock" at the prospect of losing U.S. assistance.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said there will be an effort to amend the bills and put back some of the money the Senate Foreign Relations Committee cut. Scott said that might mean a Senate bill in the neighborhood of $2.6 billion.

WSCS Ends Convention At Hastings

Hastings (AP) — The Women's Society of Christian Service of the United Methodist Church concluded its state convention Tuesday with election of officers.

Mrs. John Cooper of Adams was elected vice president and Mrs. Lester Boilsen of Murdock was named secretary. Mrs. Norman C. Crounse of Chester is treasurer and assistant treasurer is Mrs. Harvey Brammeier of Rising City.

Named committee chairmen were Mrs. Don Hickman of Bushnell, Christian social relations; Mrs. Theodore Smith of Chappell, missionary education; Mrs. Arthur Cognard of Omaha, nominations; and Miss Annie Laurie Smith of Lincoln, conference guild.

Mrs. Clyde Norris of Lincoln will serve the second year of her two year term.

Murder Case Goes To Jury

By VIRGIL FALLOON
Star Staff Writer

A Lancaster District Court jury adjourned deliberations Tuesday without reaching a verdict in the trial of Mrs. Judy L. Sturm, charged with second-degree murder in the shotgun slaying of her husband, Harvey.

The jury of eight women and four men had been instructed by District Judge William Hastings they could separate to their homes at 6 a.m. if they were unable to reach a verdict and resume deliberation Wednesday at 9 a.m.

He said attorneys in the case had agreed the jury need not be sequestered overnight, which is the usual procedure in murder cases.

The seven-day trial of the 28-year-old mother of two children went to the jury at 11:56 a.m. Tuesday following final arguments by attorneys for the state and defense and instructions by the court.

Judge Hastings instructed the jurors they could return one of three possible verdicts: guilty of second-degree murder, guilty of manslaughter, or not guilty (acquittal).

In closing arguments, the state's attorneys charged that Mrs. Sturm "intentionally and maliciously" but "without premeditation" killed her 31-year-old husband.

'Overcome By Terror

Defense attorneys characterized Mrs. Sturm as "so overcome by terror and fear by acts of violence of her husband that she acted without reasoning in shooting to protect herself and children."

County Atty. Paul Douglas told the jurors that the defense's claim of "self defense is a smoke screen."

"Is it reasonable that retaliation for a bruise on the lip should be two shotgun holes while sleeping,'' asked Douglas.

The prosecutor also noted Mrs. Sturm had told police officers she had "gotten two shells from the hunting vest because if she missed him with the first one, she'd get him with the second."

'No Timid Little Girl'

"Mrs. Sturm is not the timid little girl the defense would have you believe," said Douglas, "but a woman who liked hunting and stock-car racing."

But, Public Defender T. Clement Gaughan said Mrs. Sturm had "unstintingly accepted her lot (with Harvey Sturm) until the beatings got so severe that she could no longer reason."

He pictured Mr. Sturm, a former Marine, as a "man of violence," who would "stay out late at night drinking" and "didn't seem to care whether he made a living for his family or not."

Not Disputed

Neither the defense or prosecution disputed evidence that Mrs. Sturm shot her husband in the early morning hours of Sept. 18 at their 2740 Arlington home after Mr. Sturm returned home about 2 a.m.

Trial evidence indicated Mr. Sturm had beaten his wife when she asked where he had been, jerked a telephone from the wall and threaten to strangle her with the cord if she called police, and had broken and thrown various items in the house. While the prosecution contended Mrs. Sturm deliberately returned upstairs with a loaded shotgun to shoot her sleeping husband, the defense maintained she had "loaded the gun for her selfprotection" and only went upstairs when she heard her baby cry and thought her husband was moving around.

'Hysterical Reaction'

Psychiatric testimony in the case characterized Mrs. Sturm's personality as "emotionally dependent upon the love of another (her husband)," but tending toward "hysterical reaction under situational stress."

A defense psychiatrist indicated Mrs. Sturm was so overcome by fear of her husband on the fatal night that she was incapable of acting with reason, but a prosecution psychiatrist testified nothing in her personality would have prevented her from "planning and carrying out a malicious act."

"Send Judy Sturm back to her children," said Gaughan. He reminded the jury of testimony by Harvey Sturm's mother that she didn't feel her daughter-in-law should be punished for her son's death.

USED HOUSES . . . ready for buyer on Verdell Hornbacher's lot.

Mover Opens Used House Lot

By SAM THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

York — Why spend a bundle on a brand new home when you can pick up a vacant farmhouse for a pittance?

Ah, but all too often a farmhouse comes with a farm attached and included in the price. That's not the case, however, at Virtuous Verdell Hornbacher's used house lot.

Hornbacher, a house mover, says that dealing in used houses was a natural outgrowth of his profession. "People would always ask me where to find buildings for sale. I thought I might as well buy used buildings and display them."

Hence the row of houses propped up on iron beams out behind Hornbacher's own farmhouse a mile south of York. There are no cigar-chewing salesmen or strings of light bulbs, but otherwise the lot is a sort of domiciliary duplicate of an auto dealer's used car lot.

The models may range from time-worn but serviceable to late-model, one-owner homes. Browse around the lot; shop the sizes, styles and colors. Even step inside — note the custom trim, visibility, elbow room. Remember, the price can't be beat — and the only owner was a spinster Sunday School teahcer who lived alone with her cat and geraniums.

Actually, Hornbacher's "sell" isn't as hard as that, and he doesn't do what a car dealer would call a volume business. "Houses come up for sale quite often," he explains, "but it's not too often they're in livable condition."

But if purchases are slow, sales are doing well — of the nine houses Hornbacher has bought since he diversified a year ago, six have found new owners and locations, and the seventh is sold and waiting to be moved.

Says Hornbacher: "It's not a bad busniess."

Peterson's Senate Bid Is Now Official

. . . Economic Issues Stressed

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Emphasizing the largely economic issues which face the nation in the coming decade, Wallace Peterson of Lincoln Tuesday announced his candidacy for the 1972 Democratic senatorial nomination.

Peterson, 50, chairman of the University of Nebraska's Department of Economics, will be making his second bid for the Democratic nomination.

In 1970, he finished second in a three-man contest.

Peterson is the fourth Democrat to enter the primary race for nomination to the Senate seat now held by Republican Carl Curtis.

At a series of press conferences in Omaha, Lincoln and Hastings, Peterson outlined a number of campaign positions:

—tax reform that would "eliminate inflation-prone payroll taxes."

—a system of deferred compensation to fight inflation.

—a diversified program for rural economic development and an urban bank system for financing major improvements in the cities.

—a new type of "GI Bill" for unskilled workers and "an educational bank" for post-high school education.

—innovation in home financing to stimulate home ownership and construction.

—a farm program based on a national commitment to the family farm.

—measures to "end the march toward corporate socialism by putting competition back into the American economy."

On the latter point, Peterson suggested "dissolving some corporate giants and doing something about merger movements."

Peterson pledged to work for government which will "tell its citizens the truth about what it is doing in spite of political cost or embarrassment."

As for Vietnam and the military, he said, "the war should end, along with the military draft which disrupts young lives in unfair fashion and does violence to our finest traditions."

Twice alluding to the late Sen. George W. Norris, Peterson said he would like to follow his lead in the "fight for justice and a fair share of the good things of life for all Americans."

In answer to newsmen's questions, Peterson said he was "completely unknown politically" in 1970 when he lost his first primary bid, and he hopes he has since made "some progress" in overcoming that liability.

This campaign will also be "full-time," unlike the 1970 primary campaign, he noted.

Peterson will take a leave of absence without pay from the university, probably "early in the second semester" which begins next January.

"Nebraska needs a new senator with the experience and vision to offer the state an opportunity for creative leadership in Washington," Peterson said.

As for the nation, he said, "the great challenge is to prove that our political system can achieve peaceful change with justice for all citizens."

Fireman's Efforts Fail To Save Child

Omaha (AP) — A desperate effort by Fireman Virgil Liss after relatives and neighbors had been driven from a burning home failed to save the life of 2-year-old Michael Larson Tuesday.

Michael and his 18-month-old brother Gene, were trapped by fire in the second floor apartment of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Larson.

Mrs. Larson was washing clothes when a neighbor, Al Oltman, noticed the smoke pouring from the room. He alerted Mrs. Larson's father, Mike Signorile, who lives on the first floor and together they dashed up the back stairs while Mrs. Oltman called firemen.

"It was so full of smoke we couldn't get in very far," Oltman said. "We called for the boys and the little one, Gene came out."

He said they tried to push forward but were driven back by the flames and smoke.

Liss said when he and other firemen left the station they knew there were children trapped in the home.

He dashed into the apartment wearing a mask, and turned a couch upside down, thinking Mickey may have crawled under it for safety.

"Then somebody — I don't know who — hollered to go the other way," he said. "It was then I found a closet, opened the door and there was the boy."

He said he ran downstairs and began mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

"As far as we could tell the child was breathing by the time the rescue squad arrived," he said. But the boy was dead on arrival at a hospital.

District Chief Clarence Thomas said the blaze apparently started in a chair in the bedroom, but the cause has not been determined. Mrs. Larson said the child had been alone for a brief time.

Solid, Musicianly Effort Provided By Symphony

By EARL DYER
Star Staff Writer

Works of four of the great orchestral conductors — Berlioz, Haydn, Hindemith and Dvorak — made up the program Tuesday night as the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra provided solid musicianly performances for its first concert of the season without outside soloists.

Most pleasant was a Haydn number — the Sinfonie Concertante in B-flat major — for which the soloists were four of the principal players of the orchestra: Concertmaster Arnold Schatz, cellist Carol Work, oboist Robert Jenkins and bassoonist Gary Echols.

It is a composition in which Haydn uses all possible combinations of the four solo instruments with orchestra: solos featuring each of the four instruments, duets with each playing with each of the others, the quartet alone, and the quartet with the orchestra. It gave these four Lincoln regulars a chance to display the fine musicianship that has added so much to the orchestra's concerts.

The various combinations were especially noteworthy for the clear and sweet tones of Schatz' violin and Jenkins' oboe and the deeper and richer voices of Mrs. Work's cello and Echols' bassoon. All gave substantial performances, although the work gave better display to the violinist and oboist, both of whom turned in especially satisfying performances.

In all of this the orchestra provided a commendable accompaniment, responsive to Conductor Leo Kopp and with a light but still full-voiced tone suitable to the composition.

The concert opened with a rousing performance of the popular Berlioz work, the "Roman Carnival" Overture, followed by the Haydn.

After intermission came Hindemith's Nobilissima Visione, in which the string sections particularly provided a fine sound and which ended with a set of magnificent chords dominated by the brass.

For the final number, Conductor Leo Kopp had chosen Dvorak's Scherzo Capriccioso, Op. 66, a lighthearted work but still one with substantial interest as a serious orchestra piece, using the various sections and many brief solo parts for varied and interesting effects.

And for an encore — provided despite the fact that the applause seemed less than overwhelming — the orchestra did the lively and light march from Prokofief's "The Love For Three Oranges."

All in all, it was a satisfying concert without either startlingly good or disfiguringly bad portions — a concert which displayed sound musicianship if not great brilliance.

John P. Mainelli, 77, Dies; St. Marys College Leader

Omaha (AP) — John P. Mainelli, 77, president emeritus of the College of St. Marys, died at his Omaha home Tuesday.

Mainelli was president and founder of Mainelli Construction Co., a member of the Board of Regents of the College of St. Marys; president of the Boys Town Boosters Club and past board member of the South Omaha bank.

Mainelli was involved in numerous local charitable efforts and served as national president of Unico, an Italian-American service organization.

He did battle with the Internal Revenue Service and was fined $7,500 and costs on two counts of income tax evasion in 1955. He had pleaded no defense to two of six counts and the other four had been dismissed. The amount allegedly evaded on the two counts a totaled $45,897.

The federal government contended that Mainelli owed $179,517 in back taxes for 1947 through 1952 and an additional $141,150 in penalties. The claim was reportedly settled for $228,000 in 1958.

Survivors include his widow, Anne; sons, John C. Robert J., James T. and the Rev. Vincent P., all of Omaha, and the Rev. Eugene A. of Chicago; a daughter, Mrs. Matthew Vidaver of San Francisco and brothers Leo, James and William of Omaha and Peter of Los Angeles.

Funeral services will be at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at John A. Gentleman Mortuary's Westside Chapel and at 10 a.m. at Christ the King Catholic Church. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Frank Says Potassium Not Needed

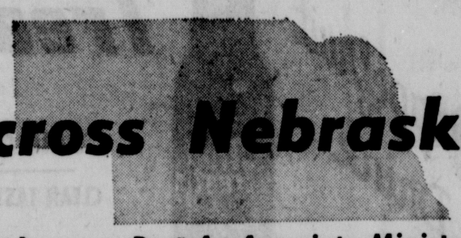

Clay Center (AP) — Most of the $3 million spent by Nebraska farmers in 1969 for potassium fertilizer was wasted, University of Nebraska Extension Agronomist Dr. Kenneth Frank said Tuesday.

Frank made the observation in discussing an extension fertilizer experiment with potassium and magnesium during a meeting of college of agriculture scientists.

Most Nebraska soils have a plentiful supply of potassium and magnesium, he said, explaining that in addition, irrigation water in south central water usually contains all the needed amounts of potassium.

Soil test analyses for potassium in 19 south central counties shows more than adequate amounts of potassium in 97% of the farm fields, Frank said.

States Are Told To File Land Settlement Views

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court Tuesday gave Nebraska and Iowa 45 days to file their views on a proposed settlement of a land ownership dispute involving more than 14,000 acres along the Missouri River.

The states will respond to a proposal by Joseph P. Willson of Smethport, Pa., a retired U.S. District Court judge, who took testimony in the eight-year-old case. His report was ordered filed in the high court.

The problem arose because of the river's habit of changing course when the flow of water increased through the wide valley on the Nebraska-Iowa border. The channel has stablized since the Army engineers built dams on the upper reaches of the river.

A 1943 compact between the two states placed the official boundary in the middle of the river. the compact stipulated that individual titles good before that time in one state would be honored in the other if an owner found his land had shifted to another state as a result of the agreement.

But differences in the title laws of the two states still presented problems. . .Under Nebraska law, ownership of land on the riverbank extends to the middle of the stream. But under Iowa law, private ownership stops at the high water mark. No Iowan may own land that arises as an island.

Willson recommended that ownership of lands developed before 1943 either be acknowledged the property if Nebrakans or be determined under Nebraska law with Iowa having an opportunity to contest the titles. Two tracts — Nottleman's and Schenel's Islands — he would award to their Nebraska owners.

All this acreage is generally south of Omaha.

Lands north of Omaha, which have developed since 1943, would be settled under the law of the state where they formed.

Pollution Control Deadline Is Set For Dec. 31, 1972

The deadline for completion of Nebraska's agricultural pollution abatement program is Dec. 31, 1972.

It was erroneously reported in the Lincoln Star Monday that the date was Dec. 1, 1971.

A spokesman for the Nebraska Department of Environmental Control explained that the date is only a goal for completion of the state's program and that it does not allow pollution of a stream until Dec. 31, 1972. "Any feedlot operator found to be polluting a stream will have to be stopped immediately. The same thing is true of any industry or other soure of pollution," he said.

POSTCARD by Stan Kleinfeld

The bull fight season is in the spring. The top of it is in March. But at this time of year we get the beginners — sometimes called "debutantes."

These are the young men who yearn to be another Manolete. A new Joselito.

Their eyes fill when they hear the band play: "The Virgin of the Macarena." They are courageous and ambitious.

But like pro ball, you need experience. And bull fighting is a game where you can't make a little mistake.

The Madrid ring is a grand affair. Red stone arches. Tiers of seats rising like a colosseum—which it is, for Spain was a Roman outpost. Three Roman emperors were born near Seville.

Most Americans like the ring and the pageantry. But they don't dig the Spanish emotion. They would like to give the bull a more even chance. Maybe like letting him stick banderillo darts in the bullfighter.

There's a little bar down under the stands. After a couple of bulls, you find some Americans down there discussing the chances of the Firty-niners.

They get quite emotional about it.

☆ ☆ ☆

In these beginner fights, the bull has quite a good chance. One boy was gored the other day at Linares — the same ring where the Miura bull killed Manolete.

When a bullfighter is thrown up for grabs, it makes the Americans happy.

The part the Americans don't like is when the picadors—padded and on horseback—stick the spear in the neck of the charging bull.

The idea of this is to weaken the bull's neck muscles. To keep his head low. Matadors cannot fight a bull who has not been piced.

He must be piced just so much—a delicate balance. If the picador nails him too hard, the bull does not have a good chance and the crowd boos.

If they get really mad, they throw their seat cushions.

The Madrid papers write florid stories of the fights.

"Jimenez was badly hurt by the horn. But this man of Andalusia, a truly brave and honest bullfighter, insisted on getting up. He brushed everybody aside and seizing the sword, he finished off the animal whom he had fought so perfectly and who had gored him so treacherously."

(Ah, there are sports writers everywhere!)

☆ ☆ ☆

What this idiot Jimenz did was cape the bull around, then he turned his back on him. Showing the crowd he had dominated the animal and his contempt for him.

While he was making this grandstand play, the bull simply walked up behind him and stuck his horn in him.

Jimenez will live. But he will eat standing up for quite awhile.

☆ ☆ ☆

Though the bull fights are Little League, the weather for watching them is splendid. October and November are Madrid's best months. The summers are frightfully hot; the winters would chill a well digger.

Futbol — soccer — is tremendously popular here as it is all over Europe.

The Spanish have seen our why Americans get emotional about it.

The Spanish do not like boxing either. A Madrileno said: "I saw a boxing match when I was in New York. At Madison Square Garden. I would never go again."

☆ ☆ ☆

He said he watched two fights. Then he went out and had a drink at the bar in the lobby. (Like the Americans who go under the bullfights stands here.)

He said: "You see, the Spanish do not like brutal sports."

Engineering 'Proteges' Announced

Twelve students in the College of Engineering and Architecture at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln have begun a year-long "protege" association with an equal number of professionals working in the fields in which the students are studying.

The professional engineers will spend time periodically with the engineering students, showing them the practical operational aspects of engineering.

The professionals will return to the campus in April during Engineers Week as guests of their student "proteges".

The "protege" project is sponsored by the Engineering Executive Board of the College.

The participants, area of engineering, students and professionals are:

Agricultural Engineering — Steve Rein of Scottsbluff and Leroy Thom, T-L Irrigation Co., Hastings; Tim Jacobsen of St. Edward and Howard Hogan, Western Land Roller, Hastings.

Foreign Trade Vital Job Factor

Washington — In terms of employment, every $1 billion worth of goods and services the United States exports supports about 100,000 jobs.

Combined with the employment involved in imports, total jobs related to foreign trade range up to 4.5 million—more than the number of people over age 15 working on farms.

CARMICHAEL

Bohn Is Winner Of $500 Stipend

A freshman in the College of Engineering and Architecture at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has been awarded the $500 New Holland Co. Scholarship.

Recipient of the stipend is Lonnie Lunn Bohn, son of Mr. Adolph C. Bohn of Ravenna.

For real estate values, check with Cancer. For what's happening in the theater, dial Leo. For beauty tips, Libra is right there; for investment potential, Scorpio can fill the bill. For a psychic demonstration don't overlook Pisces.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be discriminating. You will have freedom of choice. Choose quality. Bypass apparent easy way. Adhere to basic principles. Attention now to details is essential. Observe — rectify errors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on home, end of matters, dealings with those with strong viewpoints. You may find yourself slightly out of sync. Key is to ride with tide. Listen, observe and gather knowledge. Don't press.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Short journeys, unusual dealings with relatives — these are spotlighted. Perceive moods and needs. Realize many around you now are supersensitive. Sense of humor can be great aid.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You get paid for efforts. Income increases, materially and in psychic sense. Means you gain greater satisfaction. Good chance now to add to possessions. Collect debts. Stand up for rights.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lunar cycle is such that circumstances turn in your favor. You gain recognition in areas previously taken for granted. Appeal widens; advertise and publicize. Take initiative with original approach.

Top Court Makes Jolley Man Without A Country

Washington (AP) — Thomas Glenn Jolley, a modern man without a country, may have reached the end of the road in his fight to remain in the United States.

The 27-year-old North Carolina native who renounced his citizenship in Canada in 1967 to escape the draft did not win a single vote in the Supreme Court Tuesday on his appeal for a hearing. He faces deportation within 90 days — but to where?

Jolley, now working as a news reporter in Tallahassee, Fla., never applied for Canadian citizenship and Canada has no legal obligation to take him back. An Immigration and Naturalization Service spokesman said Canada will be asked to allow Jolley to live there.

If Canada agrees, said chief counsel Charles Gordon of the Immigration Service, then Jolley will cross the border voluntarily or be forced to go there. If Canada refuses, Gordon said, "We will have to find a country that will accept him."

The court made no comment on several claims raised by Jolley's lawyers in an effort to avert deportation. Their main point was that he did not give up his citizenship voluntarily since he renounced it to avoid Army service.

When the news reached Jolley in Tallahassee he said he was not surprised and that he doesn't know what legal avenues remain open. He said he wants to remain in the United States and he still might have a chance if no country can be found to accept him.

In other actions, the court shored up the rights of men and women to be treated equally on the job. In one case the justices let stand a ruling that Pan American World Airways must consider men for stewards. In a second case, the court refused to review a ruling — and thus let it stand — that a South Bend, Ind., brewery cannot force women to retire at 62 while allowing men to work until they are 65.

The justices turned down an appeal by Gov. George Wallace of Alabama attacking the exemption of "superficially charitable, religious, educational or scientific" organizations from the federal income tax.

Wallace argued that groups he described as the "pro-Viet Cong American Friends Service Committee" and the "leftist Urban League" are tax shelters for the wealthy few.

House Passes Pesticide Bill

Washington (AP) — The House passed 288 to 91 a pesticides-control bill Tuesday after crushing several proposed changes that environmentalists said were crucial to creating effective new legislation.

A series of amendments offered by Rep. John G. Dow, D-N..Y, and his supporters, was rejected as the House went along with the bill approved by its Agriculture Committee.

A major revision, endorsed by Agriculture Committee Chairman H. R. Poage, D-Tex., to permit states to impose whatever additional restrictions they wish on all pesticides, was approved, 167 to 56. The original committee bill would have pre-empted the power of states to put more restrictions on what would be designated as general-use pesticides.

Poage, describing the bill as a compromise of views offered by both sides, said the legislation would give current law a full overhaul and would grant the Environmental Protection Agency vast new powers over makers, distributors and users of pesticides — covering everything from farm products, except fertilizers, to insecticide sprays used in homes.

Ex-Convict Gives Up; Rape, Kidnaping, Assault Charged

Concord, Calif. (UPI) — A pint-sized ex-convict surrendered to police Tuesday and freed a 15-year-old girl kidnaped two days ago in a wild melee in which two persons were shot.

Pleasant Hill, Calif., Police Chief Edward S. Kreins said Marvin Joseph Pontarelli, 29, originally from Washington State, first threatened to kill pretty blonde Debbie Devore after police surrounded a rented home in Concord where she was held.

The suspect released her and surrendered after two hours of "soft dialogue" with Kreins, the girl and her father.

Pontarelli, who was described by Kreins as standing five-feet-six and weighing 140 pounds, was charged with kidnaping, two counts of attempted murder, two counts of assault with a deadly weapon, burglary, and three counts of rape.

Dragged From Home

The teen-aged girl was dragged early Sunday morning from the Pleasant Hill home of Mr. and Mrs. John Whitlow, where she had gone to spend the night with the couple's daughter, Susan, also 15.

The kidnaper slugged Miss Whitlow on the head with a pistol and shot her father, John, 56, and her mother, Doris, 55, before escaping out a patio door. The Whitlows' wounds were not serious.

Kreins said the suspect "saw the girls at a carnival Saturday night, followed them home, and was in the house for an hour while everybody was asleep before he made his move."

As the kidnaper fled with his victim, a police car gave chase but the patrolman lost control and smashed into a highway divider. However, the description of the suspect's new red Mustang helped police find him Monday night.

'Heard Girl Holler'

When 30 police officers, including FBI agents and Concord and Pleasant Hill policemen, arrived at the home leased by Pontarelli, "we heard the girl holler that she was upstairs," Kreins said. "He (the suspect) said he had a gun on her and would kill her if the police came in.

"The girl apparently had good rapport with him and was able to talk with him," Kreins said. Her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Devore, arrived and the father also talked to the kidnaper.

ICC Suspends Rail Freight Hike

Washington (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission said Tuesday it has suspended railroad rate increases it had approved for after Phase 1 of the wage-price freeze.

ICC Chairman George Stafford said in a statement only the Cost of Living Council can modify the commission's ruling.

All increases in rates and charges scheduled to become effective after Nov. 13 have been suspended.

Funds Released For Projects In Nebraska

WASHINGTON (AP) — A total of $8.3 million, previously appropriated by Congress for fiscal 1972 which ends next June 30, was released by the Office of Management and Budget Tuesday for projects in or affecting Nebraska.

Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., said the funds include $750,000 as a start toward relocating the tiny community of Niobrara which is slowly being inundated by rising water tables. The total cost of the Niobrara relocation has been estimated at $7.8 million. The Niobrara project will be handled by the Corps of Engineers.

Other construction funds released Tuesday include $2 million to the Corps of Engineers for use in the Papio Creek flood control and recreation project in the Omaha area. Total cost of that project, which includes construction of 21 dams, has been estimated at $38 million. A total of $1,310,000 was assigned to that project in the last fiscal year.

The Bureau of Reclamation received $400,000 for use in the Mid-State Reclamation Project in central Nebraska.

And the Corps of Engineers received $2,250,000 for levy improvements and $2,900,000 for work in improving a nine-foot navigational channel on the Missouri River from Sioux City, Iowa, to its mouth. Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri are affected by that project, Curtis said.

Definition Of Sub-Standard Housing Needed

The State Housing Advisory Council decided Tuesday a definition of sub-standard housing should be established.

Don Sievers, chairman of the seven-member advisory unit, said it was felt the definition would be particularly useful by such agencies as welfare.

"They (the welfare department) know, for instance, that in effect they are subsidizing sub-standard housing in some cases," he said, "but so far no definition has been established to pinpoint what is below-standard."

The council was created last month by Gov. J. J. Exon and the meeting Tuesday was its first. It was created at the same time the governor released the second part of a statewide housing study.

Sievers said the council also decided to investigate the possibility of adding more members. The council is made up of representatives from various state agencies.

Exon said its purpose would be to define the role government would play in the housing field.

Sievers is employed by the State Department of Economic Development.

Muskie Claims Nixon Plays Pollution Politics

Portland, Ore. (AP) — Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, said Tuesday that the Nixon adminstration "is using indirect behind-the-scenes pressure in the House to dilute the water pollution bill that was passed unanimously by the Senate."

Muskie said the President is now opposing the bill either because of Muskie's identification with it or because he "doesn't have the environmental backbone to support a tough bill."

Muskie spoke at an airport news conference on his two day political swing through Oregon.

Feeling Pressure

He said that when the bill was before the Senate, "the administration at no point undertook to make a case against it. Whatever its doubts, they have never been stated." Muskie said Nixon is feeling pressure from industry.

"We must force the administration to say whether it is opposed and why it is opposed," he said.

Muskie, now the leading Democratic presidential candidate in several Oregon polls, attacked the Nixon economic record in an address to 200 persons at a coffee party in the lumber port of Coos Bay.

Inflation Hit

He said that during the Nixon administration, unemployment has increased from 3.2 to more than 6%, inflation from 4.5 to 6.3%, and the balance of payments from an annual surplus of $1.6 billion to a deficit of $13 billion.

"That is our economic performance in 2½ years of the Nixon administration. Growth has disappeared.

"I'll take the old prosperity, the one that we knew in eight years of Democratic administrations," he said.

Muskie said Nixon's approach to all problems has been one of too little and too late.

Referring to Russian fishermen who have been fishing off both coasts, Muskie urged a "policy to preserve fishing as opposed to exploitation from the outside."

'LITTLE GULPER' GULPS

This device, looking much like a brother to a sick brontosaurus, is called a "litter gulper." The machine is the first of its kind and unlike its extinct brother, will likely never run out of a "food" supply. The machine has rotating steel fingers at the end of an aluminum boom to scoop up bottles, cans, paper and other trash. It is touted as a fast and cheap way to clean litter from the nation's highways. The device was being demonstrated Tuesday on Capitol Hill in Washington.

New Aid Course Charted For Doctor Training

Washington (AP) — The House Tuesday finished congressional action on bills charting a $3.8 billion new course for federal aid in training doctors and nurses.

By voice vote, the House sent to President Nixon a pair of measures authorizing a three-year federal spending program to help speed the education of professional health personnel.

Included in the massive package of help for the nation's 106 medical schools are special incentives for institutions to develop three-year programs to train physicians. Most curricula now last four years.

The two bills — one covering doctors, the other nurses — make available twice what Nixon had sought. But sponsors say they expect Nixon will sign them in view of what they term serious shortages of manpower and widespread financial trouble experienced by about half the nation's medical schools.

The legislation, approved by the Senate last month, provides for the first time a system of payments to medical schools based on a formula involving the number of students, increases in enrollment, and an institution's efforts to shorten the time involved in medical education.

Institutional support currently amounts to about $500 per student each year. Under the so-called capitation grants for schools of medicine, dentistry and osteopathy, the schedule would be $2,500 for each student during his first, second and third years; $4,000 for each student in the fourth year if he is graduating; $6,000 for each student who graduates in the third year as a result of a speeded-up course.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., chief sponsors of the bills, called the legislation a major congressional response to a health care crisis. They said it aims at stabilizing finances of schools so they can direct energies to the nation's needs.

In order to qualify for basic institutional support, a school must assure substantial increases in its enrollment by next September.

Court Hears Argument In Welfare Fraud Case

The Nebraska Supreme Court Tuesday heard the oral arguments in a case involving a welfare mother from Omaha charged with fraudulently accepting Aid to Dependent Children benefits.

Mrs. Ophelia Bohannon's attorney told the high court that the Welfare Department was attempting to hide its own inefficiency in charging her with fraud.

"They (the Douglas County Welfare Department) keep her on ADC when she tried to get off, then charge and convict her of fraud under absolutely bizarre circumstances," the lawyer said.

Mrs. Bohannon was previously convicted by a lower court of defrauding the state of $35 through failure to disclose a financial arrangement.

However, Attorney Clayton Shrout said Mrs. Bohannon's caseworker admitted during the district court trial that she knew of Mrs. Bohannon's holding joint title to a Cadillac and some real estate.

Clifford Jones, the man whom she held the titles for, was the real owner, Mrs. Bohannon maintained.

"I just don't understand this," Shrout said; "they take her off when she says she is married, put her back on when it was discovered she wasn't, then a few months later they charge her with wrong-doing."

However, Assistant Attorney General Harold Mosher said the truth was she did in fact own the land and yet told the welfare office she did not.

Sentence Upheld

Austin, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled freedom of speech does not give a person the right to burn an American flag. The court upheld a four-year sentence given a Dallas youth for burning a flag during a protest demonstration at a Dallas park last year.

Iowa Highway Group Gets Bids To Finish Interstate 29

Ames, Iowa (UPI) — The Iowa Highway Commission Tuesday received bids for the final stretch of Interstate 29 in Iowa, which is scheduled for completion on Nov. 18, 1972.

In the bid openings, the commission said the apparent low bidder for the final 19 miles to the Missouri border was Koss Construction Co., of Des Moines. The bids were for the final stretch of paving in the southwest corner of the state.

The bids were scheduled to be considered by the commission Wednesday.

The work was broken down into two sections with the south section of 8.7 miles north from the Missouri line bid at $2.8 million and the next 10.1 miles bid at $3.3 million.

Board Won't Cut 'Hair' At Pershing

The Pershing Municipal Auditorium Advisory Board Tuesday voted 4-3 to accept a booking of the controversial rock musical "Hair" should the show be offered to Lincoln.

However, Auditorium Manager Ike Hoig told the board the prospects of the show being offered in Lincoln "are very dim."

Hoig requested the board's guidance vote as to whether the booking should be accepted if offered in the future.

The 4-3 vote put an end to several months of attempts to ban the show completely from the auditorium.

Board Chairman Dick Chapin said he switched his vote in favor of the show because he didn't want to act as a censor.

John Hoppe, recently named to the advisory board succeeding Gene Eaton, attended his first meeting Tuesday.

Nixon Urges Congress To Revive Foreign Aid

Chicago (AP) — President Nixon, leapfrogging half-way across the continent to help Republicans build up a 1972 campaign war chest, called on Congress Tuesday night to rise above partisanship and revive the foreign aid program — or face greatly increased danger of war in the world.

Sounding a theme of peace with prosperity, Nixon appeared in person at $500 per plate "salute to the President" dinners in New York and Chicago — and via closed circuit television in 18 other cities from coast to coast.

He used the forum not only to help the GOP raise an estimated $5 million, but also to urge Congress to keep alive the foreign aid program struck down by the Senate two weeks ago.

About 2,500 demonstrators gathered outside the Hilton Hotel here four hours before the President was due to arrive. Police said about half a dozen persons were arrested after objects were thrown into the street.

But by the time Nixon landed the crowd had dwindled to about 500 as the temperature dropped to 32 degrees and a brisk wind swept in from Lake Michigan.

Earlier, in New York, about 200 demonstrators were kept at a distance from the Americana Hotel, where Nixon was speaking. A block away, 50 counterpickets demonstrated in favor of the President. Mounted police kept both groups in their separate areas.

Nixon's main pitch at both dinners was on behalf of the foreign aid program.

"If the United States at this particular time should determine that it will discontinue its programs of mutual assistance for countries abroad . . . it can only mean that the world will become much more unstable, that the dangers of war in the world will greatly increase and that the United States will no longer be a world power respected in the world," Nixon said in his first public comment on the foreign aid crisis.

The foreign assistance program, he said, is above partisanship and it must be continued.

"I trust it will be, by this Congress," he said.

Boy Is Killed Watching Tiger

Bombay, India (AP) — A Bengal tiger leaped from the ring at a circus Tuesday and killed a boy in the seats.

The ringmaster and his assistant were injured getting the tiger back into a cage.

The circus has been allowing wild animals to perform in the open ring.

Pancake Eaters Contribute $1,800 To Aid Love Library

The "eat pancakes for Love" fund raising effort for Love Memorial Library netted about $1,800, according to Mike Wirth, one of the coordinators of the event.

The proceeds from the pancake feed, cosponsored by Kappa Alpha Theta and Farmhouse fraternities, will bring the amount in the Love Library fund to about $5,000, according to Dru Toebben, president of the Tassels.

The Love Library fund in the University of Nebraska foundation was started this fall by the Tassels and Corncobs, NU pep organizations, to purchase books and equipment.

Wirth said he was "well pleased" with the results of the feed, held in the NU Student Union.

"We were turning out pancakes as fast as we could from 4:30 to 8:15 p.m.," he said. "The volunteers worked tremendously hard and the Student Union people were very cooperative."

Wirth said several Lincoln food dealers contributed most of the food for the feed, but that $200 to $300 would be taken out of the $2,100 grossed to pay for butter, some NU Student Union fees and bills for 220 volt and gas line attachments to the cooking griddle.

Wirth said efforts were being made to have the Union Board waive some of the Student Union fees. He said the board would probably make a decision on the fees by the first of next week.

Dick Tracy's Car Is Stolen

Pottstown, Pa. (AP) — Someone stole Dick Tracy's car!

Pottstown Police Chief Dick Tracy left his car at the Reading Railroad station in this eastern Pennsylvania community Monday night for his wife Barbara, who commutes by train to work in Philadelphia.

But Mrs. Tracy was unable to find the car when she returned from work. Chief Tracy checked with the railroad in case they had towed the car away, but no luck.

A bumper sticker on the rear of the missing car proudly proclaims "Support Your Local Police."

Delays Tiring?

Pierre, S.D. (AP) — State Sen. R. T. Collingwood says the people of South Dakota are tired of delays in tax reform.

Injunction Granted In Draft Case

Los Angeles (UPI) — A federal judge Tuesday granted a 60-day injunction against the Selective Service to a 23-year-old artist who argued that a little-known loophole in the draft law forbids the government to draft anyone until Dec. 28.

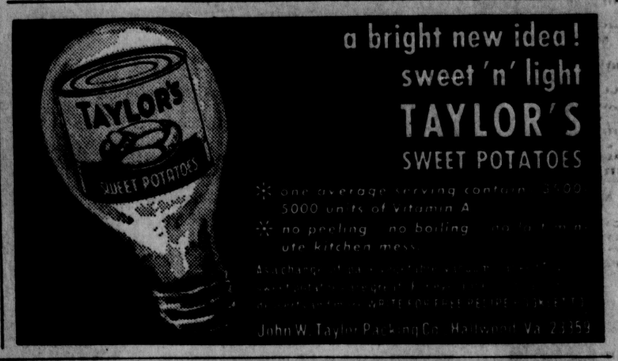

U.S. District Judge Robert J. Kelleher noted that the argument by Karl S. Bohn of Santa Barbara, Calif., "seems to present a case of national importance."

Kellher granted Bohn an injunction against his draft board, preventing it from inducting him for 60 days. He set Dec. 2 as the date of the next hearing.

Bohn's case rests on his contention that a section of the draft law reads "no person shall be inducted or ordered into active service without his consent under this title within

President Nixon signed the law Sep.t 28, meaning that legally nobody can be dratfed before Dec. 28, Bohn and his attorneys argue.

The clause was part of the original draft law passed when the draft was revived in 1948 after World War II, and the 90-day moratorium was apparently intended to give the Selective Service time to get into operation again.

Vote On Student Loan Procedure Set

State Investment Officer Fred Kuethe said Tuesday the Investment Council will vote on whether to contract with the University of Nebraska to act as a clearing house for the student loan program at its Nov. 17 meeting.

Such an arrangement, Kuethe said, would free his office of the voluminous paper work connected with the federally-guaranteed loan program.

The council has already contracted with the State College Board of Trustees for it to act as the follow-up agent involved with repayment of loans.

Under the proposed agreement, the University through the Financial Aid Office, would provide the services involved with securing a loan for students.

The University Board of Regents last Friday approved its participation as the program's procurement agent.

"This doesn't rule banks as procurement agents out of the picture," Kuethe said; "it just gives the council another option to work through."

In addition, Kuethe said the University would act not only as the procurement agent for students attending state-supported colleges; but also for those students attending private colleges, junior colleges and vocational-technical colleges.

"All students attending schools in Nebraska will be eligible for loans," Kuethe said.

The requirements for participation in the program include a full-time student classification as defined by the colleges and financial need.

The Investment Officer said the $1 million program authorized by the 1971 Legislature will not begin until more of the mechanics are worked out. The initial pilot of the program will involve approximately $100,000.

Nor, Kuethe said, does he know how many banks will participate.

Under the program, the Investment Council will use $1 million of the $43 million Teachers' Retirement Fund to underwrite federally guaranteed loans from banks.

The council then purchases notes in blocks of $5,000, thus allowing the lender to make more loans available.

Safe Unsafe

Oslo (AP) — Thieves broke into a shopping center, found the combination to a safe on a piece of paper in an unlocked desk drawer, opened the safe and got away with $1,700 police reported.

Nader Group May Be Formed In State Soon

Omaha (AP) — A statewide organization formed along consumer advocate Ralph Nader's principles may be operating in Nebraska by next fall, Joe Highland said Monday.

Highland, a Nader associate, is in Nebraska this week to help organize Public Improvement Research for Man, a local group. Highland is a staff member of Nader's Center for the Study of Responsive Law in Washington.

Highland, 27-year-old former University of Minnesota student, said a similar group he helped organize among students in Minnesota last year now has raised enough money to hire a small professional staff.

Nelson Kieff of Omaha is temporary state coordinator of Public Involvement Research for Man. He said a petition drive for a special fee to support the group will be organized over the Christmas vacation.

Highland spoke at the University of Nebraska at Omaha and Creighton University Monday and will talk at other colleges across the state Thursday.

Voters At Alda OK Bond Issue

Alda (UPI) — Voters here have approved an $80,000 bond issue to be used for construction of a new municipal water system.

Town Clerk Burdette L. Ronnau said the issue passed 65-18. Bids will be let soon and construction is to start early in the spring.

The new system will serve the entire community. At present, residents in the north end of town do not have a town water supply.

Four Youths Face Charges In Explosion

Kearney (AP) — Buffalo County Attorney Andrew McMullen said Tuesday he plans formal charges in the case of four youths in connection with an explosion Thursday night, but the formal charge probably will not be the same one contained in the warrant on which they were arrested.

Police Sgt. Ed Kearns obtained a warrant from District Judge S. S. Sidner accusing the four youths of illegal possession of explosives. It named Ed Popple, 18, and Ron Nelson, 17, both of Axtell, and Mike Fox and Kelley Somner, both 15, of Kearney.

Police entered the case after the four youths reported to a hospital for treatment of minor injuries, saying they were walking from their car to the Kearney State College Library when the explosion occurred.

Kearns said Tuesday further investigation showed the explosion occurred in the north edge of Kearney rather than on the college campus, and that the substance involved was a mixture of acetylene and oxygen in a plastic garbage disposal type bag, which had detonated prematurely.

None of the boys is in custody.

Douglas County Won't Support Dike

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Omaha — A motion by Douglas County Supervisor Jerry Hassett of Omaha that would have made the county board the local sponsor of a flood-control dike around King Lake died Tuesday morning for lack of a second.

King Lake, lying in the flood-prone Elkhorn River basin, was partially flooded when ice jams caused the Elkhorn to overflow its banks last Febuary. It was the latest of a series of floods to hit the town in the last 25 years.

The Army Corps of Engineers has offered to build a ring dike around the town with some $330,000 in federal matching funds, a ready appropriated by Congress, provided that King Lake can get local sponsorship to the tune of $170,000.

Hassett said he made his motion based on a recommendation by County Supervisor George Erhart, who appeared at the board meeting to say he considered the dike a feasible project, and a study by the Corps indicating that the dike would not substantially raise the level of flood waters in adjacent unprotected land, as some critics of the plan had charged.

Hassett said King Lake residents feel they do not have a broad enough tax base to finance the measure themselves, and that the state would be unlikely to sponsor the project. The town can now try to get total federal funding for the dike, Hassett said, or approach the county board again later.

"As of now, the project is dead," he said. "It could be revived, but the chances of securing a majority vote of the Douglas County board are not likely."

Christmas Tree Cutting Allowed In Forest Areas

Halsey (AP) — Families will once again be able to cut their own Christmas trees at the Bessey and Niobrara divisions of the National Forest near Halsey and Nenzel.

Verne Schultz, district ranger for the two forest divisions, noted, however, that only red cedar trees will be allowed to be cut this year.

Cutting will be allowed the first two weekends in December, Dec. 4-5 and Dec. 11-12. In past years, persons entering the forest have been able to cut down pine, but this was not allowed in 1971.

Councilmen's Trip To Hawaii Will Cost Taxpayers $3,000

Omaha (AP) —Omaha taxpayers will have to pay more than $3,000 to pay for six of seven City Council members to fly to Honolulu, Hawaii, later this month for the annual meeting of the National League of Cities.

Only Councilman Warren Swigart, who objected Aug. 23 to sending "many people" from one department to one convention, isn't planning to attend the Nov. 28-Dec. 1 meeting.

Vouchers for the $459 air fare and the $65 registration fee for each of the six councilmen have been filed with the finance Department, a total of $3,144. Vouchers requesting money for hotel bills, meals and other expenses haven't been filed, according to department records.

Five of the council members also plan to take their wives to Hawaii and each has been billed for his wife's transportation cost, the vouchers show.

City records don't show whether any of the councilmen will stay over for the Nebraska-Hawaii football game Dec. 4.

Sarpy Board Approves IDA Bonds for Plant

Papillion (AP) — The Sarpy County Board approved Monday the issuance of $3.5 million in bonds under the Industrial Development Amendment to build a National By-Products Inc. plant near its present rendering works about two miles south of Bellevue.

The area has been the home of a by-product plant for more than 60 years and National has been there more than 30 years. The firm makes grease, tallow, soap and feed from waste animals.

Castro To Arrive In Chile; First Latin American Trip Since 1959

The New York Times

By JUAN de ONIS

Santiago, Chile — Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba will arrive here Wednesday from Havana on his first trip to Latin America in more than 11 years.

The announcement of the official visit by the leftwing government of President Salvador Allende Gossens came as Communist and Socialist youth squads painted city walls with welcome signs and pictures of Dr. Castro appeared in the capital under bright early summer skies.

Castro is expected to be here for ten days, during which, he will address a mass rally here, visit the Chuquicamata copper mine, recently expropriated from its U.S. owners, the port city of Valparaiso, the steel and coal center at Concepcion, and go fishing for trout in the glacial streams of Southern Chile.

A leaflet campaign by the rightwing anti-Communist group called "Fatherland and Liberty" — attacking the Cuban Communist regime and urging Castro to "stay at home" drew a denunciation from the Foreign Ministry which deplored "this attempt to create an adverse and hostile climate" for the visit.

Most Chileans, however, were curious to see the Cuban leader, and among leftists particularly, there was an enthusiastic desire to see Castro on Chilean soil.

Breakdown

Castro's visit to Chile symbolizes the breakdown of a hemispheric policy of isolation of the Castro regime that the United States has promoted since 1961.

The visit here, with a stopover in Peru, will bring Castro back on the Latin American scene in a somewhat new role, more as a goodwill emissary to what Havana regards as "progressive" governments than as a revolutionary firebrand.

It will be the first time since 1959 that Castro has visited any Latin American country, and his first trip outside of Cuba since 1967, when he went to the Soviet Union.

For Allende, the visit not only cements the bridge of political friendship between Chile's leftwing government and the Cuban government, but has domestic political importance.

Allende has had problems since his presidential election campaign last year with the Revolutionary Left Movement (MIR), a pro-Cuban action group that promotes peasant land invasions, preaches violent revolution, and influences radical sectors of Allende's Socialist Party.

POSTERS . . . of Castro in Santiago, Chile, prepare for arrival of the Cuban premier.

Castro's presence here, side by side with Allende, is expected to serve as a revolutionary endorsement of the Chilean president's nonviolent "road to socialism" through legal, electoral means of ballots, not bullets.

For the United States and other members of the Organization of American States, which expelled the Castro government from the hemispheric organization in 1962 and ordered a diplomatic and economic boycott in 1964, the visit may put this policy in a new light.

The policy of isolation and economic denial imposed on Cuba is suffering the desertion of Latin American governments that are adopting more independent foreign policies as U.S. economic cooperation with this area is reduced.

Gen. Juan Velasco Alvarado, Peru's military president, said he will go to the airport in Lima to meet with Castro when he makes an expected stopover there on the Havana-to-Santiago flight.

As if to prepare this visit, Cuban foreign minister Raul Roa recently attended in Lima a meeting of the world's underdeveloped countries.

Engineered By Chile

The participation of Cuba in the Lima meeting was engineered by Chile, which has taken on the role of restoring Cuba to "respectable standing" in the Latin American community — with disregard for the decisions of the OAS.

Peru does not go this far. The Peruvian Foreign Ministry has contended that the OAS should revise its decisions, which were mandatory, and allow each member country to decide on its own what kind of relations it should have with Cuba.

The last time Castro came to Latin America, 1959, it was in the flush o his triumph over the regime of president Fulgencio Batista.

The Cuban leader was at the height of his popularity in Latin America. Large crowds gathered to cheer his every word and appearance.

But after these early visits, the presence of Castro and his increasingly militant regime began to be felt in less open and more uncomfortable ways in Latin America through a wave of subversive activities backed by Havana.

Elaborate System

Havana set up an elaborate system of support for sympathetic groups seeking to topple existing governments in the region and install pro-Cuban regimes.

Thousands of young Latin Americans were ferried to Cuba to receive training in revolutionary political action and guerrilla techniques. They then went back to their home countries with preparation, and often material support, to carry out subversive missions.

Cuban agents and money were directly involved in such major guerrilla efforts as those in Venezuela and Colombia — both against democratically elected governments — and in the high-water mark of Cuba's subversive effort, the ill-fated Bolivian guerrilla movement that was led by the late Ernesto "Che" Guevara with Castro's direct involvement in planning and political support.

None of these Cuban-directed guerrilla activities have brought down a Latin American government in a decade. In contrast, the first government really sympathetic to the Cuban revolution that has emerged in this period is the Chilean "popular unity" government of Allende, a Socialist, who came to power through a free, constitutional election.

Allende, who is almost 20 years older than the 44-year-old Cuban leader, was a frequent visitor to Havana before his election and attended a number of Cuban revolutionary celebrations. Now, Castro is awaited in the Latin American country that claims it is opening a "new road to socialism" through democratic political institutions, and without bloodshed.

Chile Wants To Talk Over Foreign Debts

Santiago, Chile (UPI) — Chile wants to renegotiate its $3 billion foreign debt, President Salvador Allende announced Tuesday. He emphasized that his government plans to honor all foreign debts contracted by previous governments

Allende made the announcement in an unannounced nationwide radio broadcast. He said renegotiation of the foreign debt, almost half of which is in the United States, will be carried out "to adequately satisfy national and foreign interests."

Allende said previous governments have put Chile in debt abroad to the extent of more than $3 billion, "making the country second only to Israel in the biggest per capita debt ratio in the world." He noted, however, that American copper companies whose properties were nationalized by his government earlier this year, owe the state an alleged $723 millionin excessive profits they made operating Chilean mines.

Allende said any country in exercise of its sovereignty can and must adopt whatever measures it considers necessary to its development. He noted that the United States, in order to equalize an unfavorable balance of payments, recently unilaterally adopted measures to this end.

Chile, he said, preferred not to use the U.S. formula. Instead, he said, it has decided to call its creditors together "to seek, through renegotiation, a new restructuring" of its foreign debt.

Reasons that led him to make his decision, Allende said, included the growing foreign debt through 1970, the anticipated flight of foreign exchange from Chile through amortizations and interest payments over the subsequent three years and the drying-up of dividend and tax payments by the nationalized copper companies. He also noted that the United States banking system had closed out an estimated $190 million line of credits previously extended to Chile.

Know Your Antiques

This German fire clock was made of pewter about 1800. The numbers on the glass reservoir told how much oil was left. It was a poor time keeper.
(Old Charter Clock collection)

BY RALPH AND TERRY KOVEL

When you burn the candle at both ends you really are using your time twice as fast as you should. That phrase comes from the use of a candle marked to denote the passage of time. Before the candle was used, time had been marked by burning damp, knotted grass ropes.

The clock lamp was developed by the 17th century. A candlestick like base held a reservoir for oil and a space for a protruding wick. The amount of oil remaining indicated the time.

The most famous of these lamps were called Cardan lamps. They are interesting examples of German pewter making, but are poor time pieces. Most of them were marked for eight hours, but the oil in the small reservoir could not burn that long. Filling the reservoir to exactly the right height at the right time and controlling the height of flame gave the correct time. It must have been difficult to keep appointments. Everyone had a different time.

Q. "Cmbergmi" is marked on my doll. Can you tell me about it? The mark may say more, but the body is attached to the head in such a way that the rest is covered. The head is bisque. The body has joined arms and legs.

A. Could the mark say G.M. Bergmann? He was a famous doll maker who worked in Germany after 1877. Bergmann came to America and, as a cowboy, fought the Indians in the West about 1870. He returned to Germany and began working in a doll factory. He started his own firm in 1889.

Most of his dolls had jointed composition bodies, although some had kid leather bodies. His firm used bisque heads made by other factories.

Q. How can I tell the age of an old tin can that held food?

A. Tin cans had soldered side seams and a hole at the top that was sealed with solder before 1915. The cans were made of steel and coated with tin. They were cut and soldered by hand. The side seams were joined by crimping instead of soldering about 1915. This meant a slight ridge may be felt on the can. The hole at the top that was soldered was also omitted and the can top was all one piece.

Beer cans were first made in the 1930s and they have a triangular opening at the top. The pulltab type of can is a recent invention and has only been known since the 1960s.

Q. When was the first cut glass made? I was told most was made between 1885 and 1905.

A. The ancient Greeks made a form of cut glass. The type familiar to collectors started in England about 1715. Any glass decorated by a cutting process where part of the glass is removed with a cutting wheel, is called cut glass. The pieces today that are found in the shops were usually those from the Brilliant Period, 1880 to 1905. This is the very heavy, deeply cut glassware that has been popular for table wares.

Abby: 'good taste' is a vital factor

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote in saying she and her husband were embarrassed by a friend who carried on with his girl friend in public, "kissing, hugging, smooching and what not." She claimed it was bad manners, and you advised, "Tell Loverboy to knock off the love scenes in public."

I think you were both wrong! I see nothing wrong with showing affection in public. If people waited until they had total privacy, there would be very little affection shown. And if children were not exposed to displays of affection, they would grow up without knowing what "love" is.

My father is 57, and Mom is 48, and he has always kissed her whenever he felt like it. It didn't matter if we had company or not. And it wasn't a little peck on the cheek. He'd take her in his arms and really kiss her! And not lightly, and not just once, either. And it's the same today.

Once Mom joked, "You've mussed my hair and smeared my lipstick!" And Dad grabbed her again and said, "Who has a better right?" And that, in my opinion is the right attitude.

RAISED RIGHT

DEAR RAISED: Hold it! I was also raised right, having seen my father hug and kiss my mother, plus giving her an occasional affectionate wack on the backside. But good taste demands limits. And limits we had in our house. Kids grow up knowing what "love" is without having seen it demonstrated thru to the last act.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you printed a letter from a husband saying his schoolteacher wife wanted to go off to Europe for her summer vacation, and he said he would offer her a divorce if she went.

Well, my wife of 14 years took our kids and went to Europe for 10 weeks with my blessing and I've learned a hundred times over how much my wife means to me. I honestly never realized what a wonderful wife I had. I recommend any man let his wife take a month or two vacation. It will rekindle their love. He will soon learn how important a wife is. He will also learn what a rotten job housekeeping is.

DEAR LOVELORN: It's the old story: You never miss the water 'til the well runs dry.

THE LINCOLN STAR, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1971

A Child's World Has Its Problems

BY PHYLLIS WOOLLEN

Dear Mrs. Woollen:

My name is (Tom) and I am 12 years old. My older brother was killed in a car accident about a year ago, and I have been miserable ever since.

The problem is my parents. Ever since my brother was killed, my parents don't let me do anything. They always want me to stay at home with them, and if I do go over to a friend's house, they call me all the time and worry about me. Sometimes I feel like I have a chain around me.

Don't get me wrong. My parents are nice people, and in fact they give me more than most of my friends get. I guess they're just afraid that something will happen to me, too. But, it is driving me crazy. It's gotten to the point that I'm even getting afraid to do things.

What can I do to get my parents over this? ONLY SON

(The following discussion is under the supervision and guidance of the Child Guidance Center. Readers are invited to write in with problems they may be having with their children to: A Child's World, The Lincoln Star, 926 P St., Lincoln, Ne., 68501.)

What has occurred in this situation is not unusual following the death of one child, especially if there is only one remaining child. Tom's parents have become over-protective. This sort of reaction reflects feelings of guilt towards the lost child, whether or not the parents were in any way responsible for the death.

A harboring of guilt manifests itself with the child who is still living. Subconsciously the parents search for ways to avoid their remorse which is coupled with guilt, and they compensate by overindulging the second child. They will never allow themselves to not do as much as they can for Tom.

The results of this kind of behavior are detrimental to all concerned. The child who is over-protected cannot develop confidence in himself, in part because he is never allowed to experiment with and experience his own trials and errors. He develops a fear of the unknown and begins to patronize his parent's fear for him. In a sense he becomes paralyzed by his parent's sense of guilt.

The over-indulged child develops expectations that are so high they cannot always be fulfilled—either in his youth or in the later years of his life, when he has left the family circle.

There is, unfortunately, not a great deal Tom can do to change his parent's reaction. He is one step ahead by being observant enough to realize their self-questioning concerning guilt and its reaction. His best posture would be to challenge his parents about the situation. If they refuse to talk to him, he should urge them to talk to someone else.

Dining With Wine

In English speaking countries, the best known Rhone red wine is called: Chateau-Neuf-du-Pape (Sho-toe-nuff-dew-Pop) one of the "classic growths". In the 14th Century the Papacy was moved temporarily from Rome to the city of Avignon, France, on the Rhone river. The first Pope to preside in the new headquarters was a former Archbishop of France who became Pope Clement the 5th. He was a Frenchman and a native of Bordeaux. It was under his guidance that the wines of Avignon were brought to a degree of perfection which they have held ever since. Chateau-Neuf-du-Pape is a wine of great warmth, richness and flavor. It possesses a deep crimson color, it is generous and full-bodied,and is one of the strongest French red wines made, being about 14% alcohol. While the Bordeaux wines are made from one variety of grape and the wines of Burgundy are usually blends of the pickings of several vineyards; the Chateau-Neuf-du-Pape is a wine which is made from as many as twelve different varieties of grape. These include the: Clairette, Terret Noir, Rousanne, Bourboulene, Mourvedre, Picpul, Counouse, Cinsault, Grenache, Syrah and others. Each of these grapes provide a characteristic which make Chateau-Neuf-du-Pape such an outstanding wine.

Chateau-Neuf-Du-Pape was almost unknown until the days of Napoleon, when it was brought to the attention of Parisians by the behaviour of one vineyard owner. This was the highly esteemed Marquis de la Nerthe, known throughout France as a ladies man and all-around "bon vivant". When asked how, at his advanced age he managed to remain so robust and virile, he replied that his secret was the wine from his own vineyard on the Rhone. It was not long before Chateau Neuf-du-Pape became the most popular of the Rhone wines and even today one hears of the remarkably potent aphrodiasical and medicinal qualities these wines possess.

Chateau-Neuf-d Pape is best served at room temperature with stews, ragouts (prepared with the same wine), beef, pot roast, venison, pheasant, wild duck, steak and cheese.

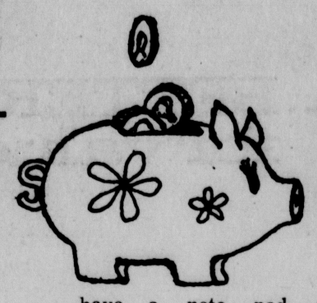

This is the hunting season and a wonderful way to prepare the day's 'bag' would be in this manner;

WILD DUCK POACHED IN WINE SAUCE
½ lb butter
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon red currant jelly
2 cups Chateau-Neuf-d Pape
1 jigger Benedictine
Breasts of wild duck
Salt and pepper

Melt the butter and add all of the ingredients except the duck. Mix well. Cut raw duck breasts and simmer in sauce for 12 minutes if they are small or up to 20 minutes if they are large. Add salt and pepper. Allow two single breasts per person. This recipe makes enough sauce for 4 to 6 breasts.

MONEY MATTERS

BY LINDA OLIG

It's about that time of the year again when we begin to think of holiday cooking, baking, and entertaining. Oh, but how hard that is on our food budgets!

The strange thing is that this particular season of the year makes sticking to the budget and planning ahead so very important.

Preparing seasonal and once-a-year foods focuses more importance on advance planning and the shopping list.

When going through cookbooks, magazines, or the recipe suggestions in the local newspaper, it is well to make note of the required items as well as the amounts. Suggestions from family also should be considered — and holiday baking can become a family tradition by involving everyone and having a bake-in. The children actually enjoy getting in on the act — and it's a learning experience, besides.

Returning to the all-important shopping list, it is wise to have a note pad as a permanent fixture in the kitchen — for listing staples and other foods as the supplies are depleted.

While preparing that grocery list, be sure to check the food supplies on hand on storage shelves and in the refrigerator and freezer — and be sure to check out your emergency supply of canned goods and others.

And don't forget to read the ads in Wednesday's LINCOLN STAR newspaper for those grocery specials. Write the advertised prices and the amount to be purchased beside the items included on the list. One extra-special hint is to stock up on foods that are listed at particularly low prices — except for the perishables, of course. This is difficult at first since the grocery bill will be considerably larger, but this practice rapidly snowballs. Of course, plenty of storage space is a major requirement.

Shopping by a list, and sticking to it, will eliminate extra trips to the store which can be costly and expose you to additional impulse buying.

Arrange the listed items so that shopping can be more quickly completed. Categorizing the needed foods also will help to provide a checklist so you won't overlook any item. For example, group the produce, the dairy foods, the meats and the frozen foods.

Other things to consider before embarking on that regular trip to the supermarket include allowing adequate time, shopping early in the day when the selections are greatest and stores are less crowded and on the day when the fruits and vegetables are transported.

One important factor in sticking to the list is not going when you are hungry—if you are hungry when shopping you will be tempted to pick up snack foods and those with little nutritive value and many calories.

NEXT WEEK—The shopping trip.

Book Review For LWC

A book review of Mrs. E. W. Ruehle will be presented at the Wednesday morning, Nov. 10, meeting of the Lincoln Woman's Club Literature Department.

The 10 o'clock review at the Club House will be preceded by a coffee at 9:30 o'clock.

An Easy-To-Make Toy

What little boy hasn't dreamed of being a truck driver?

It is easy to realize that dream with some imagination, two cardboard boxes, aluminum foil, paste, several discarded foil pie-pans, and some spray paint.

One large box and a smaller one are needed for the truck. Remove the top flaps from each. Place the larger box with the open end down, then cut a window in the front, and one in each side, and a door in the rear. Also cut an opening at floor level at the front for leg room.

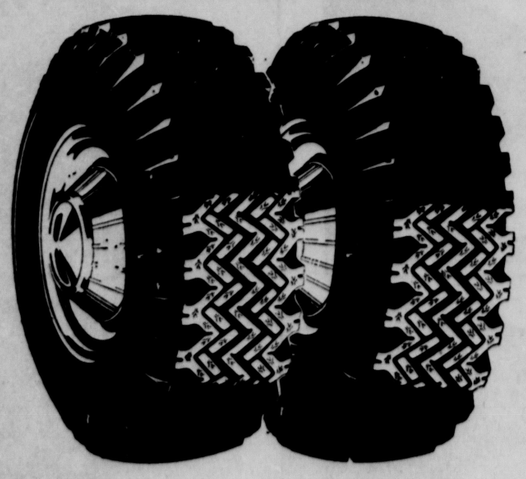

Next, place the small box against the large one so that the openings in each box match.

Brush thinned white glue or wallpaper paste on both boxes and cover loosely with heavy duty Alcoa Wrap. Use a cloth to rub foil against the glued box.

Use black tape to simulate front doors, and foil pie-pans, sprayed black, for wheels and headlights.

Then, open the door at the rear and let in all the animal friends!

Past LWC Presidents Are Honored

Tradition is just one part of a club's existence, but the organization's traditions can create enthusiasm and general good-will among members and the community.

One of the Lincoln Woman's Club's favorite traditions is the annual birthday luncheon. This year, the festivity was held at the University Club on Monday, Nov. 8.

Past presidents of the active organization were honored at the luncheon—and numerous officers of the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs also were in attendance at the annual affair.

Parties For Jane Hendry

During the past few weeks life for Miss Jane Hendry has been one party after another. Miss Hendry, as you know, has named Saturday, Nov. 20, as the date of her marriage to James Dobler. The wedding, as we have mentioned before, will take place at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon at St. Teresa's Church.

In addition to the many courtesies that already have complimented this particular bride-elect, there are more on this week's calendar.

This afternoon, for instance, Miss Hendry will be the honoree at a kitchen-gadget shower for which Mrs. J. P. Overgaard and Mrs. Harold Nelson will be hostesses at the home of Mrs. Overgaard. The guest list will include the members of a bridge club to which the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Lee Hendry, belongs.

Later in the week, on Friday — to be specific — Mrs. Martin Batliner, Mrs. George Haberlan and Mrs. A. B. Chaves will pay prenuptial courtesy to the soon-to-be bride when they entertain at a luncheon and a linen shower at the Nebraska Club.

* * *

At the Hillcrest Country Club next Sunday Mrs. Hendry will be a luncheon hostess when she entertains her daughter's bridal attendants and their mothers.

* * *

On the following Friday evening, Nov. 19, Mr. and Mrs. William O. Dobler will preside at dinner at The Knolls in prenuptal courtesy to their son and Miss Hendry. The dinner will follow the wedding rehearsal at the church.

Opening lead — eight of diamonds.

The signal is an extremely valuable weapon that permits the defenders to indicate where they are weak or strong, the suits they would like to have led and, in general, how best to conduct the defense.

It is sometimes possible for declarer to interfere with this exchange of information by preempting the play in a manner that makes it difficult for the defenders to signal their holdings.

Here is such a case. South was in four spades doubled and he could tell from the opening lead (1) that West had a singleton diamond and (2) that West almost surely had the king of spades for his double.

Declarer won the diamond with the ace and, had he made the mistake of playing a spade to the ace and continuing with the queen or jack, he would undoubtedly have gone down. West would win with the king, as East signaled with a high club, and would put East on lead with a club.

East would then cash the king of diamonds and continue with the queen, thus guaranteeing West another trump trick in the form of the ten.

So, in order to prevent East from signaling, declarer played a spade to the queen at trick two. West won with the king but was now faced with the problem of how to put partner on lead for the vital diamond return.

Unluckily, but understandably, he elected to play a heart at trick three and as a result South made the contract. Declarer was exceptionally well rewarded for jamming the opponents' lines of communication.

PEO Group Will Meet

Mrs. L. E. Boswell will entertain the members of PEO Chapter FX when that group gathers at her home, at 1800 Connie Rd., on Wednesday evening, Nov. 10.

The program for the 8 o'clock meeting will be presented by Mrs. A. D. Flowerday.

Ladies' Day At Gateway

Tomorrow — Thursday, Nov. 11 isn't just another day on the calendar. It's much more than that to the women in Lincoln, and in the surrounding communities.

Thursday, Nov. 11 is "Ladies Day at Gateway" and it is sponsored by the Gateway Association and the Lincoln Technical College.

The day begins at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning and closes at 9 o'clock that evening, and all of the activity will take place in the Gateway Auditorium. There will be displays, instruction classes, and demonstrations.

The things one will be able to learn during the instruction periods and demonstrations are almost unbelievable.

For example: Mrs. Julius Humann will give you all of the ins and outs — and the secrets of entertaining and being a good hostess. That will take place between 10 o'clock and 10:30 o'clock in the morning. Beginning at 10:45 and continuing through until 11:15 o'clock will be instruction and demonstration of candlemaking. That will be done by Mrs. D. F. Huber. Mrs. Harland Taylor takes over from 11:30 o'clock until noon, and her specialty will be cake decorating.

Artist Mrs. Wayne Barclay will be on hand from 1 o'clock until 1:30 to discuss decorative painting, and following that comes "Antique Collectables," which is in the charge of Mrs. Auralea Nelsen.

And there will be those who hardly will be able to wait until 2:30 o'clock when Mrs. Joseph D. Carnes will present some great ideas on creative crafts.

FOOD

ideas for holiday baking

You may not be able to hear them today, or perhaps not even tomorrow, but those reindeer decked in sleighbells, are getting closer and closer.

Now is the time to begin the planning of your Christmas season baking whether those goodies be for home consumption, or are to be given as gifts to friends and neighbors.

We are offering two Christmas bread recipes this morning, and both are simple to do and delightful to taste. Here they are:

Jiffy Danish Crescent Ring, reminiscent of regal Scandinavian pastries, is off to a time-saving start with refrigerated crescent roll dough. No mixing, measuring or kneading; you just open the can of dough and carry on!

You'll like this ring's sweet nutty filling that is subtly spiced with cinnamon and cardamon. An egg white glaze is brushed atop the dough then sprinkled with sugar to give an extra flaky look.

Peppermint Yule Tree is created quickly with a can of refrigerated almond or cinnamon Danish rolls. The individual rolls are cut in half and arranged to form a tree. After baking drizzle with peppermint sparkled glaze and "decorate" with crushed peppermint candy. Another time, why not stud with golden raisins, candied fruit or blanched almonds.

JIFFY DANISH CRESCENT RING

⅓ cup sugar
⅓ cup chopped almonds, pecans or walnuts
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground cardamon, if desired.
2 cans (8 oz. ea.) Refrigerated Quick Crescent Dinner Rolls
¼ cup butter or margarine, softened
1 egg white
1 tablespoon water
2 tablespoons sugar
Oven 375 degrees
1 large ring
8 to 10 servings

In small bowl, combine sugar, nuts, cinnamon and cardamon; set aside. Separate each can crescent dough into 2 large rectangles. Place 3 large rectangles together (long sides together) and remaining large rectangle across the bottom. Firmly press edges and perforations to seal (this prevents separation during baking). Roll or pat out to form a rectangle about 18x10 inches. Spread softened butter over dough; sprinkle with sugar-almond mixture. Starting at longer side, roll up rectangle, pressing ends to seal. On ungreased cookie sheet, place seam-side down. Form into a ring; firmly press ends together. With scissors or sharp knife, cut almost through ring at ½ inch intervals. Turn each section on its side bringing every other section to inside of ring. Combine egg white and water; brush over ring. Sprinkle with sugar. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes until golden brown. Serve warm.

PEPPERMINT YULE TREE

1 can (11 oz.) Pillsbury Refrigerated Quick Almond or Cinnamon Raisin Danish Rolls with Icing
¼ teaspoon peppermint flavoring
3 to 4 tablespoons crushed peppermint candy or slivered almonds
Oven 400 degrees
1 Coffee Cake

Separate dough into 8 rolls; cut each roll in half. On ungreased cookie sheet, arrange roll halves to form a Christmas tree shape. Place 4 halves, cut edge toward bottom of cookie sheet for the first row, 3 halves for the next two rows, 2 halves for the fourth row, and one half each for the last two rows. Place the remaining 2 halves, rounded edges together, at bottom to form the tree trunk. Bake at 400 degrees for 9 to 13 minutes until golden brown. Combine peppermint flavoring and icing; drizzle over coffee cake. Sprinkle with peppermint candy or almonds.

Orange Fruitcake

Remember the Christmas orange that you always found tucked in the very bottom of your Christmas stocking on that happy morning? Even today, orange is a traditional holiday flavor that is reminiscent of Christmases past.

GOLDEN ORANGE FRUITCAKE

1 package date bar mix
1-3 cup hot water
1-3 cup orange juice
3 eggs
¼ cup all-purpose flour (regular or instantized)
¼ cup orange marmalade
¾ teaspoon baking powder
1 cup cut-up candied pineapple
1 cup golden raisins
1 cup chopped nuts
¼ cup orange marmalade

Heat oven to 325 degrees. Grease and flour loaf pan, 9x5x3 inches. In large bowl blend date filling from date bar mix package and hot water. Add crumbly mix, orange juice, eggs, flour, ¼ cup orange marmalade and the baking powder; mix thoroughly. Fold in pineapple, raisins and nuts. Pour into prepared pan. Bake about 1 hour and 20 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool thoroughly. Wrap and refrigerate. Before serving heat ¼ cup orange marmalade until thin; spread over top of cake. If desired, garnish with orange twist. Makes 1 loaf.

Chinese Ribs— Delicious

"Breathes there a woman with soul so dead she never to herself has said — 'If I didn't have to clean that broiler I would have Chinese Pork Ribs — or maybe even Devilled Beef Ribs for dinner tonight, — but oh, that broiler!' "

Pardon the paraphrase on the writings of Sir Walter Scott, but we couldn't pass up these recipes for the Chinese Pork Ribs and the beef ribs, and how to keep your broiler tidy.

CHINESE STYLE PORK RIBS

4 to 5 pounds country style pork spareribs
4 cloves garlic
1 tablespoon salt
Generous sprinkling of pepper
1 small can pineapple chunks, drained
1 10½ ounce can chicken broth
½ cup soy sauce
½ cup catsup
1 onion diced

Line broiler pan with heavy duty foil. Cut spareribs into serving portions, removing fat that can be trimmed out easily. Place under broiler and brown, turning once. Brush with the soy sauce while browning as this helps give the ribs good color. Turn off broiler and set oven thermostat at 300 degrees. Remove broiler pan. Crush garlic with the salt, with the tip of a heavy knife and sprinkle over ribs. Add any remaining soy sauce and all other ingredients. Cover with a second sheet of foil, crimping it to the liner foil. Place in oven and bake for 2 hours or until fork tender. Remove foil cover. Remove from oven and tip pan so juices run to the corner. Skim off fat. If a thickened sauce is desired, combine 2 tablespoons corn starch with ⅓ cup sherry or water and stir into the juices. Cover lightly and return to oven for 10 minutes. Stir once during this time. Serve these ribs with rice and a salad for a hearty dinner. 8 servings.

DEVILED SHORT RIBS OF BEEF

4 to 5 pounds short ribs, cut in 3 inch lengths
1 medium onion, chopped
1 carrot, diced
1 green pepper, chopped
1 10½ ounce can beef broth
1 cup catsup
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
2 teaspoons salt
generous grating of pepper

Line the range broiler with heavy duty aluninum foil. Trim the ribs of excess fat where possible. Arrange in pan and brown under broiler lightly, turning once. Add vegetables while meat is browning so they are partially browned. Turn off broiler and reset thermostat for 300 degrees. Remove broiler pan, add remaining ingredients stirring them around to combine. (Save ½ cup broth to use in thickening gravy, if desired.)

Cover food with a second sheet of foil, crimping it to the liner and bake in the oven for 2 hours or until meat is tender. Remove pan from oven and remove foil cover. Tip pan so juices run to a corner. Skim excess fat. To thicken gravy, mix 4 tablespoons flour with the reserved broth. Stir into the pan juices and lightly cover. Return to oven for 10 minutes. Stir once during this time so juices are evenly thickened. Serve with buttered noodles and a salad. 8 servings.

Cookie Jar Goodies

No one would dream of not having the cookie jar filled to overflowing as the holiday season approaches. Here are some delectable ways to do it.

MINCEMEAT OATMEAL BARS

½ cup butter or margarine, softened
¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 tsp grated lemon rind
¼ cup milk
1 cup sifted enriched flour
¼ tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. salt
½ tsp. nutmeg
½ tsp. cinnamon
1½ cups quick cooking oats
1 cup mincemeat

Cream butter, brown sugar and lemon rind until light. Blend in milk. Sift flour, soda, salt and spices together. Blend into creamed mixture. Add oatmeal, beating until well mixed. Pat half of oatmeal mixture into bottom of well-greased 8" square pan. Spread mincemeat evenly over dough. Drop remaining oatmeal mixture over top by spoonfuls and gently pat over top in even layer to cover mincemeat. Bake in 350 degrees oven 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown. Cool in pan. Cut into bars.

School Board Plans To Pay All Legal Salary Increases

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday voted unanimously to notify Lincoln teachers that it intends to pay as much of their negotiated salary increases as federal regulations will allow.

Supt. John Prasch told the board at a regular meeting that news accounts of federal Pay Board decisions would appear to qualify all teachers for their negotiated raises beginning next week.

"Personally," commented board member Ed Copple, "I'd like to pay them way back from the word 'go,' but we should follow the regulations."

Notify Teachers

He suggested that teachers should be notified that the board intends to pay teachers' their negotiated contracts subject to the limitations as spelled out in the federal regulations.

The regulations apparently preclude payment of retroactive pay for the freeze period.

Prasch said news accounts would appear to allow Lincoln raises, although he noted that individual teachers would receive increases in excess of 5.5%, the limit set by the Pay Board.

Within Limits

But Prasch said the average raise rate would fall within that limit.

He said unless official regulations are published soon, the school board may have to hold off on the increases for another month, since the payroll run begins in mid-month.

Taking the suggestion of Copple and others, the board voted to notify teachers that raises would be paid, subject to the official regulations.

On another matter, the board was given a copy of proposed revisions in the personnel handbook.

Maternity Leave Clause

Among the proposals is one which would establish, for the first time, a maternity leave clause for nontenured teachers. Current policy permits only tenured teachers leave due to pregnancy.

The revisions would also call for prior board approval for employes who wish "to participate in political activity which might interfere with the normal work requirement so that the necessary adjustments can be made."

Another revision would change the procedures for evaluation of both tenured and nontenured teachers.

The board also approved two pilot projects — one with Nebraska Wesleyan University for student teacher internships and another with the Lincoln Area-wide Model Project on Aging to provide "drop-in" lunches to senior citizens.

Full-Time Basis

The NWU project would establish a semester-long internship on a full-time basis for prospective teachers as a replacement for the current part-time student teacher arrangements.

The "drop-in" lunch project will be tried at Park Elementary, where senior citizens from the area will eat a school-prepared lunch just after the regular student lunch time.

The schools will be paid 75 cents per lunch, sadi Prasch, for the January through June experiment.

In a letter to the schools, a coordinator for the project said it would provide a way to support the ability of older citizens to live independently and ensure good nutrition.

'Have Reservations'

"We have reservations about parts of it," Prasch said of the project. But he suggested it be tried in an attempt to discover what problems may ensue.

During a discussion on organizational changes in Lincoln schools, Copple said he was concerned that the new "open classroom" concepts may do harm to the "under-achiever" whose motivation may not be high enough for less structured classrooms.

On a separate matter, the board approved a request for continuation of the Career Opportunities Program after hearing that 70% of the low-income citizens had remained in the program.

The federal program puts low-income citizens into the classroom as aides and gives them a stipend to study at the University of Nebraska.

SCARF ADMIRED

Pat Nixon, the First Lady, admires a scarf held by singer Dionne Warwicke Tuesday at the White House. The scarf duplicates a sheet of the 1971 Christmas Seals, a sheet of which is held by John H. Biddle, president of the National Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association. The seals were presented to the First Lady along with the scarf. The event kicked off the annual fund-raising campaign by the association.

3 Air And Sea Disasters Abroad Kill Scores Of Soldiers, Seamen

By The Associated Press

Air and sea disasters abroad killed scores of soldiers and seamen Tuesday.

A French freighter broke up in battering Atlantic waves off the coast of France and most of her 39-member crew was feared lost. Forty-six Italian paratroopers perished along with six British airmen when their British transport plane crashed and burned in the Ligurian Sea.

Four Brazilian airmen were killed in collision of two military planes over an air base south of Rio de Janeiro. And off the coast of South Africa a British tanker caught fire, but all aboard were safely picked up by rescue vessels.

The French freighter Maori was off the west coast of France, headed for Le Havre when she broke up in 50 mile-per-hour winds that stirred up 15-foot waves.

Conditions Treacherous

Rescue vessels that steamed in to aid the Maori reported weather conditions so treacherous that crewmen's bodies bobbing in the waves could not be pulled aboard. The 9,400-ton freighter, whose home port is Dunkerque, went under about 580 miles west of La Rochelle. Her crew was French.

French air force pilots searcing for survivors reported sighting large chunks of the hull, an overturned launch. lifebelts and sailors swimming for their lives in the waves.

The German freighter Wegesak lifted one crewman to safety. But the craft reported sighting 13 bodies floating in their lifebelts.

'Men Swimming'

The pilot of a French rescue plane who dropped an emergency raft and other supplies soon after the ship broke up said "there was wreckage on the surface and men swimming about the wreckage. We didn't see a single lifeboat floating normally with men aboard. I think saving them is going to be very tough."

The Maori was sailing from New Caledonia, a French overseas territory in the Pacific, near Australia, with a cargo of nickel.

Maritime sources speculated that the nickel, in the form of bars, might have slipped its moorings during the storm and burst through the hull.

The Italian Defense Ministry said the British transport carrying Italian paratroopers was participating in routine military maneuvers with Italy. After taking off from Pisa bound for Sardinia, it crashed into the water a few miles from the port of Leghorn on Italy's northwest coast.

Authorities said all aboard were killed.

One Body Sighted

A ministry spokesman said only one body was sighted along with scattered pieces of the C130 Hercules transport craft. Helicopters and ships spent all day crisscrossing the storm-tossed crash site.

There was no evidence that any of the paratroopers had any time to bail out.

The captain of the British tanker off South Africa was able to telephone London that tragedy had been averted.

Meals On Wheels Helps Keep Old-Timers Healthy

Benkelman (AP)—Malnutrition, one of the worst enemies of old-timers and single persons living alone, is losing its battle in this southwest Nebraska community of 1,349 persons.

Opponents are a crew of civic-minded citizens giving freely of their time and talents. The end result is well-balanced meals where there would otherwise be none.

Now-retired hospital administrator Joe Laughlin and Dundy County Welfare Director Mrs. Ellis Gummere pioneered the project two years ago—shortly after the community of 1,400 completed its new medical facility.

"When Medicare came in, we saw a need to keep these old-timers out of the hospital as much as possible because of the limited amount of time they were covered," Laughlin said.

One of the biggest problems with a person living alone or an elderly retired couple, especially just after a hospital stay, is that they won't eat right and end up back in the hospital, Laughlin said.

So Laughlin, Mrs. Gummere, the hospital and the ministerial association got together and created "meals on wheels."

The program provides a complete noon meal five days a week, delivered to a person's home.

"Women from each church take turns delivering the food," explains kitchen employe Kathy Reiman. "Except for variations in diet prescribed by their doctors, we give them the same thing that we serve in the hospital," she said.

The menus are changed daily to give variety, and each meal is sold for a "no-profit dollar."

To qualify, a person must go through his doctor. If the applicant either can't prepare a balanced meal for himself or just hasn't been doing so, he's eligible for the program.

The money for the meals is paid either by the person receiving it or his family. A volunteer worker prepares statements at the end of the month so it won't be a bother to the hospital.

There are no federal, state or local tax dollars involved.

After two years and now looking in from the outside, Laughlin is sure he made the right decision in bringing the hospital in on the program.

"It's a wonderful thing, especially in this part of the country, where old people are our principal industry," Laughlin said. "Do you realize that between 65% and 70% of our patients out there were on Medicare?"

Meeting Cancelled

The Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Board did not meet Tuesday night because they didn't have a quorum.

Steps Needed To Implement Ruling Being Studied By School District

Lincoln Schools Supt. John Prasch said Tuesday the school district is investigating the steps which would be necessary to implement a court decision ordering reinstatement of a tenured teacher.

But Prasch also said no decision had been made on whether the school board would appeal the U.S. District Court ruling which struck down the board's decision to fire Robert L. Johnson.

Prasch's comments came after a board executive session on the Johnson matter and other personnel items.

Last spring, the school board voted to uphold Prasch's recommendation to terminate Johnson's contract on grounds of alleged incompetency and failure to give evidence of professional growth.

But Johnson took the case to the federal court, and last week Judge Robert Van Pelt ordered the school district to reinstate the former junior high school mathematics teacher.

Johnson, who no longer lives in Lincoln, told The Star last week from his home in Maryland that he does not intend to return to the Lincoln school system.

He is now working in the Washington office of the National Education Association.

During the board's public session Tuesday, two board members commented that teacher appraisal procedures should be changed in light of the Johnson decision.

During a discussion of proposed changes in a handbook for school personnel, Robert Wekesser suggested teacher appraisal practices "need more work after that court decision."

"This won't work at all," he said of the old system.

"This court decision has changed a lot," agreed Ed Copple. "We need to look at the whole thing."

School officials, in cooperation with representatives of the Lincoln Education Association, have been drafting a new teacher appraisal format.

Profits Gone With The Smoke

Bradford, England (AP) — The owner of the first pub in Britain to ban cigarettes said Tuesday his profits have gone with the smoke.

Takings in Jack Shower's tavern have slumped $125 a night. He says he has lost $6,250 a year turnover in cigarette sales.

But Showers, 70, is determined to soldier on.

"I have no regrets," he said, "even though my pocket is being hit hard.

"I still think smoking is a filthy habit."

Two Youths Are Honored By Optimists

Two Lincoln youths were awarded trophies and certificates of appreciation from the Sunrise Optimist Club at a Wednesday morning breakfast.

Jill McMaster, 2421 Ryons, a student at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, and Larry Adams, 1500 N. 52nd, a junior at Northeast High School, were presented with the awards in connection with Youth Appreciation Week (Nov. 8-14).

Jill is president of the NU Red Cross and is a Lancaster County representative to Mexico in the Friendship with Latin America program. She is a member of the YWCA, Chi Omega sorority, and Pi Sigma Alpha, a political science honorary. Her activities in other areas include being a Blue Bird leader in a poverty area.

Larry has been active in Red Cross since junior high, including work as a Red Cross volunteer at the Madonna Home. He is a member of Junior Achievement and the St. Elizabeth Community Health Center Medical Explorers. Larry also has had a part in a Northeast High School play.

End Of Madison Racing?

Perhaps the biggest news coming out of the Wednesday-Thursday session of the Nebraska Racing Commisision in Omaha will be an announcement of the death of another Nebraska race track.

The last to go under was Mitchell. Before that it was Alliance. This week, it could be Madison.

There are few people in Nebraska racing, who are held in any higher regard than is Butch Moyer, who runs the Madison strip, and it may not be an easy decision for commissioners Harry Farnham, Robert Logsdon and Bob Berggren to make.

But aside from keeping it around for sentimental reasons, little evidence can be presented to show that racing should be continued at the Northeast Nebraska plant.

With its small purses and its small mutuel handle, the track in recent years has done little to benefit either horsemen or the state.

Because it barely makes it past the million-dollar exemption figure, Madison in the last five years has contributed only $11,542.72 in the form of the four per cent pari-mutuel tax to the state treasury.

This is less than any of the other tracks have contributed in a single year.

Economy Up At Tracks

If the nation's economy is supposed to be in trouble, you couldn't tell it at Nebraska race tracks where patrons bet nearly $8 million more in 1971 than in 1970.

A total of $69,975,449 was pushed through the betting windows at the six tracks this year compared with $61,356,625 in 1970.

And that helped the state coffers out by better than $300,000. The tracks paid the state treasury $2,523,017.96 in pari-mutuel taxes this year compared with $2,214,739.04 last year.

Each bettor at the track this year bet $3.4 more than he did a year ago with the average bettor spending $59.67 in his trip to the track in 1971 compared with $56.33 in 1970.

The two-year comparisons by tracks for 1970 and 1971 in mutuel handle, attendance and pari-mutuel tax paid to the state:

Huskers, Irish In Sugar Bowl

Oklahoma City sports columnist Bob Hurt a couple of weeks ago gave his major bowl pairings predictions, which didn't include Nebraska.

Fellow Oklahoma City columnist Volney Meece has also joined the guessing game and he has Nebraska meeting Notre Dame in the Sugar Bowl.

His other pairings: Orange — Oklahoma vs. Alabama; Cotton — Arkansas vs. Penn State; Gator — Auburn vs. Georgia.

His Gator Bowl matchup isn't very likely since Auburn and Georgia meet this week and bowls are extremely reluctant to make rematches. And the ink was hardly dry on the predictions before Arkansas was apparently out of the Cotton Bowl.

Tagge Heisman Candidate?

The National Observer lists Nebraska quarterback Jerry Tagge as one of seven players it considers leading candidates for this year's Heisman Trophy.

"Lack of a Heisman publicity campaign will hurt him," write Douglas Looney observes, "but some voters likely will look to the Cornhuskers for 'somebody' to list and that somebody is Tagge."

Others on the National Observer list are Greg Pruitt of Oklahoma, Pat, Sullivan of Auburn, Johnny Musso of Alabama, Ed Marinaro of Cornell, Chuck Ealey of Toledo and Sonny Sixkiller of Washington.

Boos Turn To Cheers For K-State Quarterback

. . . MORRISON EARNS BIG EIGHT BACK OF WEEK HONOR

Kansas City (AP) — A month ago, people were booing Dennis Morrison, the Kansas State quarterback.

Everybody except Wildcat Coach Vince Gibson, Morrison's teammates and die-hard Kansas State students had lost confidence in the quarterback.

Morrison completed only 16 of 47 passes for 177 yards in the Wildcats' first three games. The left-handed passer connected on 15 of 32 for 178 yards against Colorado but went back to his old ways against Kansas, hitting on only six of 24 for 97 yards.

Morrison's passing life changed when the Wildcats returned to the pro set offense with two wide receivers and dropback passing against Oklahoma. Morrison threw 29 strikes on 48 tosses for 297 yards against the Sooners.

Since then, his rise has been tremendous. Morrison hit 23 receivers on 43 pitches for 303 yards and three touchdowns in last Saturday's second half turnabout 35-23 victory over Oklahoma State.

For his performance, Morrison was named Big Eight Conference Back of the Week in a unanimous vote by a panel of sports writers.

"Dennis Morrison is a completely different player than at the start of the season," Gibson said. "He's confident, he's got poise and he can scramble. What a difference a quarterback makes. Morrison is now a leader."

Morrison said the comeback against Oklahoma State "was the biggest thrill of my life. If we play like we did against Oklahoma State and score 35 points, we might beat Nebraska Saturday."

Morrison hit five of seven passes, including a 55-yard strike to Bill Butler, on Kansas State's 99-yard drive for its first touchdown against the Cowboys. He was four for four on another successful drive.

Morrison now has moved into the lead in the Big Eight passing race with 119 completions on 252 passes for 1,470 yards or 163.3 yards a game.

Gibson said Morrison "has amazed us. He is throwing as good now as Lynn Dickey did." Dickey established every Big Eight passing record before he completed his career at Kansas State last season.

Other players nominated for Back of the Week were Jack Mildren of Oklahoma, Johnny Rodgers of Nebraska, Lorenzo Brinkley of Missouri, Cleveland Vann of Oklahoma State, Bo Mathews of Colorado and Kenny Page of Kansas.

WRITERS NAME TORRE MVP

. . . Stargell NL Runnerup

New York (AP) — Joe Torre of the St. Louis Cardinals, who led the major leagues in batting with a .363 average and in runs batted in with 137, was an overwhelming choice Tuesday as the National League's Most Valuable Player for 1971.

The 31-year-old third baseman received 21 of the 24 first-place votes cast by a special committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Torre drew a total of 318 points compared to 222 for runnerup Willie Stargell, the majors home run king and outfielder for the world champion Pittsburgh. Pirates, who got the remaining three first-place votes.

Outfielder Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves finished third with 180 points.

Torre became the 12th Cardinal to win the MVP award in the 40-year history of the BBWA award. Bob Elliott of the 1947 Boston Braves and Ken Boyer of the 1964 Cards were the only other NL third basemen to win the award.

Torre also led the National League in hits with 230 and total bases with 352 to become the first NL player to lead in four categories since Stan Musial of the Cardinals led with eight in 1948.

Torre, a Brooklyn, N.Y. native, is a younger brother of Frank, a former Milwaukee Braves and Philadelphia Phillies first baseman. The 6-foot-1, 210-pound former catcher-first baseman was a fat 240-pounder in little demand just out of high school. But the Braves signed him in 1960 for their Eau Claire farm club.

The right-handed slugger joined the parent club the next year, and followed the team in its move to Atlanta in 1966.

A holdout in 1969 and engaged in a feud with Braves management, he was traded to the Cards March 17, 1969 for first baseman Orlando Cepeda.

"I'm very happy," he said at the time. "You certainly can't have any complaints when you get traded to a club like the Cardinals. I think maybe I'll be able to make some money with them."

After winding up the 1970 season with a .325 batting average, second in the league, Torre signed for the 1971 season for an estimated $115,000. He moved to third base in 1970 when regular Mike Shannon became ill.

Torre, the first Cardinal to lead the league in hitting since Musial's .376 in 1948, missed only two games in 1971. He was hitless in only 28 and only three times went two games without a hit, never after May 19. He had two hits in 42 games, three in 21, four in three and five in one.

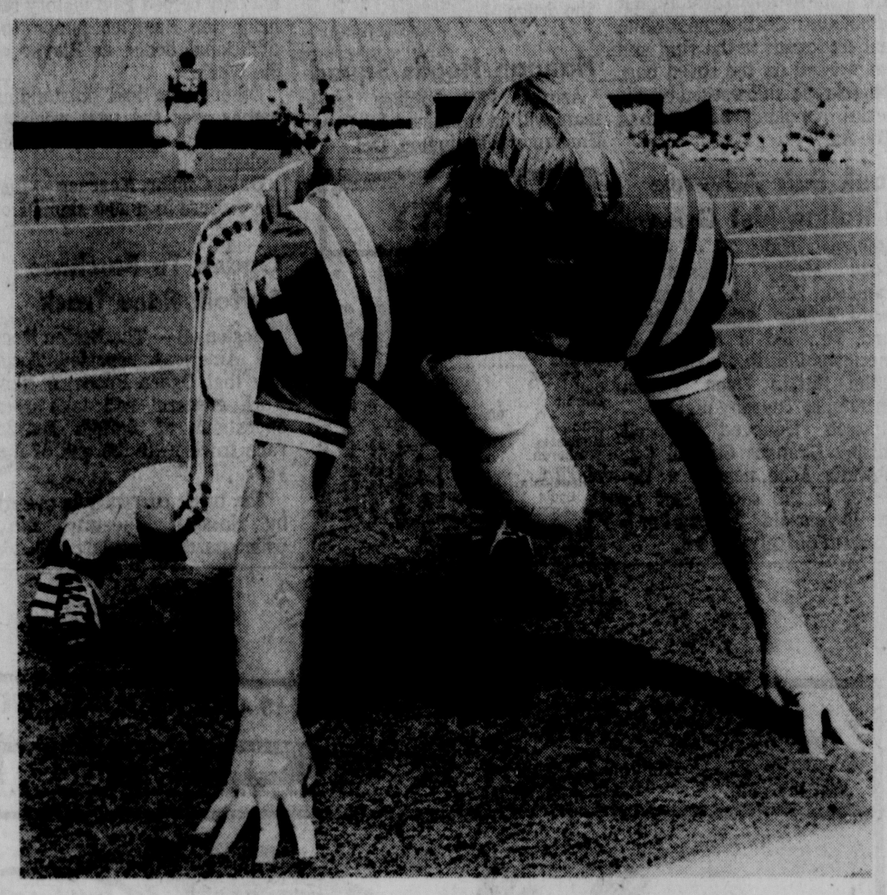

He drove in the winning runs 22 times during the season.

The 30-year-old Stargell led the majors in home runs with 48, one more than Aaron and twice as many as Torre. It was Stargell's performance early in the season that put the Pirates in front and led them to the East Division title over runnerup St. Louis.

Bobby Bonds of San Francisco finished fourth and the Pirates' Roberto Clemente was fifth in the balloting.

Ferguson Jenkins of the Chicago Cubs, who won the Cy Young award as the NL's best pitcher, was seventh. In all, 26 players received votes but only the top three finishers were named on all 24 ballots.

Votes were awarded on a basis of 14 points for first, nine for second, eight for third etc. through 10 places.

BACK HOME ON DEFENSE . . . Bill Janssen.

Wandering Black Shirt Janssen Returns Home

. . . BROKEN ARM AFTER WINNING CENTER JOB GETS HIM BACK ON DEFENSE

Bill Janssen is finally at home — on the defensive unit where he started his career at Nebraska.

One of the most versatile Huskers, Janssen has logged time at three other positions between his freshman season and now. Including his high school career at Grand Forks, N.D., he has had experience at six spots, three on offense and three on defense.

I've just played defense so long, that's just the side of the game I enjoy more," he says. "It's the better side to be on."

A letterman junior, Janssen came to Nebraska in 1968. After playing linebacker and offensive tackle during his prep career, he spent his freshman season with the Huskers as a defensive tackle.

He moved to defensive end at the start of his sophomore season, and had logged enough time there by the middle of the year to earn his first letter. Then, in midseason, he was switched to offensive guard, where he finished the year.

During spring ball that year, he was given a try at center, and had won the starting job until a broken arm in practice the week before the season opener with Southern Cal forced him to sit out the entire year.

At the time, Janssen called the setback "about the biggest disappointment of my life.

"Coach Devaney gave me a choice when I had my broken arm of where I wanted to play, and I told him I'd play anywhere," he says.

So, Janssen is back with the Black Shirts at the right tackle spot. He feels his strength is rushing defense.

"My pass rushing leaves a lot to be desired," he says. "Myself, I'm not satisfied with it. I try to get better at it all the time, but I just feel stronger against the run."

He explains that he would rather face linemen who are bigger than himself because they are generally slower.

"Bob Childs of Kansas was the biggest guy I've faced this year, but not necessarily the best," he says. "Surprisingly, the bigger guys haven't hit us that hard this year."

Janssen's nickname, "Shot," came from his aggressive play during his first year at Nebraska.

"When I was a freshman, I had a lot of hits on guys that weren't really playing, guys that were out of the play or just kind of watching," he explains.

"I hit some guys and hurt them when they weren't expecting it, so some guys started calling me "Cheap Shot," now they've dropped the "Cheap" part, but the "Shot" just stuck."

—LOPSIDED NELSON SETBACK CAUSES SHIFT—

Alliance Club Tops Class D Ratings

By VIRGIL PARKER
Prep Sports Writer

While the eight-man high school football top ten ratings list features but one minor change this week, Alliance St. Agnes assumes the leadership role as a major shift occurs in the Class D ranks.

Nelson, No. 1 in Class D most of the season, suffered a lopsided 40-0 setback to Red Cloud in its final outing.

Though the loss came at the hands of a Class C club, the scope of the score drops Nelson to third in the current rankings.

St. Agnes, which itself has tangled with seven Class C outfits in nine outings, earns the top spot on the basis of a perfect record which includes four shutouts in the last five games.

Dix, which also moves up a notch at Nelson's expense, has an even more spectacular record on the surface, but none of the nine Dix foes came from the heavier populated division.

Dix, despite playing all Class D teams, lays solid claim to the runnerup position after winning eight of its nine games via the shutout route. The other was an easy 45-6 victory.

In all, Dix scored 259 points while giving up but that one touchdown.

After Nelson, the order of the next four teams is the same on the Class D list as a week ago. Silver Creek, an early leader, jumps back in at No. 8, while Spalding Academy moves up from tenth to ninth.

Newcastle fell from favor, while Elmwood slips from eighth to tenth after losing to a good Class C club.

Callaway, Wolbach and Cambridge appear to have the best chance of cracking next week's final ratings.

The eight-man top ten, with Giltner again rated No. 1, is the same as last week through the first six positions.

Paxton, seventh a week ago, disappears after losing to Stapleton, which is now ninth.

Cedar Rapids and Mead advance at Paxton's expense, while Doniphan remains tenth.

If further changes occur in the final ratings, East Butler, Elk Creek and Humphrey are among those waiting at the head of the line in the wings.

K-State Offense Presents Problems

By HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

By going back to his former style of offense, Kansas State coach Vince Gibson will present the Nebraska defense with some problems they haven't faced since last year's game with the Wildcats, Husker head coach Bob Devaney said Tuesday.

"We haven't played anyone this year that you can compare with Kansas State's offense," Devaney said. "The only thing that resembles it is last year's Kansas State offense."

The special problems the K-State offense poses for the Huskers are in the area of defending against a dropback passer.

"It's harder to get to a dropback passer than it is the play action type passers we've faced the past two weeks in Colorado and Iowa State," Devaney explained.

"This is particularly true in long yardage situations because the Kansas State line is used to protecting the passer while Colorado and Iowa State are not because of the play action passes they normally try to throw."

Instead of the kind of offensive plays the Huskers have been seeing, Devaney noted that this week they'll be looking at draw plays, screen passes and dump passes.

"Our linebackers are apt to have a busy day," he predicted, "because they throw a lot of passes to their backs, but they also have the speed to go deep on you."

The Husker coach also pointed out that in the past three weeks Kansas State has scored 28, 28 and 35 points and added, "That's quite a few points, particularly that 28 againts Oklahoma because the Kansas State defense wasn't presenting the offense with the ball much."

Oklahoma in racking up 75 points against the Wildcats scored 11 of the 12 times it had the ball.

Despite their poor showing against Oklahoma, Devaney pointed out that the Kansas State defense has always been tough on his Huskers.

"Even though we scored 51 points against them last year, we had a lot of things go right for us," he noted. "We had a lot of interceptions that day; what did Lynn Dickey throw, about seven interceptions, didn't he?

"We didn't just haul off and blow them out of the tub."

Defensive tackle John Dutton, whose 6-7 frame has been inserted into the lineup on passing situations, returned to work with the Huskers Tuesday and Devaney said he apparently recovered from a sprained ankle suffered in last Saturdays' win over Iowa State.

However, linebacker Bill Sloey and reserve slotback Glen Garson, both with leg injuries, remained question marks for the Kansas State game. "We may not make a decision on them until Thursday," Devaney said.

—LINDSAY MAIN BREAKAWAY THREAT—

Links Bow To Omaha Westside

Omaha — It isn't easy to point to one man and say he made all the difference in the world between winning and losing, but that's just the case with Omaha Westside's fullback Steve Lindsay.

Lindsay made the difference in the score as Westside thumped the Lincoln High Links 26-14 here Tuesday afternoon in a make-up game at Westside Stadium.

Lindsay scored two of Westside's four touchdowns on runs of 63 and 53 yards then kicked two extra points to cap his performance. He also gained 169 yards in 13 carries for a 13 yard average.

The Links' Bob Knollenberg almost made up the deficit caused by Lindsay by intercepting two Westside passes and catching six from quarterback Bob Folsom for 89 yards and one TD.

Westside took the lead in the first quarter when Jim Mierendorf crashed over from three yards out and Lindsay booted the extra point to make it 7-0.

Then Mark Brock caught a 24 yard pass from Bill Latenser and Lindsay broke away for his 63 yard jaunt and added one more PAT to make it 20-0 before the Links could get on the scoreboard.

The Links recovered a fumble on Westside's 43 yard line and marched to pay dirt in nine plays with Buster Barber slashing off-tackle for the tally and Pat Weixelman adding the point after to finish the first half trailing 20-7.

When the Links returned to the field in the third quarter, Knollenberg picked off a Latenser pass then six plays later, snagged an 11 yard aerial from Folsom which made it 20-14 after another Weixelman extra point.

But the Links hopes were shattered in the fourth period when Lindsay swept right end for 53 yards and the final score of the contest.

Orioles Lose Contest

Kyoto, Japan (UPI) — Home runs by Sadaharu Oh, Kokuji Nagaike, Yutaka Fukumoto and Shigeo Nagashima backed the seven-hit pitching of underhanding Hiashi Yamada Tuesday as the American League champion Baltimore Orioles were defeated 8-2 by a combined team of the Yomiuri Giants and Hankyu Braves.

Ali Believes In Staying Active

. . . NOT WORRIED BY FRAZIER STALL REPORTS

Houston (AP) — Muhammad Ali said Tuesday he wasn't worried by reports that champion Joe Frazier might not fight him again until 1974 and in fact, he didn't care if he ever fought Frazier again.

"I'm above all that now," Ali said. "I don't have to have some white commissioner say to me, 'You are the champion, go and be praised.' I am accepted by the people."

Ali said he was remaining active and making money but Frazier was not.

"Between now and 1974, I've got $3 million dollars to make in commitments," Ali said before a training session for his Nov. 17 fight in the Astrodome against Buster Mathis.

"He's going around with his band making $37.50 a night," Ali said. "He needs me for the gate."

Ali said it was embarrassing for Frazier to sign for a fight with someone else because he couldn't get the same guarantee that Ali said he draws.

"Frazier can't demand what I demand," Ali said. "You think Frazier could get a $300,000 guarantee to fight Buster Mathis?

"It means a lot to a fighter when he gets as good as me and Frazier, what people think about him as a champion," Ali said. "Look at Floyd Patterson. It took him three years to settle with Ingemar Johannsen.

"I came right back and fought Liston again and I stayed active. In three years I fight 15 times."

Ali said he thought Frazier was afraid of him.

"No man could take the beating I gave him and not think about it," Ali said. "Sometimes I'll get hit by a sparring partner and maybe it'll hurt my lip a little and I'll get to wondering 'can he do that again?' "

Ali said if he were a hungry fighter he might have a different attitude about fighting Frazier.

"But my case is so different," he said. "I don't need the title to get acceptance. I'm just an exception. There's not anyone else like me."

Ali skipped rope and worked on the speed bag Tuesday but did not spar. Mathis meanwhile went six rounds in the ring and also worked on the speed bag, skipped rope and worked on his special punching bag named "The Ali."

Former Player Charges Saints With Negligence

New Orleans (AP) — A former New Orleans Saints' defensive back filed a $1 million suit against the National Football League team Tuesday charging that he was injured in a game while under the influence of drugs administered by the club physician.

Elijah Nevett filed the suit in Civil District Court. He claimed he broke some ribs in the Nov. 8, 1970 game but was sent back in after being given several injections which made him woozy.

He injured a knee later in the game and, he noted, it has kept him from earning a living in the sport. Nevett was traded to Oakland earlier this year but failed to make the team.

The suit said Dr. J. Kenneth Saer and coach Jerry Smith were negligent for sending him into the game after being given the drugs.

Beatrice's Klaus Captures Player Of The Week Honors

. . . TOUCHDOWN PASSES KEY TO WIN

By VIRGIL PARKER
Prep Sports Writer

Coach Bob Starr's Beatrice Orangemen were basically a run-oriented team this fall while storming to a fine 7-2 record.

As a result, bruising ball carriers Paul Cramer and Bill Armstrong get most of the headlines.

But last Saturday night, when Beatrice stunned defending state champion Lincoln Southeast, 28-26, it was the touchdown passes of less-heralded quarterback Dan Klaus which got the Orangemen out in front at the start and then won the game in the closing seconds.

The two crucial Klaus aerials not only helped gain victory but bring the Beatrice junior the additional honor as Player of the Week.

Others who had outstanding games over the past weekend and deserve special recognition include:

Dave Connor, Kearney — Led the defense in a 10-0 shutout of McCook. It was the second straight blanking of a foe for the Bearcats, the first time they've turned such a trick since 1966.

Steve Applebee, Clay Center — Just a freshman, Applebee dazzled by running for two touchdowns and passing for another in a 24-0 victory over Exeter.

Lynn Adam and Maynard Schriner, Wilcox — Playing side by side in the offensive line, this pair consistently opened up the holes for the Wilcox ground game to secure a 28-27 victory over Sumner and complete a perfect 9-0 season.

Jeff Didier, David City Aquinas — His touchdown runs of 12 and 63 yards sparked Aquinas to a 12-6 triumph over heavily favored Columbus Lakeview.

Gary Vavrina, Clarkson — Had a hand in three TD's while leading Clarkson to a 35-12 win over Dodge and gave the Red Devils a unblemished 9-0 campaign.

Tom Butzke, Gresham — He crashed over with just 45 seconds remaining to give the Blackbirds a 28-24 victory over Hordville.

Dale Young, Hampton — Finished the season with over 1,000 yards as he gained more than 100 yards and scored two touchdowns in a 60-19 win over Monroe.

Bobby Baker, Battle Creek — Passed for all three Brave TD's in a 22-8 triumph over Humphrey St. Francis.

Randy Benish, Norfolk — A top passing quarterback, Benish turned to the run in guiding the Panthers to a 29-6 win over South Sioux City. He dashed for three TD's while gaining 112 yards in 11 carries.

Joe McMeekin, Columbus Scotus — His two placement boots were the difference in a 14-13 victory over Ord and an 8-1 regular season record.

Williams Hired By Cleveland

Cleveland (AP) — Former Philadelphia Eagles' head coach Jerry Williams was hired as an offensive backfield coach by the Cleveland Browns Tuesday.

He will direct the team's passing attack.

Williams was fired Oct. 5 by Eagles' owner Leonard Tose after the team lost its first three games. He was replaced by Ed Khayat.

Browns' owner Art Modell said Williams was hired at the urging of Head Coach Nick Skorich to fill the void left by the death of offensive backfield coach Howard "Sonny" Keyes on Oct. 21.

Frillman is in a six-way tie for fourth while Crawford, who has not won in six years on the PGA tour, carries a two-stroke lead over Jeff Voss, the Michigan champion, into the second day of this tourney over the 7,171-yard Palmetto Dunes Country Club course for the PGA sectional championship.

Curtis Backs NU

Washington (UPI) — Nebraska Sen. Carl T. Curtis and Oklahoma Sen. Henry Bellmon, both Republicans, have reached agreement on a wager on the Thanksgiving Day football game between No. 1 ranked Nebraska and No. 2 ranked Oklahoma.

The stakes: A dinner of Nebraska pheasant and roasting ears and a dinner of Oklahoma quail and pecan pie.

In a letter to Curtis, Bellmon said: "While there is little doubt in my mind about the outcome of the Nov. 25 encounter, I thought perhaps a little friendly wager might make the game more interesting."

Bellmon covered all the angles and said in case of a tie, "I guess we will have to let the vice president decide who gets what."

In his reply accepting the bet, Curtis said: "What better Thanksgiving Day could one look forward to than to attend the church of his choice on Thanksgiving morning and then go to the football game and watch the proud and good Oklahoma football team go down to defeat? I think they are a good football team but not quite good enough."

Sooner Punters Practice More

Norman, Okla. (AP) — University of Oklahoma punters put in extra time on the practice field Tuesday as the Sooners settled down to preparations for next Saturday's football game against Kansas here.

Coach Chuck Fairbanks said he was pleased with the Sooner workout and added: "We had a real good practice. Everyone is enthusiastic. I think we got quite a bit done today."

The Sooner squad spent a long session on protection for the passer and on the triple option.

Fairbanks, who has not been entirely pleased with his team's kicking game recently, put punters Joe Wylie and John Carroll through extra drills. Fairbanks said he hopes to get Wylie back in action punting in order to allow Carroll to concentrate on other kicking chores.

NHL Approves New Franchises

New York (AP) — The National Hockey League's Board of Governors voted Tuesday to grant new franchises to Atlanta and Long Island with the teams scheduled to begin play next season.

In addition, the governors concluded two days of meetings by voting unanimously to add two additional franchises for the 1974-75 season. That would swell to 18 the number of clubs in the league which only five years ago had just six teams.

The price of each of the four additional franchises is $6 million—the same amount it cost Buffalo and Vancouver to join the league last year.

Schembechler Mad At Press

. . . BUT SAYS COACHES EVEN WORSE THAN WRITERS

Ann Arbor, Mich. (AP) — Bo Schembechler, University of Michigan football coach, has said many times he doesn't believe in polls until a season has ended.

Yet he seems to be peeved that his third-ranked Wolverines are not rated No. 1.

"We will never be No. 1 in the nation because of the press," he insisted angrily at his weekly press luncheon.

He teed off on the press soon after he arrived, criticizing one Detroit writer for a story saying Michigan State still has a chance to go to the Rose Bowl.

MSU upset ninth-ranked Ohio State 17-10 Saturday and received quite a bit of newspaper space, more so than Michigan, which clobbered a weak Iowa team 63-7.

"Why don't you put two men on MSU and nobody on Michigan," Schembechler growled at the reporter, referring to press box coverage.

Bo is usually cordial with reporters, but he apparently believes his Wolverines, with a 9-0 record and impressive offensive and defensive statistics, deserve more publicity.

They lead the Big Ten with a 6-0 record and can clinch a Rose Bowl berth with a victory Saturday at Purdue.

The next week, they close the regular season with a game against arch-rival Ohio State, which is 5-1 in the conference and can still win or tie for the title. MSU is 4-2 and in third.

Of the two wire-service polls, one is of sports writers and broadcasters and the other of coaches.

Asked what he thought of the coaches' poll voting opinions Schembechler said, "They're worse than the writers."

Cleveland Signs Ken Aspromonte To Head Indians

Cleveland (AP) — Ken Aspromonte, a former journeyman Major League infielder, was named manager of the Cleveland Indians Tuesday and stressed the team would insist on strengthening "two or three positions" in any trade involving star pitcher Sam McDowell.

Gabe Paul, the club president, announced that Aspromonte had signed for the 1972 season. Salary terms were not disclosed.

Aspromonte, 40, will lead a team that lost 102 games in the 1971 season to tie the 1914 club as the losingest team in the Indians' history.

He succeeds Johnny Lipon, who was named manager when Alvin Dark was fired last July 30. Lipon's contract was not renewed at the end of the past season, and he signed as a coach with the Detroit Tigers.

Conference Championships Up For Grabs

Twenty-two high school football games remain on the prep slate.

All but three will decide conference championships and many will have a great effect on the final divisional top ten ratings to be published next week.

Class C pacesetter David City must face Class B rated Albion again in a Central Ten showdown, despite an earlier 28-6 victory.

Class D's new leader, St. Agnes, tangles with Bayard again for the Panhandle "C" title, though claiming a 16-0 triumph the first time around.

Others who will have another go are Hebron (16-6) against Wymore Southern for the Southern Nebraska crown, and Dorchester (20-0) versus Davenport in a Pioneer Conference playoff. All the previously mentioned games are slated Wednesday.

Friday's playoff schedule includes a Clarkson (18-14) rematch with Battle Creek in the Mid-State, and two eight-man championship clashes. Stuart, a 14-6 winner in the regular season, faces Cedar Rapids again for the Sandhills Gateway title, while Culbertson, which bombed Hayes Center 44-14 earlier, will try to do it again to take home the Southern Frontier trophy.

Texas Coach Asks For Change In Rule

Austin, Tex. (UPI) — Texas football coach Darrell Royal said Tuesday he will back a move to change Southwest Conference recruiting rules that now give Oklahoma and other non-conference schools an advantage over league teams.

Under present rules, SWC schools cannot personally contact high school prospects until after their final high school game. But Oklahoma has a full time recruiter who visits the Texas prospects, and that recruiter isn't bound by the SWC rules since Oklahoma belongs to the Big Eight Conference.

"I'm speaking as one person, not for the Southwest Conference, but I'm going to try to get relief on when we can start contacting people," Royal said.

"I'm in favor of what we're doing now (in limiting contacts), but it's foolish to pass rules that restrict only ourselves. We as a conference can't afford to sit back and let schools from other states come in and contact boys. The late start that we get is too much for us to overcome in some instances," he said.

The University of Oklahoma, which soundly defeated Texas this year, shows 33 Texans on its roster and 10 Texans among its starters.

"I don't like to recruit all year round," Royal said. "I've been one over a long period of years to stick with the rules we have, but I've changed my mind."

Royal now advocates dropping the special SWC rules and letting conference schools abide by the NCAA rules, which permit coaches to contact prospects after their junior year in high school.

There has been speculation, however, that such a move would prompt the University Interscholastic League, which regulates Texas high school athletics, to pass its own rules eliminating any kind of early contact.

That idea also appeals to Royal. "Anything the UIL can do to stop it I'm in favor of," he said.

Turning specifically to Oklahoma, which has intensified its recruitnig in Texas since 1967, Royal said "I don't blame Oklahoma for doing what it is. There's nothing illegal in what they're doing."

Gibson Glad Safety Returns

Manhattan, Kan. (AP) — Declaring that Nebraska has one of the top passing games in the country, Coach Vince Gibson said Tuesday he was glad that Ron Coppenbarger has returned to the Kansas State football team.

After a 95-minute workout, Gibson said the junior safety had helped the Wildcats secondary tremendously, noting Oklahoma State completed only four passes on the K-State first team Saturday.

The Wildcats defeated Oklahoma State 35-23.

Gibson said Nebraska, the nation's No. 1 team, is the type that likes "to mash you." He said Kansas State cannot "let them knock us out of there" next Saturday when the teams meet.

Hunting Land Opens

Lands at the Valentine Fish Hatchery will be open to deer hunting with the start of the firearm season on Saturday and will remain open to archers through Dec. 31, reports the Game and Parks Commission.

Worster, Miller Fined By Court

Hamilton, Ont. (AP) — Steve Worster, 22, and Seth Miller, 23, two former players with the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League, pleaded guilty in a provincial court Tuesday to charges of possession of marijuana. They were fined $100 each.

Worster was an All-American at the University of Texas before becoming a professional.

Miller and Worster were placed on voluntary waivers with no recall by the football club after their arrest. They returned to the United States following their initial court appearances Aug. 27.

$1.4 Billion Transit System Wins Voters' OK In Atlanta

Atlanta (UPI) — A proposed $1.4 billion rapid transit system won narrow approval in Atlanta and its major suburban county Tuesday night, although voters in two other outlying counties elected to stay out of the system.

Populous Dekalb County voted 38,886 to 35,752 for the system, and with only two precincts uncounted the vote in Fulton County (Atlanta) was 54,425 to 52,723 for the system.

Voters in Gwinnett and Clayton Counties overwhelmingly rejected the proposal, which meant that it would not run in those counties.

Voters actually were balloting on a one-cent sales tax hike to help build the system. The rapid transit plan was defeated three years ago, when it would have been financed by property taxes.

MARTA

The plan called for the Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority (MARTA) to buy the Atlanta Transit System by mid-1972 and then drop fares from 40 cents to 15 cents, buy 490 new buses and set up more and longer routes.

MARTA also pledged to build by 1980 a 70-mile rapid transit system that would include 56 miles of rails and 14 miles of busways.

The federal government promised to pay two-thirds of the cost of building the system and made a $22.6 million installment payment last week.

Operational Subsidy

But since federal funds cannot be used to match local money to subsidize the 15-cent fare, the sales tax was proposed to pay for the operations subsidy, expected to require years.

MARTA proponents, led by Mayor Sam Massell, contended a rapid transit system was needed because of Atlanta's badly congested traffic and the city's high car accident rate.

Opponents charged that MARTA would become an uncontrollable "superagency" and that the one cent sales tax would raise more money than needed.

Some opponents also argued the system would help speed urban blacks into white suburbs.

OLD ENEMIES MEET

Old enemies met again at the Air Education Museum in Milwaukee when famed World War I combat ace Eddie Rickenbacker, 81, checked out a replica of a German Fokker DR-1 triplane. The Fokker triplane is one of the types of German aircraft Rickenbacker flew against in Europe. Rickenbacker took a side trip to see the museum from Chicago where he was to attend a dinner in his honor.

Alleged Bribe Attempt Involves Utah Bigwigs

Washington (AP) — Senate sources said Tuesday subpoenas are being issued to the Utah Democratic Party chairman and two other prominent Utah men, commanding their testimony about an alleged bribe attempt linked to special-interest legislation involving El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Earlier, Commerce Committee Chairman Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., announced an investigation of alleged pressure tactics by El Paso Gas to gain support for the legislation.

The bill before Congress would in effect, sanctify a 14-year-old merger involving El Paso which the Supreme Court has ruled four times violated antitrust law.

Magnuson said the subpoenas would be issued but did not name the recipients. Sources said those named in the subpoenas, to be issued Wednesday, were Democratic chairman John H. Klas, a vice president of Continental Bank in Salt Lake City; Lawrence A. Higgins Jr., executive vice president of the bank and Daniel Berman, campaign manager for a 1972 Democratic congressional candidate.

Meanwhile, Magnuson said the committee will defer action on a bill offered by Magnuson and 10 other Western senators to allow El Paso to retain its Northwest pipeline facilities acquired in a 1957 merger with Pacific Northwest Gas Co.

At the same time, Sens. Alan Cranston and John V. Tunney, both D-Calif., scheduled a news conference for Wednesday to announce their opposition to the bill. Until now they have not taken a firm position.

Sources said the two planned their announcement before the subpoena developments arose.

Klas told The Associated Press he did not know subpoenas were being issued. "This is the first I've heard of it," he said, adding "I've got to follow my lawyer's advice and I can say nothing about the matter."

Neither Higgins nor Berman, campaign manager for Wayne Owens, was immediately available for comment.

The incident under investigation was related at a committee hearing on the bill Oct. 22 by Beverly C. Moore, an associate of consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Moore told the committee he had been informed by an unnamed Utah banker, who he said also had political connections, that an El Paso company representative had offered the bank a $100,000 interest-free deposit in exchange for his support for the bill.

Moore declined to name the principals publicly, asserting that the banker refused to come forward partly for fear of economic reprisals.

"On the basis of preliminary staff investigation of the incident," Magnuson announced Tuesday, "we are issuing subpoenas to obtain the testimony under oath of the principals involved in the alleged misconduct so that the members of the committee can evaluate the validity and significance of the allegations."

At the Oct. 22 hearing, an official of El Paso denounced the accusation as "an absolute, unmitigated lie."

J.C. Penney Co. tells admen newspapers are irreplaceable

The proper handling of a retail advertising account starts with knowing that the "backbone of our advertising effort is still our newspaper advertising," the nation's foremost advertising agency executives were informed this week by William R. Johnson, sales promotion manager, J. C. Penney Company.

Johnson, in an address Thursday (May 13) at the 1971 American Association of Advertising Agencies annual meeting at the Greenbrier in West Virginia, told the agency heads there is no getting around newspapers as the retailer's basic medium for advertising.

"Some advertising people, especially in agencies," he said, "believe this is because we (retailers) are too inflexible in terms of media, and are inclined to think too traditionally. Just try to tell this to our store managers who know what it takes to attract customers to the stores.

Don't cut budgets!

"Our store managers know that their newspaper ads produce sales dollars. They are perfectly willing, even eager, to use radio and television in carefully selected lines, but don't try to cut back on their newspaper budget. Broadcast is something you do with new money when increased advertising dollars are available to you."

Johnson said the effectiveness of newspaper advertising for a retailer is not hard to understand. "All you have to do," he said, "is notice how your wife reads her paper. She reads it like a shopping news. Sure she reads the news, the editorials, but if she wants to outfit her kids with shoes for school, she looks through the retail ads in the paper to find out who's selling what kind of shoes, at how much . . . or how much they've been reduced in price.

"Sometimes she even tears out the ad and carries it into the store. Every Penney store manager has seen this happen hundreds of times. He has yet to see a woman come into the store carrying a television commercial. And he cannot imagine a women sitting in front of a television set all day waiting for a children's shoe commercial. Can you?"

Immediate results

Johnson said "retail advertising has to work. It has to produce sales. So does national advertising have to work, but the difference is we find out, almost immediately. We know the next day if it produces. And so do our clients.

"When a store manager runs a children's shoe ad in Sunday's newspaper, he expects to see a crowded shoe department. The next day!"

The reason Penney decided to employ LaRoche, McCaffrey & McCall agency after 68 years of doing its own advertising was to help in preparing magazine and broadcast ads.

As far as newspaper advertising is concerned, Johnson said all ads are still being prepared by Penney's own Central Office advertising service department, which creates and produces 5,000 different newspaper ads each year. He said annual newspaper linage per its 1,700 stores runs from 8,000 lines in smaller outlets to over 2 million in the largest. "If we were an outside advertising agency, our newspaper billing alone would put us among the 20 largest agencies," Johnson declared.

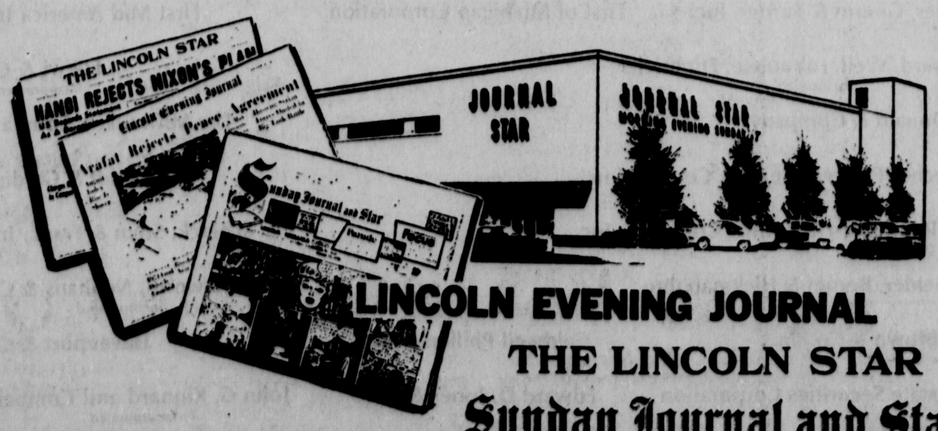

Agency's part in ads

He said the agency gets involved in newspaper advertising by supplying ideas on theme, layout and "their toughest criticism of the ads" produced by the Penney ad service staff.

Johnson said every retail operation in the country, whether a single store, several stores or a chain, could benefit from the help of an outside advertising agency.

In addition to making newspapers the top medium, Johnson said agencies will find other differences in handling a retail account, which he listed as follows:

- Speed. "Retail advertising presents deadlines that startle agency people."
- Volume. "The enormous volume of work changes in perspective. No ad is a masterpiece."
- Accountability. Every ad has to sell merchandise. No ineffective ad can be justified on the basis that "it creates a nice impression."
- Copy. "National ads can focus on a single item. Retail ads usually combine several items. It's a shame how many good headlines we have to throw away for this reason.
- Art. Retail advertising uses more art than photography. It's faster, and usually cheaper. The customer is trained to read them in a kind of visual shorthand."
- Television. "Our production costs have to be lower because in most cases our spots run for a much shorter length of time."

Selective Buying Buoys Stock Mart

New York (AP) — Selective buying in some recently depressed issues buoyed the stock market a bit Tuesday. Trading perked up a bit but remained relatively light.

Analysts said that while some investors still shopped for bargains left over from recent market declines, most investors found little incentive for market activity in the news background.

Many investors continued to stay out of the market waiting for some indication of a market trend and formal decisions by the Pay Board and Wage Commission, according to brokers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks managed a tiny gain for the day, closing up 0.37 at 837.91.

Advances outnumbered declines 717 to 642 among the 1,680 issues traded on the Big Board as 12.02 million shares changed hands. Volume, though light, was still an improvement over Monday's turnover of 8.52 million shares.

The New York Stock Exchange index of more than 1,300 common stocks closed up .04 at 54.16, while Standard & Poor's 500-stock average was up .07 at 94.46.

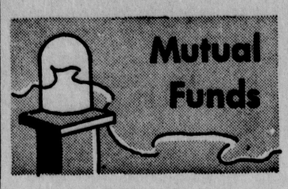

The Associated Press 60-stock average added .2 to close at 308.7. Industrials gained .2, rails dropped .2, and utilities added .7.

On the American Stock Exchange, the price-change index dipped .01 to 24.49, as 2.78 million shares were traded. Volume Monday had been 2.05 million shares. Of the 1,134 shares traded on the Amex, 461 declined and 354 advanced.

Royal Dutch Petroleum was the most-actively traded Big Board issue, closing up ½ at 34¼ on 195,000 shares including a block of 167,000 shares at 34.

A total of 83 blocks of 10,000 shares or more were traded on the Big Board, compared with a revised total of 49 such blocks Monday.

Corporate bonds were higher. U.S. governments were lower.

Conference With Students Sponsored By Executives

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

Merryle Rukeyser

Business Baiting

Corporate executives, properly concerned with the rebirth of a new style form of business baiting, which is sometimes disguised by seductive names such as consumerism, recently financed and participated in a Washington conference with college students.

This event paralleled a campaign of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to give insights to the public aspects of business in TV spots.

Such efforts are in line with this writer's recmmendation that those who control the pursestrings should use part of their resources to create a better understanding of the institution of competitive enterprise. Expenditures in truthful concept advertising can be justified as a means of protecting the moral franchise of private industry.

In this spirit, Stewart S. Cort, chairman of Bethlehem Steel Corportion, was the keynoter at Washington. Cort correctly took pride in the increased desire of various groups to communicate. It is a mistake, however, for business, suffering from a sense of original sin, to concede too much to its detractors. The aim should be a scientific approach which sets forth the truth about business and relations with employees, customers, suppliers, and investors.

Emphasis on Research

Thee should be greater emphasis on research. Too frequently so-called academic scholars assume that they discharge their duty by summarizing and collating the ex parte charges about the modern corporation appearing in documents of public hearings. A truly workmanlike role would be to go beyond such propaganda from whatever source to an objective study of the functions of the various parts of the economic body and their relationships to one another. In the setting of standards, business should inculcate the idea that with academic freedom should go a sense of academic responsibility. Part of the dissatisfaction of college students with the Establishment comes from emotional and biased prejudicial statements by half baked academicians.

Business should further open their doors to scholars for study and investigation.

Cort illuminated the prevailing confusion when he analysed the allegation that "business is overly concerned with profits and not with public responsibility."

It is misleading and demagogic to set profits versus "public responsibility." A law abiding company, selling useful products at fair prices and paying good labor rates, is per se socially useful and is discharging an important "public responsibility." The survival of the private corporation will not rest on incidental charities and "social" gimmicks but upon its total performance especially in its own niche.

It is silly to assume you can determine the truth by taking polls on the extent of misconceptions.

Must Recoup Costs

In order to stay in business, an enterprise must recoup its costs through price tags placed on the goods and services it merchandises. A company chronically in the red is in the process of losing its franchise. Costs include payments to direct employees, purchase of goods and services from others, invisible costs such as depreciation, incidental to the wearing out of corporate assets, and tax payments which contribute to the support of government. In addition, the surviving enterprise must recognize the cost of capital. Interest and amortization on bonds constitute a fixed cost, but the return on the equity—on stocks—consists of whatever is left over after all prior costs have been met.

Only the free market is equipped to determine the size of profits. Usually the big profit maker is the efficient producer. He treats fairly all elements—labor, customers, suppliers and investors—whereas the slim profit maker or the one with chronic losses wastes resources in inefficiency and sweats labor, exploits customers, defaults at times on suppliers, and disappoints investors

A major function of voluntary business, which links up with the creative mind in science, invention and engineering, is to instill discipline. Competent management gets others to produce better than they would without such inspiration and supervision.

(Mr. Rukeyser will be pleased to receive inquiries from readers concerning their financial problems. Letters with stamped, self addressed envelopes should be sent in care of The Lincoln Star. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Others, to the extent time permits, will be handled by mail.)

Staff Cut Is Planned By Anaconda

New York (AP) — Anaconda Co. says it plans to trim its staff, phase out several marginal operations and increase domestic copper production in an effort to recover from the los of its expropriated Chilean mines.

Anaconda President John B. M. Place said Monday the initial cost-cutting will save at least $25 million a year in employment costs. Several high level officials have resigned and the staff at New York corporate headquarters is in the process of being halved to 250 employes, he said.

The company is in the process of closing four plants of its Anaconda American Brass Co. subsidiary, employing about 300 persons, he said. The company has already indicated its intention to get out of the zinc business and possibly drop its lead business.

Copper production at the firm's three major western mines will rise to more than 250,000 tons annually for the next several years, while plans call for increasing annual capacity to 300,000 tons by 1975, Place said. Last year, production at the three mines totalled slightly over 242,000 tons, he added.

Attacks Against Non-Phosphate Detergents Hit

Indianapolis, Ind. (UPI) — A conservationist Tuesday termed "appalling" what he called "the shotgun attacks against non-phosphate cleaning compounds by the surgeon general and the Environmental Protection Agency."

Thomas E. Dustin, executive secretary of the Indiana division of the Izaak Walton League, made the comment in a statement prepared for presentation at a hearing of the Indiana Stream Pollution Control Board.

Dustin said "certain spokesmen for the federal administration and self-proclaimed experts . . . are trying to pull the detergent industry's financial investments out of the fire like so many chestnuts" by using "scare and terror tactics."

"They appear to have lumped the whole bag of non-phosphate detergents and other cleaning agents into a single target for vituperative assault, thereby serving no interest but the phosphate detergent investments," Dustin said.

Body Is Found In Salt Creek

The body of a 70-year-old Lincoln man was found Tuesday afternoon in Salt Creek in the area of Charleston and Sun Valley, according to police Capt. Robert Butcher.

Butcher identified the man as Allen Matejka, of 315 No. 18.

Butcher said the body was noticed by a University of Nebraska student who was jogging in the area.

Butcher said the body looked like it hadn't been in the water over 2 or 3 days and that an autopsy would be performed Wednesday to determine the probable cause of death.

Bid Rejection May Delay Sioux City Bridge Design

AMES, Iowa (AP) — A possible delay of at least six months in the design of the Interstate 129 bridge linking Sioux City, Iowa, with South Sioux City, Neb., may be caused by the rejection by state officials Tuesday of bids for borings to determine necessary footings for the span.

The Iowa State Highway Commission turned down a bid of $48,944 by the Nebraska Testing Lab, Omaha, Neb., to do the work because the figure exceeded by $18,000 the commission's estimate of cost.

The Omaha firm submitted the lowest of four bids which ranged to $121,000. The bids were opened by a consulting firm which is doing the design work for the state.

An additional bid was received after the official time of opening bids, and remained unopened.

Commission Vice Chairman Stephen Garst of Coon Rapids, said the span would cost about $15 million and a six-month delay could result in a $300,000 increase because of inflation.

Comparing that $300,000 figure with the additional $18,000 assessment to get the boring done before low water and ice make boring impossible, Garst said, "I'll bet the odds" indicating he would prefer to spend the additional $18,000 now to save the possible inflationary increase.

But his opinion was not shared by commissioners William O. Gray of Cedar Rapids, Robert Rigler of New Hampton and Harry Reed of Winterset as they voted to reject those bids and ask for new bids.

Jacobs Waives Right To Hearing In Slaying Case

Omaha (AP) — Robert Julian Jacobs, 31, accused of kidnaping and murdering 12-year-old Allen Schmidt, waived his right to a preliminary hearing Tuesday and will be charged in District Court.

Jacobs also is accused of kidnaping and stabbing Allen's brother Leslie, 10, on Oct. 16. Leslie has since been released from the hospital.

Judge John E. Murphy said formal charges against Jacobs would be read in open court on Nov. 24.

Assistant Public Defender Bennett Hornstein said the defense agreed to forego the preliminary hearing because, "We don't want any more publicity."

Woman Injured In 1-Car Crash

A Lincoln woman was listed in "poor" condition at St. Elizabeth Health Center with injuries she received in a one-car accident on 70th between South Wedgewood and A early Tuesday morning, according to police reports.

Police said Anne Magee, 46, of 7100 South, suffered a broken hip, broken ribs, a ruptured bladder and head cuts when the car she was driving went out of control, left the roadway and rolled over.

The woman was southbound on 70th when she lost control of her vehicle, went left of center into the ditch and then rolled over twice and came to rest on the lawn of East High School, police said.

Ulster Confronts Major Crisis Of Its 50 Years

The New York Times

By BERNARD WEINRAUB

Belfast, Northern Ireland — Torn by a new surge of urban guerrilla warfare, Ulster is confronting the major social and political crisis of its 50-year history.

Government officials, Roman Catholics and Protestants, moderates and extremists on both sides agree that Ulster faces a dramatic political shift that will result in London's assuming new initiatives and powers in this tormented province of the United Kingdom.

At the highest level of the Protestant-dominated provincial government there is growing anxiety that the semi-independent parliament at Stormont Castle will be suspended and some form of direct rule from London will take its place. With that the precarious dominance of the million Ulster Protestants over the half-million Catholics will topple.

'Crunch Situation'

"It is now a crunch situation," one senior official in the Northern Ireland government said Tuesday. "There is a feeling among Protestants — a real feeling — of the possibility of betrayal by Westminster."

Tom Conaty, chairman of the Central Citizens Defense Committee, a powerful group in the Catholic ghetto, said: "This thing is going to break. It won't go on. We're sick of violence but it's going to continue unless Stormont is abolished.

"Northern Ireland is like a 50-year toothache. Direct rule would be like going to the dentist. It will hurt for awhile but we'll get used to it."

Although the half-million Roman Catholic minority in Northern Ireland yearns for unification with the Irish Republic to the south, the immediate aim of Catholic leaders is an end to the Stormont parliament, which they view as dedicated to Protestant dominance.

The million Protestants in Northern Ireland — who fear that the republic in the south will eventually engulf them — view direct rule as a first step toward unification.

Internment Policy

What sparked the current crisis in Northern Ireland was the wave of arson, bombings and killings that followed the government's internment measures to root out the Irish Republican Army. Since internment began, three months ago Tuesday, a total of 96 persons have been killed, including 61 civilians, 28 soldiers and seven policemen.

The most recent incident occurred shortly before 5 p.m. Tuesday when a British soldier was shot and killed by a sniper.

Belfast itself is now a stricken city. Shops and pubs are boarded up at dusk. Buses stop running at 9:30 p.m. Airline service into the city is curtailed. By night, the city's darkened main street, Royal Avenue, is eerily silent except for the rumble of armored cars and voices crackling over military radios. Business in the center of Belfast has dropped more than 40% since internment.

As in Saigon, South Vietnam, residents and visitors avoid sitting beside windows for fear of being shot.

Packet Packing Pigeon's Pot Puzzles Police

Flint, Mich. (AP) — A Flint man reported to police that he found a stray bird among his homing pigeons Monday and discovered it had a packet and note attached to one leg.

The note read, "Please enjoy." Police said the green leaves in the packet were marijuana plants.

Joseph Emrick is housing the stray pigeon until police decide on their next move.

Man Is Injured In 2-Car Crash

A Lincoln man was being held for observation at Bryan Memorial Hospital with injuries suffered in a 2-car collision at 48th & Vine Tuesday afternoon, according to police officer Dennis Siegrist.

Siegrist said Loren Waggoner, 21, of 1025 C, suffered a concussion and head cuts when the vehicle he was driving was in collision with a car driven by Helen West, 47, of 7220 Starr.

Waggoner was westbound on Vine and the West vehicle was eastbound on Vine turning north at the time of the accident, Siegrist said.

Independence Voters Reject Increase In School Taxes

Independence, Mo. (UPI) — Residents of this Kansas City suburb, home of former President Harry S. Truman, Tuesday soundly rejected a proposed school tax increase that would have reopened the city's 25 public schools.

The outcome left uncertain the fate of 17,000 students who have been out of class since Nov. 1, when officials closed the schools because they lacked money to meet the November teacher payroll.

With returns in from all but one of the city's 12 polling places, plus absentee ballots, the vote was 8,070 in favor and 8,153 against, with a two-third majority needed for passage.

Officials had promised to reopen schools Wednesday if the increase were approved. But they said a defeat would keep them closed until month's end.

It was the seventh time in two years a 95-cent tax increase was defeated. During that time the only increase the school board got through was a 25-cent increase which came last year.

Contract Is Let

Burbank, Calif. (UPI) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. has obtained a $6.9 million Navy contract for continued operation of the Safeguard missile target test program. The job requires modifying old Polaris missiles so they can be fired from land as test targets for the Safeguard antiballistic missiles.

Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is six or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures gives you.

FIRMS EYE CHALLENGES

PROSECUTION CLAIMS . . .

Panther Newton Shot Policeman

Oakland, Calif. (AP) — Presenting its case against Huey Newton for the third time, the prosecution argued Tuesday that the defense minister of the Black Panther Party shot and killed an Oakland policeman four years ago without provocation.

The defense said the officer, John Frey, shot Newton in the abdomen when Newton began reading his constitutional rights from a book and Newton did not know what happened after he was wounded.

Opening arguments were made to a Superior Court jury trying Newton, 29, for the third time. He is charged with manslaughter.

His face red and shaking a finger two feet from Newton's face, Deputy Dist Atty. Donald Whyte said a bus driver would testify Newton used a 9-mm pistol to shoot Frey four times.

"You will hear the voice of John Frey as he blurts out the last moments of his life on a piece of tape — the last moments of what otherwise for John Frey was a most routine day of his life," Whyte said.

The prosecutor referred to tapes made from the policeman's patrol car radio transmitter.

Charles Garry, defense attorney, said after Frey stopped Newton's automobile in West Oakland, Newton read his constitutional rights from a law book

Frey, Garry said, called Newton a "nigger" and then "hit Mr. Newton, knocked him to his knees, pulled out his gun and shot him in the abdomen."

Garry objected again to the composition of the jury, saying "although 38% of Oakland is black, not one black person is on the jury." The judge admonished Garry not to refer to this.

Contracts Contain Inflationary Hikes

. . . PAY BOARD SET UP PATH

The New York Times

By MICHAEL C. JENSEN

New York — A number of companies across the country are studying the possibility of challenging inflationary second- and third-year pay increases that are built into their existing labor contracts.

The opportunity to challenge future increases that exceed 5.5% was made possible by a ruling Monday night of the Pay Board, which stated that contracts now in existence will be honored unless chlalenged by a "party at interest" or by five or more members of the 15-man panel.

Board May Do It

The Pay Board does not expect a large number of corporate challenges, and some businessmen feel the board could end up doing much of the challenging itself.

However, a number of corporate officials said they were studying a variety of approaches, although none was prepared to declare that a challenge would definitely be mounted.

One executive made it clear that there would be industry-wide discussions before a decision was reached. Another said he believed the Pay Board members would take care of any inflationary increases, so the role of the individual companies was "academic."

Another asserted that when a combination of cost-of-living increases and annual increases outstripped his company's capacity to recover such costs by raisnig prices, a challenge might be consdiered.

Some chaos in the challenges is anticipated if a large number materialize. "There are 100,000 contracts a year that are entered into," said an AFL-CIO spokesman, "and about 300,000 contracts in existence. That would take an awful lot of reviewing."

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co., for example, has 130 separate labor contracts .

Organized labor expects that challenges might be made by individual businesses where the corporations are relatively strong, but may be made by the business members of the pay board as a surrogate for industries that are fragmented, like the independent truckers who bargain with the Teamsters.

Anonymity Desired

Few executives were willing to talk for attribution on the sensitive subject. "Look, we're right in the middle of Bargaining with some of our unions," said the top personnel officer of a major eastern corporation.

"I can tell you that the first year increass we've already signed have run about 15%, and the three-year package was 20% to 30%. This same pattern exists industrywide, so there'll be a lot of looking at each other before we decide whether or not our company will be the one to bite the bullet."

Some executives said they would wait to see what sort of price increases are allowed by the Price Commission. One said he anticipated paying a cost-of-living increase next spring, with the anniversary date for a wage increase falling due later in the year.

If the cumulative impact of the increases became too great, he said, a challenge would probably be made.

A number of companies said their top personnel and labor relations executives were in Washington Monday for briefings on the Pay Board rulings.

No Problem To Some

Not all companies have a problem, it was pointed out Honeywell Inc. of Minnespolis, for example, is currently in the second year of a two-year contract with most of its unions, and thus has few problems with built-in increases.

Some such companies, however, said there will be a tendency to negotiate one-year contracts if the Nixon program is still in effect when their present contracts expire.

Many concerns, like the General Electric Co. in New York, were the scenes of conferences of labor and compensation specialists to determine a course of action.

Others, like the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. of Akron, Ohio, have contracts that don't step up until next summer, and said they are taking a wait and see attitude.

"Under our contract, the next step-up is in July, 1972," said a Goodyear spokesman. "It will be 26 cents an hour. That's about 6%, which isn't too far off the guideline, so we aren't doing anything right now."

Nuclear Plant Sites Attract 'Fishermen'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of four articles by Outstate Nebraska Bureau Reporter Sam Thorson on the atomic power plants and their effect on the Missouri River.)

By SAM THORSON
Star Staff Writer

Ft. Calhoun — Every Monday morning, Norm Stuckey and three warmly-dressed associates rise early and leave Lincoln for a fishing trip on the Missouri River.

Arriving at the Blair Marina at 9 a.m., they stow their equipment aboard two flat-bottom outboard boats and head downstream toward the Ft. Calhoun Nuclear Station, under construction near here by the Omaha Public Power District (OPPD), the integrated (wholesale-retail) supplier for the Omaha area.

Cruising along selected stretches on both riverbanks, the men employ breastwaders and seine, electric shock and long-handled landing net, to catch hundreds of fish ranging from minnows through river carpsucker and gizzard shad to flathead catfish.

Also At Brownville

On Wednesday morning the crew shoves off again, this time from Brownville, and spends the day fishing the river near the Cooper Nuclear Station, under construction by the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD), which provides power, largely wholesale, for the rest of the state outside the Omaha area.

Stuckey's job is not commercial fishing, but biological research for the state Game and Parks Commission. The Game unit is coordinating 12 governmental and private organizations in a study of the river's ecology — before and after the nuclear power stations begin production.

Nuclear power plants, besides producing cheaper power, have important environmental advantages over fossil-fuel plants, according to power spokesmen. Whereas fossil fuel plants burn "dirty" carbon-based fuels, releasing tons of hydrocarbons into the air, the "nukes" generate power by controlled, "clean" atomic reduction with no air pollution whatever, power officials say.

Tightly Monitored

Atomic Energy Commission standards provide that nuclear fuels and wastes must be tightly monitored so that radioactive emissions never exceed 5% of the natural or "background" radiation from the atmosphere and common building materials such as concrete, brick and timber. One could live next to a nuclear plant for 30 years, power experts say, without absorbing as much radiation as from a dental X-ray.

Yet environmentalists have warned of another potential source of environmental degradation connected with nuclear power production: thermal pollution. Nuclear reactors use atomically-heated steam to drive their power turbines, and require a coolant to reconvert the steam to water. The most convenient coolant is river water.

The power industry is quick to point out that river water spends less than a minute in a plant's cooling system, and is never exposed to radiation. And contrary to a widespread impression that the nukes pour "hot water" into the river, the coolant water at capacity operation is heated some eighteen degrees fahrenheit above the "ambient" or natural temperature of the river — meaning the heated water may even be quite chilly in the wintertime.

Could Cause Change

But with some 400,000 gallons of water a minute flowing through the cooling system of the larger Brownville plant, or 1-10 of the river's flow during its slack winter season, biologists say the ambient temperature could be raised enough to cause a substantial change in the river habitat, with an unpredictable effect on the entire biological food chain leading up to the larger fishes — including commercial species like channel catfish.

The attitude of environmental observers, then, is "test the water before you jump in."

Hence the 12-agency study, one of the first of its kind in the country. "None of us are opposed to the use of the water as long as it has no detrimental effect on the environment," said Stuckey's boss, Game and Parks Research Division chief Earl Kendle, whose job it is to co-ordinate the whole project.

"There has been a shortage of facts needed to decide whether the nuclear plants should be situated on the river or somewhere back off the river where the water would be cooled in a pond or cooling tower" before being released, Kendle said.

The outcome of the study will not be binding on OPPD and NPPD, he said, but will be published, and "could result in a stand by our commission or any of the others" regarding the location of the plants, or the desirability of pre-cooling the water before it is released.

(Next: Sampling done above and below plants.)

Labor Criticizes Wage Controls

Miami Beach, Fla. (AP) — AFL-CIO leaders voiced mounting criticism Tuesday of new federal wage controls in reactions ranging from caution to a call for a general protest strike of the labor federation's nearly 14 million members.

"We have introduced a resolution for the AFL-CIO convention opening Nov. 18, to take whatever action is necessary, including a national work stoppage or general strike," said the executive board of the 500,000-member Amalgamated Meat Cutters Union.

"The Pay Board has robbed scores of thousands of our members of fairly negotiated and noninflationary wage increases which were due to be paid in September under agreements worked out more than a year ago," the Meat Cutters said.

Its pay hikes were blocked by the wage-price freeze imposed by Nixon Aug. 15 and presumably cannot be paid retroactively without a special ruling from the Pay Board.

"Under the guise of 'fighting inflation,' the Pay Board majority has taken money out of the pockets of hard-working and hard-pressed food workers and put it in the treasuries of immensely wealthy corporations," it said.

'Freeze Into Poverty'

"In addition, the 5.5% pay increases ceiling has the effect of freezing millions of Americans into a state of poverty," added the Meat Cutters statement.

The Meat Cutters and several construction union leaders urged AFL-CIO President George Meany to quit President Nixon's 15-man labor-industry-public Pay Board, which Monday ordered a general 5.5% limit on future pay hikes.

The five labor members of the Pay Board, including Meany, were outvoted 10 to 5 by the industry and public members in the decision which also ruled out most retroactive pay for the current 90-day wage-price freeze and indicated some scheduled pay hikes could be rolled back.

"If President Meany wants to resign from the Pay Board, he has my support," said President Edward J. Carlough of the 150,000-member Sheet Metal Workers.

But some other construction union chiefs, including three on the AFL-CIO Executive Council, cautioned against a labor walkout from the Pay Board at least until more details and specific decisions on wage hikes are available.

The three council members who contended labor could better argue its case from within the board were President Peter Fosco of the 600,000-member Laborers Union, Maurice Hutcheson of the 900,000-member Carpenters, and S. Frank Raftery of the 135,000-member Painters Union.

Board 'Stacked'

But Raftery charged that the Pay Board was "stacked" against labor, and Iron Workers President John Lyons, another member of the Executive Council, said if decisions of the board continued on a 10-5 vote against labor, "it would not make much sense to be on the board. The vote might as well be 10 to nothing."

President Charles H. Pillard of the 950,000-member International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and other labor leaders expressed fear that the Pay Board's provision for possible rollback of previously negotiated wage hikes would amount to nullifying legal labor contracts.

These could involve millions of workers and billions of dollars in wage hikes in steel, telephone, trucking, construction and other industries in which three-year contracts have already been negotiated with wage hikes coming due later this year and next.

District 145 Voters Reject Bonds Again

For the third time voters of Lancaster County School District No. 145 at Waverly have rejected a school bond issue.

In the latest special election Tuesday, a $1,875,000 bond issue lost by 27 votes. The unofficial tally was 880 for, 907 against. Ten absentee ballots could not change the outcome.

The funds this time were intended for a new elementary school at Waverly, and for the addition of six classrooms and a cafeteria and dining area to the elementary school at Eagle.

Last March voters turned down a $1,290,000 bond proposal, and a year earlier a $1,992,000 bond issue was defeated.

East Butler Bonds Nixed

Lincoln Star Special

Brainard — By only three votes, residents in the East Butler School District 2-R Tuesday defeated a $200,000 bond issue for a two-story addition to the existing school building in Brainard.

The unofficial vote was 382 for and 385 against.

A spokesman in the Butler County clerk's office said the total includes mail ballots as they were all in at the time of the counting Tuesday night and officials were given the go-ahead to open them and include them with the tally.

Police said an explosive ripped through the automobile of Prof. Nguyen Van Bong, chairman of the anti-Communist Progressive Nationalist Movement.

Legislative Council To Forego Full Meeting

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislative Council's executive board Tuesday formally decided to forego a full meeting of the council this year to receive legislative study committee reports.

The council is composed of all 49 senators and normally assembles prior to each legislative session to hear committee reports and recommendations.

But most senators agreed that the Legislature's move to annual sessions rendered such a meeting this year unnecessary.

Recommendations from the study committees will be presented to the 1972 session in bill form, and time may be reserved for committee reports while the Legislature is in session.

Sen. William Swanson of Lincoln, chairman of the five-member executive board, said a poll of senators showed 31 opposed to a full council meeting. Three favored such a session, one was undecided and the remainder did not respond.

In other business, the board approved a list of prospective architects for the proposed new University of Nebraska fieldhouse and hired an assistant clerk of the Legislature for the 1972 session.

Dennis Gemar, 27, of Omaha, a former staff attorney for the revisor of statutes in Colorado, was employed as Clerk Vincent Brown's assistant effective Dec. 1.

A graduate of the NU College of Law, Gemar will receive $1,000 a month. His appointment will be subject to review prior to conclusion of the 1972 session.

The board decided to inform the State Building Commission that it has formally approved all five prospective fieldhouse architects proposed by NU's Board of Regents.

The list includes Leo A. Daly Company, Davis-Clark and Associates, Dana-Larson-Roubal and Associates, Kirkham-Michael and Associates, and Henningson, Durham and Associates.

Plans and architects for the fieldhouse must be approved by the executive board, according to legislation enacted earlier this year.

Nixon Says Foreign Aid Necessary To Peace

(c) New York Times News Service

New York — President Nixon, speaking at a Republican dinner here Tuesday night, said the world peace he believes is in sight would be imperiled if the Senate fails to restore the foreign aid program. Nixon also chided Congress for not acting on his domestic programs. (More on Page 25.)

Jews' Plight Pooh-Poohed

Washington — A House subcommittee investigating the plight of Soviet Jews was told by a State Department witness Tuesday that Jews in the Soviet Union were not living in a state of terror nor had their condition worsened in recent years. In its testimony, the department spokesman said he was attempting to counter the impression that Soviet Jews were undergoing unusual ordeals.

3 Chinese Go To U.N.

United Nations, N.Y. — Three members of the six-man Chinese advance party went to the United Nations for the first time where they conferred with officials and met with other diplomats. (More on Page 12.)

White House Optimistic

Washington — The White House said it was optimistic over the progress of its economic program, but labor leaders, led by George Meany, denounced the wage guidelines adopted by the Pay Board. A spokesman said, however, that the labor members of the board would attend the next meeting. (More on Page 1.)

Companies Eye Challenge

Washington — A ruling by the Pay Board that said that future wage increases in excess of the 5.5% guideline would be allowed unless challenged prompted a number of companies to begin studies of such challenges against increases contained in signed contracts. (More on Page 1.)

Exceptions To Be Claimed

New York — Unions whose members lost wage increases during the freeze announced plans to make special claims to the Pay Board for exceptions from the retroactive adjustment restriction included in the wage guidelines.

Health Training Bills Passed

Washington — Congressional action on two bills designed to provide more than $7 billion for the training of more doctors, dentists, nurses and other professionals was completed when the House passed them. (More on Page 24.)

Lindsay Offices To Open

New York — Deputy Mayor Richard R. Aurelio resigned Tuesday to set up a national network of John V. Lindsay headquarters, ostensibly to "assess" the New York mayor's presidential prospects.

Rehnquist Challenged By Civil Rights Men

Washington (AP) — Spokesmen for civil rights groups struck Tuesday at William H. Rehnquist, one of President Nixon's Supreme Court nominees, and challenged testimony he gave to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

But they took no stand either for or against Nixon's other nominee, attorney Lewis F. Powell Jr. of Richmond, Va.

An administration spokesman defended Rehnquist against allegations of racism.

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., counsel for the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights and a spokesman for Americans for Democratic Action, called Rehnquist "a laundered McCarthyite."

"He is a lawyer without compassion for blacks and other minorities and a lawyer who never once has spoken up for the Bill of Rights," Rauh told the committee.

Also testifying for the conference, Clarence Mitchell said the nomination of Rehnquist, an assistant attorney general, was "an insult to Americans who support civil rights."

A Foot In The Door

Through Rehnquist's nomination, said Mitchell, director of the Washington bureau of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, "the foot of racism is placed in the door of the temple of justice."

Mitchell and Rauh were the leadoff witnesses as the committee, after completing its questioning of the nominees, began taking testimony from about 30 persons who have asked to be heard.

The Justice Department, meanwhile, denied that Rehnquist is or ever was a member of the ultraconservative John Birch Society.

Rehnquist submitted his affidavit denying Birch membership to the committee Tuesday afternoon and Sens. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., both indicated their acceptance of it.

But Rauh and Mitchell said his denial should not be allowed to end the matter and asked the committee to look further into it.

This brought a rebuke from Kennedy who told Rauh "your suggestion is completely unwarranted and uncalled for."

Kennedy went on to say that as one who has some reservations about the Rehnquist nomination he feels that allegations about Birch membership are not serving the cause of those who may oppose the nominee on other grounds.

"You have left an atmosphere that I think is rather poisonous," Kennedy told the witnesses.

Rehnquist's record in the racial field was defended by Arthur A. Fetcher, a former assistant secretary of labor who now is with the U.S. delegation to the United Nations. He is a Negro.

In a speech to a Republican fund-raising dinner at Phoenix, Ariz., Monday night, Fletcher cited Rehnquist's role in the so-called Philadelphia plan through which the administration has sought to increase employment of blacks in the building trades.

Nader Says GM's Secrecy Better Than CIA's

©The New York Times

Washington — Ralph Nader told a Senate subcommittee Tuesday, "We know more about the CIA . . . than is known about the internal workings of GM (General Motors)."

The consumer advocate attacked virtually all aspects of corporate secrecy as the small business subcommittee on monopoly opened a series of hearings on confidentiality of business information.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., said that of the world's 100 leading "money powers," measured in terms of either gross national product or net sales, a recent study by the Congressional Research Service showed that for the first time more are corporations than countries, with 51 businesses and only 49 nations listed.

Nader cited a wide range of corporate information that he said should be available to the public, the government and other businesses. He said financial, product, environmental, employment and tax information on major corporations and their activities should be readily accessible and suggested the creation of a national corporate data bank to store and aid in the release of such information.

Nader said it was also necessary that corporations and trade associations make available information on their political activities, costs of government contracts and who owns the major American companies.

"The FTC (Federal Trade Commission) has data showing that if the leading oligopolistic industries were broken up into smaller units it could mean a 25% drop in prices," Nader asserted as he attacked federal agencies for aiding companies in keeping information secret rather than trying to disclose such data.

Several New Ones

Nader made a number of recommendations on corporate secrecy practices to the committee. While some of the proposals had been presented before by Nader, such as making corporate income tax returns public and increasing disclosure of corporate activities, the consumer spokesman detailed several new plans. Among these were the following:

—Legal definitions of "trade secrecy" and "confidentiality" that would set forth what could be kept secret under the regulatory acts and administrative regulations that apply to business activities.

—A standard that any information submitted by a business to any governmental unit should be available to the public in absence of a showing that a business' need for secrecy outweighs the public right to know the information.

—Corporations should be required to report sales and profits on each individual line of products or services they sell, rather than being able to consolidate such figures in one report.

—Sanctions should be provided against government officials who fail to disclose information that should be public under the freedom of information act. He suggested that such sanctions might include responsibility for costs of suits to compel disclosure, as well as possible suspension of those officials from their positions.

"This information is critical to the future of the country," Nader said. "It will affect the most fundamental issues that face us."

Tentative Agreement Made In Colorado Prison Strike

Canon City, Colo. (UPI) — A tentative agreement was announced Tuesday in a week-long strike of 1,000 prisoners at the Colorado State Penitentiary.

Prison Warden Wayne K. Patterson said the agreement included no concessions, but said he would personally study requests made by prisoners through a new prisoner advisory committee.

The prisoners had demanded better food and a general upgrading of prison life

Patterson said the agreement with the prisoners was made Monday, but announcement of the settlement was withheld to ensure the tense prison situation would calm down Tuesday.

Patterson and the five-member prison committee met several times Monday to iron out the agreement.

27.6% Slash In No-Fault Car Insurance Premium Proposed

Boston (AP) — A sharp decline in claims under Massachusetts' no-fault automobile insurance plan has led Gov. Francis W. Sargent to recommend a 27.6% reduction in next year's premium rates.

If Sargent's recommendation is approved, the state's no-fault plan will have reduced the cost of compulsory bodily injury insurance by 42.6% in two years. The 1971x premium rates were decreased by 15% from the 1970 level.

The Massachusetts Insurance Division has said automobile liability insurance claims filed in the first six months of 1971 dropped 34% under the new law. The average cost of an individual claim fell 52%.

Sargent's recommendation will be submitted to the State Insurance Department at rate hearings set for Friday.

Industry Suggested 18½%

Because of its savings under the no-fault law, the insurance industry has recommended an 18.5% reduction, comapred to Sargent's recommendation for a 27.6% drop.

A modified no-fault plan, applicable only to compulsory bodily injury liability coverage, went into effect Jan. 1.

The plan provides for settlement of claims under $2,000 out of court. Under the plan, the motorist's own insurer pays him, regardless of who is to blame in the accident.

The governor has signed into law a bill extending the no-fault concept to property damage insurance.

Sargent said the Insurance Department also will recommend a 35% reduction in rates for commercial vehicles.

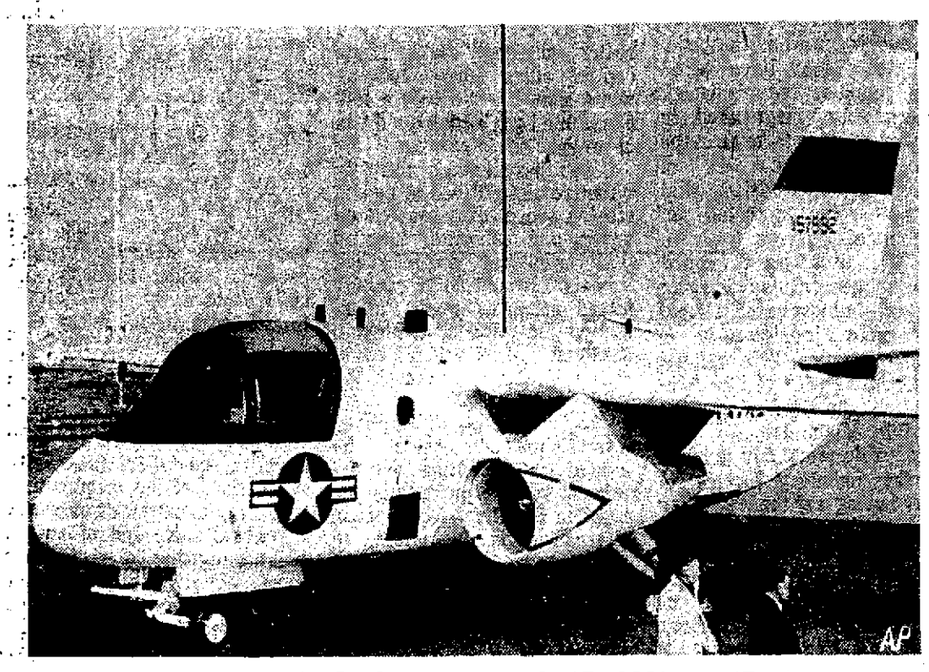

7.8% Hike Under Old Way

The department's "studies show that under the old system, increases of some 7.8% (in property damage rates) would be in order" next year, Sargent said.

"This contrasts with recommendatons made by companies for increases of some 13.6%."

The governor said, however, that the extension of no-fault to property damage "will prevent any increase."

The Insurance Department also is looking into the possibility of rebates on this year's premiums or further cuts next year beyond the 27.6 per cent recommended by the governor, because of the savings to the insurance industry.

NAVY GETS NEW SUB-HUNTER

Newsmen get a look at the Navy's newest anti-submarine airplane, the S3A, at its first public display. Shown at the Lockheed plant in Burbank, Calif., the aircraft will carry homing torpedoes, mines, depth charges, rockets and missiles. The new plane has a range of more than 2,000 miles.

Accident Rate High At Kansas City Southern

(c) Washington Star

Washington — A Midwestern railroad, whose management has been accused by the Interstate Commerce Commission staff of draining rail assets to finance other business ventures, is one of the least-safe railroads in the United States, according to a government report.

But a spokesman for the conglomerate, Irvin Hockaday, a vice president of Kansas City Southern Industries, said the government study did not mean that the railroad had skimped on maintenance expenditures. In fact, he said the railroad had outspent the industry average for the last five years on maintenance of the trackway and structures.

The Federal Railroad Administration's annual compilation of accident statics shows the Kansas City Southern Railway averaged 34.33 accidents per million miles in 1970.

With the exception of a small Illinois line, the Illinois Terminal Railroad, the KCS figure was the highest of all Class 1 railroads — those lines with $5 million or more in revenues each year.

But the report shows that of the 110 accidents on KCS last year, 88 were derailments — and of these, 49, or more than half, were due to "defects in or improper maintenance of track." Calculations showed that on this basis KCS had 15.2 accidents per million train miles that were due to track conditions.

Only the financially ailing Missouri-Kansas-Texas (MKT) Railroad came close to the KCS rate for accidents due to poor track conditions with 14.4 per million miles. MKT also forms the base of a conglomerate, KATY Industries.

Third worst on the basis of track conditions was the Chicago and North Western Railway, owned by the Northwest Industries conglomerate, with 8.6 accidents per million miles due to poor road bed.

A check of Federal Railroad Administration accident reports shows that starting in 1965 KCS has shown an increase in the overall number of train accidents per million miles every year with the exception of 1967. The 34.3 rate for 1970 is more than triple the 9.5 rate in 1965.

The management of Kansas City Southern Railway founded its conglomerate concern, KCS Industries, in 1962 to aid the railroad in diversifying into nontransportation businesses.

He Can't Explain It

Hockaday said in a telephone interview from his office in Kansas City, Mo., however, that while he could not explain the climbing accident rate, the company had increased expenditures on maintenance of way and structures 70% from 1961 to 1970.

By comparison, he said, the average rate of increase of such expenditures by Western railroads generally during that period was 14%, and by U.S. railroads over-all was 20%.

"It doesn't seem to me that you can attribute the comparison here to failures to spend money on maintenance of way when we've outspent on a district and total U.S. railroad basis," he said.

Free Medical Care Law To Be Effected

Washington (AP) — The administration moved Tuesday to implement a 1967 law requiring states to provide free preventive medical care for about seven million poor children eligible for Medicaid.

Top priority for medical screening, diagnosis and treatment goes to children under the age of six. The services are to be extended to all other eligible children under the age of 21 by July 1, 1973.

The regulation will be effective 90 days after publication in the Federal Register.

Cost of the new proposal is estimated at $20 million this fiscal year ending next June 30, $40 million in fiscal 1973 and $200 million in fiscal 1974.

The bill for the original proposal was estimated at $900 million to state and federal governments, which split costs about equally under the $6.2-billion-a-year Medicaid program.

Treatment Required

All participating states will be required to treat children for defects in hearing, sight and dental work "for relief of pain and infection, restoration of teeth and maintenance of dental health subject, however, to such utilization controls as may be imposed by the state agency."

Only Mississippi, Tennessee and Virginia now routinely treat those defects, HEW officials said. Nineteen states provide some visual care and 20 treat dental problems.

A new regulation applies to 48 states, the District of Columbia, Guam and the Virgin Islands. Alaska and Arizona do not participate in Medicaid.

The final program differs from the original by setting minimal standards rather than requiring treatment for all disorders, HEW officials said. Its coverage varies according to each state's Medicaid plan, but promises federal matching funds for more extensive services for children even if not provided to adults.

Periodic Complaints

Since then-President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the legislation as an amendment to the Social Security Act on Jan. 2, 1967, there have been periodic complaints from congressmen and welfare organizations that it was not being implemented.

EVENTS
IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

A week of absence from the office was concluded with a Sunday visit in rural Nebraska, in search of the colorful and clever pheasant. The pheasant population, for those interested in it, appears to be about average and the cost of this meat for the table probably still comes out to an astronomical amount per pound.

Most families could live for months on T-bone steaks for what most men spend trying to put a pheasant in the larder. But it is good sport and wives should recognize that the sport of the thing is worth something.

Aside from pheasants, what you see in rural Nebraska is a lot of agriculture. This statement would catch no one by surprise but the fact is that most of us take agriculture for granted, perhaps knowing that it has some problems but seldom seeing anything personal in those problems.

Over a period of time, one notices quite a change in the character of the countryside. Corn, wheat and milo fields seem in some areas to stretch forever across the land, running as far as the eye can see and disappearing at the horizon.

There was a time when such immense fields of grain were the exception rather than the rule. Right now, the harvest of this grain, except wheat, of course, is well ahead of average. Most crops have now been gathered into storage.

The harvesting has been done, however, with costly and complicated machinery. If corn or milo has been blown over by the wind, special attachments scoop it up and feed the grain into a giant hopper so that precious little of the crop is left in the fields.

Farmers have poured many thousands of dollars into the machinery with which they now plant and harvest their crops and you see one farmyard and field after another dotted with the new equipment. Along with this, you see fewer and fewer farmsteads but better looking ones.

Agriculture has been in a long period of survival of the fittest and the effects of this are obvious. Irrigation is another practice that is evident throughout the state, even though there are hundreds of thousands of acres of land that remain to be brought under such a practice.

One also sees in rural Nebraska less and less wasteland. There are large tracts set aside from grain production but they represent good land held in reserve and covered with a healthy crop of grass.

The timber areas are largely disappearing and the barren wastelands of the past can hardly be found at all. Even the hills are being leveled to facilitate irrigation and to conserve the soil.

As you see all this and contemplate the tremendous technological advances on the farm, you have to marvel at the whole process. It is, indeed, a fantastic transformation that has taken place in the heartland of America but most people do not appreciate it, much less understand it.

★

The Geneva newspaper, The Nebraska Signal, recently repeated a statement it attributed to an eastern newspaper. The eastern newspaper was of the opinion that a $600 million increase in federal payments to farmers next year would mean an increase in consumer food prices.

If grain costs more, it reasoned, all the products of grain, including meats, would cost more in the grocery store. How stupid can people be?

The only increase farmers will get is in the area of acres taken out of production. For what they grow, the government will loan and guarantee exactly what it did this year, barely enough to eke out a living.

And the eastern establishment gives no thought at all to the strides that have been made in agricultural technology to provide the American people with high quality food at bargain prices in today's inflated economy. One doubts if the story of farming will ever be understood until it is too late.

Stanley-Livingstone Saga Reaches Back A Century

WASHINGTON — One hundred years ago, on Nov. 10, 1871, Henry Morton Stanley found David Livingstone at Ujiji on Lake Tanganyika. Stanley and Livingstone. To many people they are only characters in a 1939 movie remembered mainly for its climactic line, "Dr. Livingstone, I presume." But the dramatic meeting between the American journalist and the Scottish explorer-missionary did more than provide one of the most famous newspaper scoops of all time. It also changed the course of African history.

By the mid-1860s, David Livingstone's journeys of discovery and his battle against the African slave trade had made him a hero in his native land. "So great, indeed was his fame among all classes of the British people," Sir Reginald Courland later wrote, "so powerful his influence on public opinion, and so far-reaching the effect of what he said and did on Africa that he must be ranked among the greatest of the great Victorians."

Thus, when Livingstone disappeared on his last African expedition, the proprietor of the New York Herald sensed a big story. James Gordon Bennett told his ace correspondent, Henry Morton Stanley, to spend as much of the paper's money as was needed, "but FIND LIVINGSTONE."

Stanley did, of course. He arrived at Livingstone's Lake Tanganyika camp on Nov. 10, 1871, with a large caravan of food, medicine, cooking utensils, cloth, and other necessities. For Livingstone, weakened by illness and malnutrition, it meant almost literally a new lease on life. His answer to Stanley's famous greeting was, the latter recorded, "Yes."

Stanley lived with Livingstone for four months, during which they explored the northern reaches of Lake Tanganyika. Livingstone, however, rejected his benefactor's pleas to leave Africa. Although in declining health, he was determined to stay until he had found the "fountains" — possibly the source of the Nile — described by Herodotus.

Livingstone's final trek took him south to Lake Bangweolo, which he had discovered on an earlier journey. It was there that he died, kneeling in prayer by his bed, on May 1, 1873. His body was returned to England and buried in Westminster Abbey.

☆ ☆ ☆

But the story does not end there On hearing of Livingstone's death, Stanley resolved to return to Africa to complete the explorer's work. Accordingly, he organized an Anglo-American expedition that spent almost three years exploring the heart of the continent

Politically, the Stanley expedition led to the founding of the Congo Free State under Belgian auspices and to the partition of hitherto unappropriated regions of Africa among the nations of Western Europe. Stanley made two more trips to Africa, became a British subject, sat in Parliament, and was knighted. In number of geographical discoveries he, not Livingstone, is now acknowledged as the foremost explorer of Africa.

Livingstone would have applauded Stanley's discoveries if he had lived to hear of them. On the other hand, he no doubt would have opposed the carving of Africa by European imperialists. Livingstone wanted some European colonization of the continent, but only to discourage the slave trade. He lived by the precept he preached — "Fear God, and work hard."

'We're Not Going Back 100 Years! Just To 1954! . . .'

Down But Not Out

Although supporters of the constitutional amendment to permit voluntary prayer and meditation in public school failed to gain the necessary two-thirds approval in the House Monday, Rep. Emanuel Celler knows that the issue won't be buried for long. "I suspect that in a few years it will be back," said Celler, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and an opponent of the amendment.

Those who have worked for the amendment as an answer to landmark U.S. Supreme Court decisions outlawing prescribed prayer in New York schools and Bible-reading in Baltimore schools in 1962 and 1963 appeared undaunted after falling 28 votes short of approval and promised even quicker action — defeat at the polls in 1972 of those 162 representatives who, as they put it, "voted against prayer in school."

Proponents of the school prayer amendment have worked diligently in the intervening eight years and undoubtedly are correct in their claim that a great majority of Americans support the constitutional change — whether they understand it or not. An Opinion Research poll early in 1971 indicated that 80% of the American people favored putting prayer back in the public schools.

The difficulties facing many congressmen were summed up by Rep. G. V. Montgomery of Mississippi, who said "a vote for this bill will be a lot easier to explain than a vote against. The people we represent want this and it's up to us to give them what they want"

We reserve our commendation, however, to the 162 members of the House — not including Nebraska's three representatives, Charles Thone, John Y. McCollister and Dave Martin, who voted for the amendment — who somehow seem to have greater respect for the Constitution and the idea that government at all levels should stay strictly neutral in the area of religion.

One of them, Iowa's Fred Schwengel, reportedly a religious man who carries seventeen prayers in his coat pocket, believes that the amendment is not necessary anyway because God was not thrown out of the schools by the Supreme Court decisions. Voluntary prayer is permissible anywhere, he feels.

The amendment, in those terms, really is unnecessary. It would be tragic to do damage to constitutional principles just for the sake of a popular political issue.

Labor Seeks Rules Change

Although challenged by labor and in the Congress, the President's Pay Board nevertheless buckled down and Monday night came up with what must in the overall sense be termed reasonable Phase II guidelines to apply to the fight to end inflation.

The 5.5% annual increase in negotiated wage increases and in non-union pay raises allowed by the board after the end of the wage-price freeze may seem somewhat low to many people but it clearly is not suffocating. And the board decided to allow all other previously negotiated pay increases to take effect after Nov. 14 unless they are successfully challenged as "unreasonably inconsistent." It would appear by this that the board is attempting to steer away from a totally rigid course.

The most important decision reached by the board — and one which was necessary if Phase One was to accomplish much of anything — was to forbid with limited exceptions retroactive payment of wage increases cancelled by the 90-day freeze.

The new formula was approved by a public-management coalition on the Pay Board, with labor representatives on the short end of a 10-5 vote.

Although the five labor chiefs on the board did not threaten to quit, the ban on retroactivity faces a test in Congress — where last week the House Banking Committee approved Phase II guidelines which, among other concessions, would grant back pay from previously negotiated contracts. A court test is a further possibility. And then there was the cry raised Tuesday by the Amalgamated Meat Cutters for a general strike threat to force reversal of the new pay regulations

The official AFL-CIO answer to the Pay Board decision will come out of its Miami convention next week. Labor — which had opposed Phase I because it did not apply evenly to all segments of the economy — now wants the rules changed in Phase II, solely for its benefit.

ANTHONY LEWIS
Doctors Protest Charge Of Money-Making; Elements Of Greed Too Obvious To Ignore

LONDON — American doctors are an articulate group. That much is shown by the reaction to recent columns criticizing aspects of medicine in the United States. The doctors wrote, some in a defensive or abusive vein, but many in constructive disagreement.

Not surprisingly, they were especially irritated at the comment that too many American doctors care too much about money. For the medical profession to top all others in income, it was said, is evidence of a sick society. That phrasing was doubtless unduly provocative.

Doctors, and some of their wives, asked why people who had studied and trained for so long should not get the highest financial reward. Was it better to enrich pop singers, or athletes, or journalists? Dr. William A. Rolston of New Orleans wrote:

If the professions were be salaried in proportion to their value to humanity, as indeed they should be, it is logical to assume that the medical profession should be among the highest paid."

But America is not Erewhon, and men are not paid according to their social deserts. Among doctors, for example, the most highly-trained may well be found in research work or teaching, at modest salaries.

No, the reason that doctors do so well in the United States (median income over $40,000 in 1969) is largely supply and demand. They control a scarce commodity desperately wanted by the consumer. And some — not a majority, but enough — are greedy in using their economic leverage

What happened after Medicare began is no secret. Seeing that more money was going to be available, many doctors simply raised their fees. When a patient complained to one distinguished general practitioner, he replied that others were doing it and he might as well get his share. As a private British doctor, a Harley Street specialist, said to an American the other day: "There is too much commerce in your medicine."

Some American doctors said as much in writing here. Dr. Harry H. Gordon, of the Einstein College of Medicine in New York, wrote: "One point is critical — that so many physicians have adopted the mores of their affluent patients in pursuit of the dollar. There is too little sense of a calling, too little appreciation of the satisfactions that come from helping people."

Now in fact most American doctors are dedicated men and women who work immensely hard and long for whatever they earn. Too much moralizing about their income is not in order. But the elements of greed in the profession are still significant for a practical reason: The aim of assuring all Americans medical care without fear of bankruptcy — as the country now earnestly desires — cannot be achieved unless any new system modifies or limits the law of supply and demand in medical economics, including doctor fees.

The Medicare experience makes that clear. If the federal government were now to supply vast new funds for private medical care without any change in the system, the result would be to inflate costs enormously.

The doctors point out, fairly, that they are not the only cause of medical inflation by any means: hospital and drug and other costs mount, too. But taking one problem at a time, it is clear that any new federal program will have to take a new approach on doctors' fees. One possibility would be to provide fixed levels of compensation for doctors serving certain numbers of patients on a panel, as in Britain.

An English doctor now living in New York, Arnold Miles, raised a question about all this that many may ask. He wrote:

"In the U.S. a man is judged by, and lives for, material gain. Until the values of this society change, it is surely hypocritical to expect doctors voluntarily to be less materialistic than their neighbors. Dedication is not an accepted form of currency, so why should not the doctor live by the current ethic?"

Yes, the materialist values of our society ought to be questioned altogether, if that is what Dr Miles means to suggest. There are enough horrors in the tax system to occupy reformers for a long time. But it is not unfair to begin with the area of medical care.

No society can be called civilized that allows the money ethic to dominate in matters of life and death. The United States, one way or another, is going to reconstruct its way of delivering medical care. And many doctors are coming to accept — as they did in Britain a generation ago — that the process will require a fresh social commitment from them.

The problem is not, in the end, whether it is right or wrong for doctors to earn more than other people. It is that American doctors have allowed their powerful spokesman, the American Medical Association, to make the mode of private practice and fees an obstacle to necessary change.

TOM WICKER
Fear In The House

WASHINGTON—Those liberal Democrats who joined southerners and most Republicans last week in prohibiting the use of emergency desegregation funds for busing programs were dead right about one thing. Busing is a political scare word and voting against it was the popular thing to do.

It was also, for those numerous liberals who knew better, rank demogoguery. Some others may only have been caught up in a stampede. Still others may have acted from genuine, if misplaced, concern. All of them failed, in one way or another, to meet the ordinary standards of leadership and vision that ought to be expected of members of Congress.

In the first place, court-ordered busing already is going forward—in most cases without any great problems—in a number of cities. This was not usually the choice of the communities involved but the mandate of the law. So what conceivable sense can it make for the judiciary branch to order busing and the legislative branch to prohibit any federal aid in paying for it?

The net result will be that communities like Nashville and San Francisco and Charlotte will have to find other means of paying for court-ordered busing, to the obvious detriment of school operating budgets that already are hard-pressed. That means, in turn, that if Congress maintains its anti-busing position, to which it was encouraged by President Nixon, the courts at the least will become more reluctant to order desegregation by busing. No doubt that is exactly what was wanted by many who voted against busing, northerners as well as southerners.

Everyone should be clear about what that means. To prohibit busing or to make it impossible is effectively to prevent any real chance of ending racial segregation in the schools of most urban areas. As Sen. Abe Ribicoff has put it, urban segregation outside the South is based not on dual school systems but on "dual societies;" or, as the Kerner Commission said earlier, the United States has become "one nation, divided," with black central cities surrounded by white suburbs, and only a few mixed neighborhoods in between.

Given that situation, the only effective alternatives to busing are (a) overcoming segregated urban and suburban housing patterns so that "neighborhood schools" would be racially mixed schools, or (b) abandoning any idea of achieving anything more than token school integration outside the South.

The first of these alternatives is totally unrealistic; it may be a goal for the future but the present trend is in exactly the opposite direction. The second alternative is in effect to choose to leave intact most of the nation's school segregation—for most of it is in the urban North, as can be amply documented.

Even so, if it could be shown that busing is destructive of "quality education"—of which there is precious little in American schools, neighborhood or otherwise—perhaps a case might be made against it. If Mrs Edith Green, for instance, really believes what she said in the House ("The evidence is very strong that busing is not the answer to our school problems"), she ought to make the case.

But she can't and hardly tried, other than for such fatuous remarks as, "We cannot go back 100 years to make up for the errors of our ancestors." Where it has been ordered, busing makes up mostly for the deliberate intentions of school board members, zoning commissions, real estate interests, city officials, community leaders and politicians — not those of ancestral times, either, but those of the forties, fifties, sixties and seventies.

Those "liberals" who supinely or enthusiastically bowed to public fears might instead have made the strong case that short and long-range school busing for years has been widely accepted in this country, with millions of children in every state getting to and from school every day by that means; that the best evidence is that both black and white students benefit educationally from attending white-majority school that nevertheless reflect the racial proportions of the community; and that, for purposes of bringing about that kind of racial balance, busing is by far the most effective — in some cases, the only — method.

It evades the question to say that the people oppose busing. Many of them surely do, but in no small part because they are encouraged by political "leadership", from the White House on down, that arouses fear and prejudice, rather than counseling common sense, courage and fair play — that panders to the worst rather than relying on the best qualities of the great American people.

JAMES RESTON
World Scene Duplicates American City

WASHINGTON — Two great forces are at work in the world today, one driving the nations together and the other setting them apart Everywhere it is obvious — it is almost a cliche —that no nation can by itself control the problems of war, the arms race, money, overpopulation, hunger, disease, the drug traffic, or pollution but at the same time the spirit of nationalism and protectionism is rising, and the institutions for world cooperation like the United Nations are under severe attack.

The evidence of this dangerous paradox lies plain before us. We know the facts about world hunger and runaway population, about the nine million refugees from East Bengal and the danger of war between India and Pakistan. They have all been in the front-page headlines, along with the dollar crisis and the world monetary crisis, but they seem to be beyond our understanding. They are too complicated, or, as we think, too far away. We hear about them vaguely but we do not FEEL them.

The facts, however, remain, even if they seem remote, abstract and beyond our comprehension. The contemporary world today is a little like the modern American city: part black, embittered and revolutionary slum, and part white and prosperous. The main difference is that in urban America, the poor are a minority, and in the world at large, now being rushed together by modern transportation and communication, they are the vast majority.

The reaction of America political and public opinion to this present division between the rich and poor nations of the world is also comparable to the reaction of the white majority to the black minority in our own country over the last century. Even during the battles over slavery in America, most Americans knew something about the inequality of American life. Mr Lincoln told them the Republic could not endure half slave and half free, and most of his successors in the White House, after abolition insisted also that it could not live happily with a deprived black minority Again, however, after pointless miseries and eventually great progress, we are still struggling with this dilemma in a violent and revolutionary atmosphere

Maybe this analogy is not quite accurate—analogies never are—but what is happening in the world today, or so it seems here, is at least comparable if not similar to our own national experience with the American poor and particularly with the American blacks over the past generation or so.

What we were eventually brought to see at home, after long periods of prejudice, indifference, confusion and hopelessness, was that we still could not evade the facts of inequality. What we were unable to do on principle and by foresight, we were finally forced to do by fear of violence.

The guess here is that this long and tragic national experience is now being repeated on the world stage. Our assumption at home in the past was, first, that we could avoid the confrontation with the silent impoverished black minority, and then that maybe we could ride out the confrontation with the power of the aroused "silent majority," but in the end it didn't work.

In the end, it probably won't work either in the world. Poverty is an infectious disease—our own affluent children in their expensive rags dramatize the point. With modern communiations, the word has finally got through to the populous slums of the world, where most of the human family exists, that hunger and disease are not inevitable but intolerable.

This is really what Prime Minister Gandhi of India has been saying here in the last few days. She was not asking for money, but for recognition of the alarming facts of modern life in the underdeveloped nations, and she may have been more successful than she realizes.

For while the Congress of the United States is now talking about foreign aid as if it were some kind of parliamentary maneuver or dirty trick on America, there are at least some officials here and elsewhere who see the dark horizon on the world and the developing class war between the rich northern nations and the poor and populous majority in the under-world of the sunny slums below the equator.

Liberals and conservatives alike in the Congress voted against the foreign aid bill for a variety of reasons, and many of them are even supporting Treasury Secretary Connally's hard Texas power politics, not because they want to go isolationist or protectionist or particularly because they like Connally, but because they want to find a new system that will recognize the interdependence of the modern world and force all the trading nations to accept a more equal sharing of the burdens in what is obviously an unequal and dangerous confrontation with each other and with the hungry and embittered majority of the human race.

Embattled Miss World

Signs of "No More Miss World" and "Capitalism Breeds Sexploitation" will once more grace the front of London's serene Royal Albert Hall on the evening of Wednesday, Nov. 10, to protest the increasingly controversial Miss World contest. Members of the Women's Lib Movement, to whom Kate Millett's "Sexual Politics" is as a Bible, will be out in force—hurling everything from invective to stink bombs at the police who will be guarding the ceremonies.

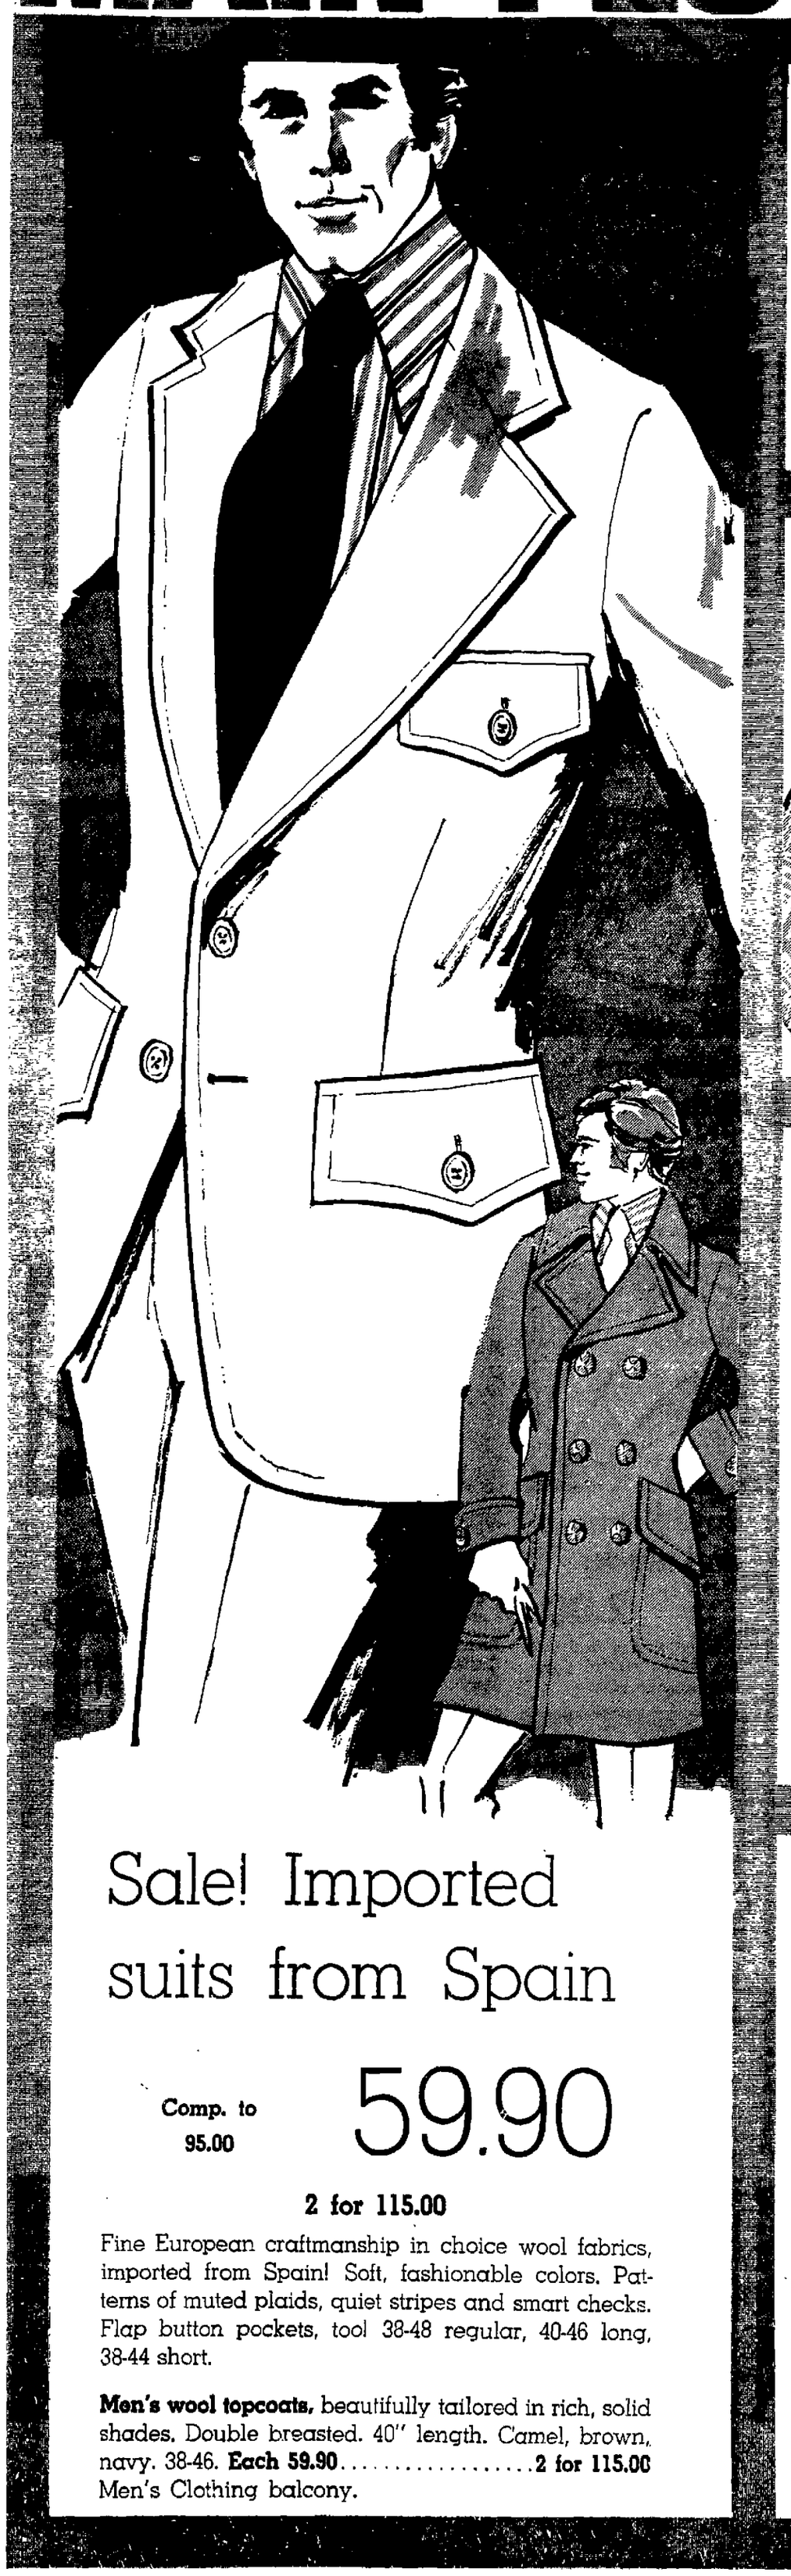

Last year four women were brought to trial for endangering the contestants, for throwing smoke bombs, and for assaulting the Bobbies. During the trial at a Bow Street court, one of the women charged with offensive language suggested that while her behavior offended no one, there had been "plenty of evidence that a large number of women were insulted by the contest." One of the short-haired and braless defendants suggested that "the only offensive weapons we had were our voices and we still have those and intend to use them."

Charges By Colin Called Unfounded

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster County Commissioner Robert Colin's charges concerning operational procedures at Lancaster Manor were termed "as unusual, unfounded and irresponsible" Tuesday by Rex Earl of Colonial Homes which operates Lancaster Manor for the county.

In a prepared statement before the county board, Earl said that according to the opinion of Colin, completion of the audit of Lancaster Manor could show cause for a further investigation.

"The audit has been completed and every red cent of the county's money has been accounted for by Lancaster Manor and Colonial Homes, Inc.," he said.

Earl said that the auditor's office recommended that $200 petty cash fund be eliminated and that this has been done and the balance in the fund will be returned to the county.

He said that the "minor errors" in calculations on the depreciation schedules totaling $228.91 has been corrected and that the recommendation that a more sophisticated accounts receivable system be established is being studied to determine its feasibility.

Earl noted that Colin alleged that he called for a complete audit of Lancaster Manor by the state auditor's office but that Colin had made a request for the audit was denied by Francis Walls of the auditor's office.

"It should be obvious to all that Commissioner Colin had no information to justify calling a 'special audit' which was the routine audit that he wanted credit for calling. Again, his charges have been, as usual, unfounded and irresponsible," Earl said.

Commissioner William Grossman said that he felt Earl should be complimented because the state auditor's report "indicates that things were in pretty good shape," and that claims about the results of the audit "were pretty much unfounded."

In response to Earl's comments, Colin said he had a thick file to go through on Lancaster Manor but that he would "have an answer in about three days," in connection with Earl's statement about the audit.

Thirty-Five Residents Returned To Westview

Thirty-five of the 40 former Westview residents forced out of the facility by fire Sept. 24 have been moved back to Westview, it was reported Tuesday.

Lancaster County Welfare Director J. Earle Trabert told the commissioners that the 35 Westview people were moved Monday after a re-evaluation by physicians last week.

One of the former Westview residents is hospitalized, according to Trabert and one has been placed in a skilled nursing facility while the other three are remaining at Lancaster Manor where they all had been housed on an emergency basis since the fire.

Trabert said everything is in order for approval of a board and room license for Westview as soon as a stainless steel sink which has been ordered is installed.

The commissioners agreed that a re-evaluation of all Westview residents should be made periodically so that any needing nursing care may be moved into the proper facility.

Trabert said he was in the process of attempting to hire a licensed practical nurse for Westview as recommended earlier.

Commissioner Robert Colin said he was out at Lancaster Manor when the bus arrived to pick up the Westview people to return them to Westview and "I never saw such a happy group of people."

He said there were "very few dry eyes on the trip because they were so happy to get back to Westview."

Colin commended the new Lancaster Manor engineer, Eugene Hogan, who offered a driver and truck to haul some of the things which could not be put on the bus back to Westview.

However, he criticized other Lancaster Manor personnel for "not helping in any way" to move the Westview people out of Lancaster Manor.

Rex Earl of Colonial Homes which operates the Manor said that his people were not informed that the Westview people were moving out until they saw the bus drive up.

He said that Lancaster Manor residents were having to eat "left-overs" Tuesday because food had been planned for the Westview people on Monday since Lancaster Manor personnel were not informed of the move.

However, Trabert said that he had informed the head nurse at Lancaster Manor, Mrs. Patricia Cole, that the Westview people were being moved out on Monday.

Colin Objects To Bids On Drapes For Manor

Lancaster County Commissioner Robert Colin, who has openly pushed competitive bidding for county purchasing of most items, objected Tuesday to accepting the bids on draperies for Lancaster Manor and suggested "calling around" to see if there were other possible bids.

Rex Earl of Colonial Homes which operates Lancaster Manor for the county told the board that specifications were picked up by four prospective bidders but that only two bids were received after the notice to bidders was advertised for the statutory three weeks.

Colin said, "I can't imagine there aren't more people interested than this" and suggested that other possible bidders be called to see if they might be interested.

Commissioners Kenneth Bourne and William Grossman both indicated that since bids had been advertised and opened they didn't feel they could legally attempt to get further bids unless all bids were rejected and the bidding were started over.

With Colin voting against the motion, the other two commissioners accepted the low bid submitted and awarded the drapery contract to Rader's of Omaha which submitted a bid of $9,261.75.

The only other bid was $10,615.92 submitted by Brandeis.

In other business, the board by a vote of two to one appointed former commissioner Ralph Harlan of Hickman and Marlo Burg of Waverly to the City-County Air Pollution Appeals Board.

Colin, who had submitted the names of Burg and Richard Suiter of Hallam, objected to appointing Harlan stating that "I don't think Harlan is qualified" for the appointment.

Colin had made a motion which died for lack of a second that Burg and Suiter be appointed and then voted against the motion which passed.

Large Apartment Complex Planned In Sarpy County

Omaha (AP) — The largest Omaha-area apartment-type project in recent years, more than 1,000 two to four-bedroom condominiums, is planned for a site near Interstate 80 in northern Sarpy County.

Mill Valley Co., Inc., has asked the Sarpy County Planning Commission for rezoning which would permit the development on 225 acres. Joel Katleman, company president, has developed other apartment projects in the area.

When completed, the project is expected to cost about $35 million, engineers Elliott & Black, Inc., reported.

First to be built would be 1,000 condominiums which would be sold for slightly more than $30,000 each, the firm said. A 608 acre commercial site also is planned.

Ferguson Plans To Open Meeting Of 'Stockholders'

Democratic senatorial candidate Donald Ferguson of Lincoln will attend the first in a series of campaign "stockholders meetings" in North Platte Nov. 20.

Ferguson is financing his campaign through the sale of stock certificates in the "future of this state and nation." They serve as symbols of the type of campaign he intends to pursue, he said.

Broccoli Firm Green Stalks ... 39¢

RECIPE

Broccoli Saut'e

1 large bunch Broccoli
1 tsp. salt
⅓ cup olive oil
2 cloves garlic split

Wash fresh Broccoli, remove coarse leaves and lower stalks. Split stalks lengthwise. Place in skillet with salt and boiling water to a depth of ½ inch. Bring to a boil and cook 5 minutes. Commission Okays Program Funding

The Region II Crime Commission approved Tuesday an application for a $33,600 federal grant for continuation of the "resource officer program" with the schools in Lincoln and Lancaster County.

Under the special program, police officers and deputy sheriffs with particular qualifications in education are assigned as resource and liaison personnel to the city and county schools.

Approval of the application clears the way for its submission to the State Crime Commission for review.

The requested grant would cover a period from Feb. 1 through Aug. 31.

The commission also approved an application to pay the tuition of 64 law enforcement officers who are attending the University of Nebraska for specialized education in off-duty hours.

Tuition cost for the group for the 1971-72 school year was estimated at $18,000 by Charles Huff, the commissioner's executive secretary.

In other action the commission accepted the resignation of Ben Goble as a voting member. Goble tendered his resignation because of possible conflict of interest between his federally-funded position and membership on the commission.

The commission also received without taking action several recommendations from the Lincoln League of Women Voters regarding a correctional system separate and independent from law enforcement bodies.

The League urged the commission to appoint a committee on corrections to assist in developing a 24-hour correctional staff to be officed in the County City Jail Complex.

It also recommended the juvenile offenders should be referred without exception to Juvenile Court rather than the current system which permits the county attorney's office to refer some juvenile offenders to adult court.

Also proposed was a committee on research and statistics so that intelligent planning can begin for future correctional needs.

It was noted the present jail complex has twice reached capacity and there is a need to begin projecting its future use together with the possibility of regional jails, work farms or similar supplemental facilities.

Evidence Termed Sufficient, Though Thin, In Ortiz Case

By United Press International

The Nebraska Supreme Court was told Tuesday there was thin but sufficient evidence to convict Lawrence Ortiz of Omaha of first degree murder.

The statement was made by Asst. Atty. Gen. Calvin E. Robinson during oral arguments before the high court on an appeal of Ortiz' conviction from Buffalo County District Court.

Ortiz was convicted in the August 1970 death of Charlotte Elaine Whittington, whose body was found in a burning field near Elm Creek.

Buffalo County Public Defender Jeffrey L. Orr, representing Ortiz, said the last time Ortiz saw the woman, she was alive. He said the state failed to prove otherwise.

"There is not one shred of evidence to show purpose why Lawrence Ortiz would want to kill the decedent (Mrs. Whittington)," Orr said. "In fact, the state's evidence was contrary."

He said it was brought out during the trial that Ortiz wanted to marry her. Orr also said Mrs. Whittington was a "known narcotics user" and felt her life was in danger.

Truckers Get Freight Rate Hike Of 6%

The Nebraska Railway Commission Tuesday granted truckers a permanent 6% rate increase on most truck freight shipments within the state.

In effect, the decision continues in effect a temporary rate hike granted Aug. 10, just five days before President Nixon ordered a wage-price freeze.

The new permanent order allows a 6% boost on shipments weighing less thatn 10,000 pounds, and a 3% hike on those over 10,000 pounds. The earlier temporary order was for 6% in both categories.

Commission Chairman Eric Rasmussen said the order affects only Nebraska-based truckers handling general commodity items.

Curtis Backers Name Earl Luff Fund Chairman

Earl Luff of Lincoln Tuesday was named Lancaster County finance chairman of the Citizens for Curtis Committee.

The statewide committee, seeking funding for the 1972 reelection campaign of Sen. Carl Curtis, is headed by Lincoln insurance executive E. J. Faulkner.

Luff is president of Lincoln Steel Corporation.

Faulkner said the committee has "sufficient manpower and enthusiasm to encourage me to predict that this part of our campaign will be completed by the end of the year."

Hastings industrialist Hal Lainson is treasurer of the state committee.

Official Claims To Wheat Crop Reduces Prices

Pierre, S.D. (AP) — The president of the South Dakota Wheat Producers says record crops in America have had disastrous effects on markets and prices. Arvid Ambur of Presho said concern over the worlds' growing wheat supply will prompt discussion at the group's meeting in Pierre Saturday. He added that something must be done in Congress to give stability to the consumption-production situation.

Brauer Will Speak

S. H. Brauer, secretary of the Nebraska School Improvement Association, will speak at a meeting of the Lincoln Republican Women's Club at 1:30 p.m. Friday at the First Federal Savings and Loan Association, 1235 N.

Construction Of Power Buildings Will Begin Soon

Hastings (AP) — Construction of buildings for the Don Henry power center here are to begin at once with A. Borchman and Sons of Omaha in charge.

The firm was awarded the contract on a 5-1 vote of the Hastings City Council Monday night.

Last Oct. 11, the council overruled the recommendation of the Board of Public Works and awarded the contract to Kealey Construction Co. of Hastings on a higher bid than Borchman.

An attempt at last Tuesday's special City Council meeting to award the contract to Borchman was defeated for lack of a majority, but the council did rescind earlier actions.

The work will cost nearly $421,000, which is about $8,000 lower than the Kealey bid. General construction is expected to be completed early in 1972, with the new center to be in operation by next summer.

James Cancels Visits To Omaha

Omaha (AP) — Three Omaha appearances by a deputy secretary of defense, Brig. Gen. Daniel L. James, have been cancelled, Offutt Air Force Base officials said Tuesday.

Gen. James the only black general in the Air Force, was to hold a Thursday news conference, attend an Omaha Press Club luncheon and a Forgotten Americans Committee banquet on Thursday.

Offutt spokesmen said the Defense Department reported Gen. James' visit was cancelled becaue of official Defense Department business. The spokesman said the visit may be rescheduled at a later date.

Plant To Convert

Cleveland (UPI) — Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. says it will convert the westerly units of its Lake Shore Power Plant at Cleveland from coal to low-sulphur fuel oil at a cost of $12 million. The company said the conversion will enable the whole plant to comply with Cleveland's new air pollution code.

Courses Developed For Tech College Instructor

Cooperation between the Lincoln Technical Community College and the University of Nebraska Teachers College is leading to development of teacher training courses for tech colleges instructors, the college board was told Tuesday.

"We think this is a tremendous breakthrough," said Robert Glenn of the tech staff.

At the board's monthly meeting, Glenn outlined the new program, which he said will begin next semester.

Statutory Requirement

He said the effort to establish a program for tech college instructors was a response to statutory requirements for teacher training and to the fact that most Teachers College courses "are geared to elementary and secondary teachers."

"We wanted the university to work with the person teaching in adult ed," Glenn told the board, which also serves as the board for the Lincoln Public Schools.

He noted that many teachers come to the college with the required field experience in their occupational specialities, but with little classroom work in education.

Committee Established

A Teachers College steering committee has been established, Glenn said, to draw up plans for the program.

In other matters, the board heard a report on renovation of a leased warehouse to be used for tech college programs in industrial technology and okayed consolidation of the tech college and Manpower automotive programs in the facility.

The facility, a former trucking warehouse on North 17th Street near the NU campus, is being leased by the college.

Expansion Asked

The board was told the State Departments of Education and Labor had asked the Manpower training program to expand the automotive programs from service-only orientation to include internal engine mechanics.

The state will pay the $6,000 necessary for the program expansion and consolidation, and the state will refer students to the program here.

The board was also told the Manpower program had been awarded a certificate of merit from the regional U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare office for its building maintenance program.

Darrell Grell, director of Manpower's skills center, said HEW noted that 57% of the program's trainees are handicapped, and that 71% are placed in training-related jobs.

Blue Valley Advisory Board Is Being Planned

The formation of a Blue River Valley Basin Advisory Board made up of residents of the basin area is being planned by the board of directors of Vision-17, the economic development organization for southeast Nebraska.

Jack Wolken of Tecumseh, Vision-17 president, said the board is taking action after adopting the problem of flood control and water retention in the Blue Basin as a key item in its 1972 program.

George H. Frye, Vision-17 regional coordinator, said the organization became involved following a series of meetings with representatives of the Corps of Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation and basin area citizens.

Frye said residents report a need for flood control and water for irrigation. He said the initial advisory board will consist of two persons from each from Butler, Gage, Saline and Seward Counties.

4-H Development Group Elects Council Officers

The Nebraska Association for 4-H Development at their annual business meeting here elected officers and new members of their executive council.

Two new members were elected to serve on the association's executive council for three year terms. They are State Senator Wayne Ziebarth of Wilcox and Joe Hunckfeldt, president of the Gering National Bank at Gering. The two replaced Joel Andrews of Alliance and Jack Quackenbush of Beatrice, whose terms expired.

The association re-elected three officers: John R. Cooper of Humboldt, president and also a holdover member on the executive council; Dr. John L. Adams, director of the Agricultural Extension Service at the University of Nebraska, vice president; and state 4-H Leader W. M. Antes, secretary-treasurer.

The association is made up of persons interested in the 4-H program in Nebraska. The group cooperates with various individuals and organizations to provide financial and organizational assistance for the advancement of the 4-H club work in Nebraska.

Tipping Like Capitalists, Chinese Come To U.N. For First Time

United Nations (UPI) —The Communist Chinese came to the United Nations as a member for the first time Tuesday, tipping like capitalists but lunching on the blueplate special.

After paying for the American breakfast with a $100 bill, the six-man advance party from Peking had an economy lunch at the Roosevelt, a midtown hotel frequented by businessmen.

The Chinese also got their first tour of the skyscraper U.N. headquarters, received a warm greeting from normally reserved diplomats, saw some of New York from a red limousine and began clearing the way for Thursday's arrival of the full 46-man delegation.

People who attended the Chinese said they were pleasant and easy to deal with. Jack Mauk, the chauffeur who drove them to the U.N., said they inquired whether he had had a good night's sleep.

Mainland China, which has not had an official representative at the U.N. since it was denounced as an aggressor country at the start of the Korean War, was voted membership last month in both the General Assembly and the Security Council.

The full delegation, headed by Vice Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua, will arrive in two groups Thursday from Paris.

A six-man advance party headed by former newsman Kao Liang is in charge of preparations: securing passes, confirming accreditation, making arrangements for seating and other routine matters.

Staying At Hotel

The advance crew is staying at the Roosevelt, a 50-year-old hotel within easy walking distance of the U.N. headquarters in midtown Manhattan.

The six breakfasted in the hotel coffee shop on orange juice, toast, tea and three bacon and three sausage omelets.

They paid with a $100 bill and waitress Edna Flora said they left a "good tip."

Kao, Hain-hsi and Lin Chiao-sin then made their first trip to the United Nations while Chia Tzu-cheng, Tien Jung-tsein and Liu Chen-piao stayed at the hotel.

After a tour of the U.N. building and a series of meetings with protocol, security and public relations people, the three visited the delegates entrance where they were warmly greeted by Romanian Ambassador Gheorghi Diaconescu, a strong supporter of Communist China's admission to the world body.

Later, sipping coffee in comfortable chairs and a couch around a low, wooden table in the North Delegates Lounge, the three exchanged greetings with members who voted for their admission and chatted with Albanian Ambassador Sami Boholli and four other members of the Albanian mission.

Albania sponsored the resolution admitting Communist China and is the unofficial Chinese host.

No members of the United States delegation were on hand to greet the Chinese.

The three who visited the United Nations, accompanied by Petraq Pojani, counsellor to the Albanian delegation, joined the other three for lunch in the Roosevelt restaurant.

Five of the Chinese and Pojoni ordered grilled breast of chicken with madeira sauce, risole potatoes and tiny Belgian carrots — at $2.95 the least expensive item on the menu.

The sixth Chinese had a minute steak sandwich with fried potatoes ($5.50). They all had ice cream (90 cents) for dessert.

Senators To Debate On Aid Bill

Washington (AP) — The Senate began its foreign aid debate all over again Tuesday on a $2.3-billion program Secretary of State William P. Rogers termed inadequate.

While Republican leaders discussed an effort to get more money, Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., called the program "a grab bag for everyone but the American people who foot the bill." Fulbright said there should be more cuts.

Rogers and Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird took the administration's case for foreign aid to a meeting with Republican senators. Rogers said he will be talking to some Democrats, too, as the Senate acts again on the program it voted to kill Oct. 29.

The House is to take up Wednesday a joint resolution including authority for the Agency for International Development to keep spending money, at a rate of about $2.6 billion a year after Nov. 15, when current spending authority expires.

Mansfield To Oppose

But Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said he will oppose any such resolution until Congress has completed action on legislation authorizing the program.

The Senate agreed to spend six hours on each of two foreign-aid bills, a $1.1 billion economic assistance measure, and a military aid program of just under $1.2 billion.

On that timetable, senate action would be completed by the end of the week.

Recommend Strongly

"I recommend very strongly that a continuing resolution be passed by the Congress," Rogers said. The resolution would be temporary, extending no longer than the current session of Congress.

"I think there is an understanding that defeat of this bill would be a catastrophe for the foreign policy of the United States," Rogers said.

Laird, just back from South Vietnam, was quoted by Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., as saying the Saigon government is in "a state of shock" at the prospect of losing U.S. assistance.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said there will be an effort to amend the bills and put back some of the money the Senate Foreign Relations Committee cut. Scott said that might mean a Senate bill in the neighborhood of $2.6 billion.

WSCS Ends Convention At Hastings

Hastings (AP) — The Women's Society of Christian Service of the United Methodist Church concluded its state convention Tuesday with election of officers.

Mrs. John Cooper of Adams was elected vice president and Mrs. Lester Boilsen of Murdock was named secretary. Mrs. Norman C. Crounse of Chester is treasurer and assistant treasurer is Mrs. Harvey Brammeier of Rising City.

Named committee chairmen were Mrs. Don Hickman of Bushnell, Christian social relations; Mrs. Theodore Smith of Chappell, missionary education; Mrs. Arthur Cognard of Omaha, nominations; and Miss Annie Laurie Smith of Lincoln, conference guild.

Mrs. Clyde Norris of Lincoln will serve the second year of her two year term.

Murder Case Goes To Jury

By VIRGIL FALLOON
Star Staff Writer

A Lancaster District Court ry adjourned deliberations uesday without reaching a erdict in the trial of Mrs. Judy Sturm, charged with cond-degree murder in the otgun slaying of her husband, arvey.

The jury of eight women and ur men had been instructed y District Judge William astings they could separate to eir homes at 6 a.m. if they ere unable to reach a verdict nd resume deliberation ednesday at 9 a.m.

He said attorneys in the case ad agreed the jury need not be equestered overnight, which is e usual procedure in murder ases.

The seven-day trial of the 28-ear-old mother of two children ent to the jury at 11:56 a.m. uesday following final guments by attorneys for the ate and defense and instruc-ons by the court.

Judge Hastings instructed the rors they could return one of ree possible verdicts: guilty second-degree murder, uilty of manslaughter, or not uilty (acquittal).

In closing arguments, the ate's attorneys charged that Irs. Sturm "intentionally and aliciously" but "without remeditation" killed her 31-ear-old husband.

'Overcome By Terror

Defense attorneys charac-erized Mrs. Sturm as "so vercome by terror and fear by cts of violence of her husband hat she acted without reason-g in shooting to protect erself and children."

County Atty. Paul Douglas old the jurors that the efense's claim of "self defense a smoke screen."

"Is it reasonable that etaliation for a bruise on the p should be two shotgun holes hile sleeping,'' asked Douglas.

The prosecutor also noted Irs. Sturm had told police of-cers she had "gotten two ells from the hunting vest ecause if she missed him with e first one, she'd get him with e second."

'No Timid Little Girl'

"Mrs. Sturm is not the timid ttle girl the defense would ave you believe," said ouglas, "but a woman who liked hunting and stock-car racing."

But, Public Defender T. Clement Gaughan said Mrs. Sturm had "unstintingly accepted her lot (with Harvey Sturm) until the beatings got so severe that she could no longer reason."

He pictured Mr. Sturm, a former Marine, as a "man of violence," who would "stay out late at night drinking" and "didn't seem to care whether he made a living for his family or not."

Not Disputed

Neither the defense or prosecution disputed evidence that Mrs. Sturm shot her husband in the early morning hours of Sept. 18 at their 2740 Arlington home after Mr. Sturm returned home about 2 a.m.

Trial evidence indicated Mr. Sturm had beaten his wife when she asked where he had been, jerked a telephone from the wall and threaten to strangle her with the cord if she called police, and had broken and thrown various items in the house. While the prosecution contended Mrs. Sturm deliberately returned upstairs with a loaded shotgun to shoot her sleeping husband, the defense maintained she had "loaded the gun for her selfprotection" and only went upstairs when she heard her baby cry and thought her husband was moving around.

'Hysterical Reaction'

Psychiatric testimony in the case characterized Mrs. Sturm's personality as "emotionally dependent upon the love of another (her husband)," but tending toward "hysterical reaction under situational stress."

A defense psychiatrist indicated Mrs. Sturm was so overcome by fear of her husband on the fatal night that she was incapable of acting with reason, but a prosecution psychiatrist testified nothing in her personality would have prevented her from "planning and carrying out a malicious act."

"Send Judy Sturm back to her children," said Gaughan. He reminded the jury of testimony by Harvey Sturm's mother that she didn't feel her daughter-in-law should be punished for her son's death.

USED HOUSES . . . ready for buyer on Verdell Hornbacher's lot.

Mover Opens Used House Lot

By SAM THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

York — Why spend a bundle on a brand new home when you can pick up a vacant farmhouse for a pittance?

Ah, but all too often a farmhouse comes with a farm attached and included in the price. That's not the case, however, at Virtuous Verdell Hornbacher's used house lot.

Hornbacher, a house mover, says that dealing in used houses was a natural outgrowth of his profession. "People would always ask me where to find buildings for sale. I thought I might as well buy used buildings and display them."

Hence the row of houses propped up on iron beams out behind Hornbacher's own farmhouse a mile south of York. There are no cigar-chewing salesmen or strings of light bulbs, but otherwise the lot is a sort of domiciliary duplicate of an auto dealer's used car lot.

The models may range from time-worn but serviceable to late-model, one-owner homes. Browse around the lot; shop the sizes, styles and colors. Even step inside — note the custom trim, visibility, elbow room. Remember, the price can't be beat — and the only owner was a spinster Sunday School teacher who lived alone with her cat and geraniums.

Actually, Hornbacher's "sell" isn't as hard as that, and he doesn't do what a car dealer would call a volume business. "Houses come up for sale quite often," he explains, "but it's not too often they're in livable condition."

But if purchases are slow, sales are doing well — of the nine houses Hornbacher has bought since he diversified a year ago, six have found new owners and locations, and the seventh is sold and waiting to be moved.

Says Hornbacher: "It's not a bad busniess."

Peterson's Senate Bid Is Now Official

. . . Economic Issues Stressed

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Emphasizing the largely economic issues which face the nation in the coming decade, Wallace Peterson of Lincoln Tuesday announced his candidacy for the 1972 Democratic senatorial nomination.

Peterson, 50, chairman of the University of Nebraska's Department of Economics, will be making his second bid for the Democratic nomination.

In 1970, he finished second in a three-man contest.

Peterson is the fourth Democrat to enter the primary race for nomination to the Senate seat now held by Republican Carl Curtis.

At a series of press conferences in Omaha, Lincoln and Hastings, Peterson outlined a number of campaign positions:

—tax reform that would "eliminate inflation-prone payroll taxes."

—a system of deferred compensation to fight inflation.

—a diversified program for rural economic development and an urban bank system for financing major improvements in the cities.

—a new type of "GI Bill" for unskilled workers and "an educational bank" for post-high school education.

—innovation in home financing to stimulate home ownership and construction.

—a farm program based on a national commitment to the family farm.

—measures to "end the march toward corporate socialism by putting competition back into the American economy."

On the latter point, Peterson suggested "dissolving some corporate giants and doing something about merger movements."

Peterson pledged to work for government which will "tell its citizens the truth about what it is doing in spite of political cost or embarrassment."

As for Vietnam and the military, he said, "the war should end, along with the military draft which disrupts young lives in unfair fashion and does violence to our finest traditions."

Twice alluding to the late Sen. George W. Norris, Peterson said he would like to follow his lead in the "fight for justice and a fair share of the good things of life for all Americans."

In answer to newsmen's questions, Peterson said he was "completely unknown politically" in 1970 when he lost his first primary bid, and he hopes he has since made "some progress" in overcoming that liability.

This campaign will also be "full-time," unlike the 1970 primary campaign, he noted.

Peterson will take a leave of absence without pay from the university, probably "early in the second semester" which begins next January.

"Nebraska needs a new senator with the experience and vision to offer the state an opportunity for creative leadership in Washington," Peterson said.

As for the nation, he said, "the great challenge is to prove that our political system can achieve peaceful change with justice for all citizens."

Fireman's Efforts Fail To Save Child

Omaha (AP) — A desperate effort by Fireman Virgil Liss after relatives and neighbors had been driven from a burning home failed to save the life of 2-year-old Michael Larson Tuesday.

Michael and his 18-month-old brother Gene, were trapped by fire in the second floor apartment of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Larson.

Mrs. Larson was washing clothes when a neighbor, Al Oltman, noticed the smoke pouring from the room. He alerted Mrs. Larson's father, Mike Signorile, who lives on the first floor and together they dashed up the back stairs while Mrs. Oltman called firemen.

"It was so full of smoke we couldn't get in very far," Oltman said. "We called for the boys and the little one, Gene came out."

He said they tried to push forward but were driven back by the flames and smoke.

Liss said when he and other firemen left the station they knew there were children trapped in the home.

He dashed into the apartment wearing a mask, and turned a couch upside down, thinking Mickey may have crawled under it for safety.

"Then somebody — I don't know who — hollered to go the other way," he said. "It was then I found a closet, opened the door and there was the boy."

He said he ran downstairs and began mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

"As far as we could tell the child was breathing by the time the rescue squad arrived," he said. But the boy was dead on arrival at a hospital.

District Chief Clarence Thomas said the blaze apparently started in a chair in the bedroom, but the cause has not been determined. Mrs. Larson said the child had been alone for a brief time.

States Are Told To File Land Settlement Views

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court Tuesday gave Nebraska and Iowa 45 days to file their views on a proposed settlement of a land ownership dispute involving more than 14,000 acres along the Missouri River.

The states will respond to a proposal by Joseph P. Willson of Smethport, Pa., a retired U.S. District Court judge, who took testimony in the eight-year-old case. His report was ordered filed in the high court.

The problem arose because of the river's habit of changing course when the flow of water increased through the wide valley on the Nebraska-Iowa border. The channel has stabilized since the Army engineers built dams on the upper reaches of the river.

A 1943 compact between the two states placed the official boundary in the middle of the river, the compact stipulated that individual titles good before that time in one state would be honored in the other if an owner found his land had shifted to another state as a result of the agreement.

But differences in the title laws of the two states still presented problems. . .Under Nebraska law, ownership of land on the riverbank extends to the middle of the stream. But under Iowa law, private ownership stops at the high water mark. No Iowan may own land that arises as an island.

Willson recommended that ownership of lands developed before 1943 either be acknowledged the property if Nebrakans or be determined under Nebraska law with Iowa having an opportunity to contest the titles. Two tracts — Nottleman's and Schenel's Islands — he would award to their Nebraska owners.

All this acreage is generally south of Omaha.

Lands north of Omaha, which have developed since 1943, would be settled under the law of the state where they formed.

Solid, Musicianly Effort Provided By Symphony

By EARL DYER
Star Staff Writer

Works of four of the great rchestral conductors — erlioz, Haydn, Hindemith and vorak — made up the pro-ram Tuesday night as the incoln Symphony Orchestra rovided solid musicianly erformances for its first con-ert of the season without utside soloists.

Most pleasant was a Haydn umber — the Sinfonie Con-ertante in B-flat major — for hich the soloists were four of e principal players of the rchestra: Concertmaster rnold Schatz, cellist Carol ork, oboist Robert Jenkins nd bassoonist Gary Echols.

It is a composition in which aydn uses all possible com-nations of the four solo in-ruments with orchestra: solos eaturing each of the four in-ruments, duets with each aying with each of the others, e quartet alone, and the uartet with the orchestra. It ave these four Lincoln egulars a chance to display e fine musicianship that has dded so much to the rchestra's concerts.

The various combinations ere especially noteworthy for e clear and sweet tones of chatz' violin and Jenkins' oboe nd the deeper and richer oices of Mrs. Work's cello and chols' bassoon. All gave u b s tantial performances, lthough the work gave better splay to the violinist and oboist, both of whom turned in especially satisfying performances.

In all of this the orchestra provided a commendable accompaniment, responsive to Conductor Leo Kopp and with a light but still full-voiced tone suitable to the composition.

The concert opened with a rousing performance of the popular Berlioz work, the "Roman Carnival" Overture, followed by the Haydn.

After intermission came Hindemith's Nobilissima Visione, in which the string sections particularly provided a fine sound and which ended with a set of magnificent chords dominated by the brass.

For the final number, Conductor Leo Kopp had chosen Dvorak's Scherzo Capriccioso, Op. 66, a lighthearted work but still one with substantial interest as a serious orchestra piece, using the various sections and many brief solo parts for varied and interesting effects.

And for an encore — provided despite the fact that the applause seemed less than overwhelming — the orchestra did the lively and light march from Prokofief's "The Love For Three Oranges."

All in all, it was a satisfying concert without either startlingly good or disfiguringly bad portions — a concert which displayed sound musicianship if not great brilliance.

He did battle with the Internal Revenue Service and was fined $7,500 and costs on two counts of income tax evasion in 1955. He had pleaded no defense to two of six counts and the other four had been dismissed. The amount allegedly evaded on the two counts a totaled $45,897.

The, federal government contended that Mainelli owed $179,517 in back taxes for 1947 through 1952 and an additional $141,150 in penalties. The claim was reportedly settled for $228,000 in 1958.

Survivors include his widow, Anne; sons, John C. Robert J., James T. and the Rev. Vincent P., all of Omaha, and the Rev. Eugene A. of Chicago; a daughter, Mrs. Matthew Vidaver of San Francisco; and brothers Leo, James and William of Omaha and Peter of Los Angeles.

The 32-mile walk for CROP will begin at 12:45 p.m. at the high school parking area, and start south, eventually circle back to town, and end at the United Methodist Church.

Frank Says Potassium Not Needed

Clay Center (AP) — Most of the $3 million spent by Nebraska farmers in 1969 for potassium fertilizer was wasted, University of Nebraska Extension Agronomist Dr. Kenneth Frank said Tuesday.

Frank made the observation in discussing an extension fertilizer experiment with potassium and magnesium during a meeting of college of agriculture scientists.

Most Nebraska soils have a plentiful supply of potassium and magnesium, he said, explaining that in addition, irrigation water in south central water usually contains all the needed amounts of potassium.

Soil test analyses for potassium in 19 south central counties shows more than adequate amounts of potassium in 97% of the farm fields, Frank said.

Rites Held For Dr. Thomas Huff, Former Mayor

Sioux City, Iowa (AP) — Funeral services were held here Tuesday for former Sioux City Mayor Dr. Thomas B. Huff, a native of Fairbury, Neb.

Dr. Huff died in a Sioux City retirement home Sunday at the age of 87.

He came to Sioux City in 1919 and established the American Serum Co. which he operated until retirement in 1968. He served as the first national president of the Transportation Association of America and the Animal Health Institute.

Dr Huff served as mayor of Sioux City from 1928 to 1930.

Explosive Device Hits Leasing Firm

Omaha (AP) — An explosive device went off in a southwest Omaha truck leasing firm early Tuesday, shattering windows and cracking walls. Manager Freeman Oglesby said damage to the Rollins Leasing Corp. was "not extensive." He said he did not know of any reason for the incident.

Police said the explosive, with the force of about one stick of dynamite, was apparently dropped or thrown into the building through a front window.

Service Is Set For Centenarian

Omaha (AP) — Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday at Myers Funeral Home for Mrs. Emma Warren, a centenarian who had lived in Nebraska since 1900. Mrs. Warren died Saturday at a local hospital after a long illness. She was listed as 103 on hospital records.

However, she had told friends that she lived as a slave in Missouri and had helped carry water to care for wounded soldiers during the Civil War, which ended in 1865. Burial will be at Mount Hope Cemetery.

Woman's Death Is Classified Traffic Fatality

The Oct. 21 death of Mrs. Frances Swan, 49, of Columbus has been classified as a traffic fatality by the State Roads Dept.'s Accident Records Bureau.

According to the bureau's report, Mrs. Swan apparently lost control of the vehicle she was driving on a county road. The vehicle apparently turned over after leaving the roadway and landed upside down in a water-filled canal nearby.

Mrs. Swan was alone in the vehicle at the time.

Pollution Control Deadline Is Set For Dec. 31, 1972

The deadline for completion of Nebraska's agricultural pollution abatement program is Dec. 31, 1972.

It was erroneously reported in the Lincoln Star Monday that the date was Dec. 1, 1971.

A spokesman for the Nebraska Department of Environmental Control explained that the date is only a goal for completion of the state's program and that it does not allow pollution of a stream until Dec. 31, 1972. "Any feedlot operator found to be polluting a stream will have to be stopped immediately. The same thing is true of any industry or other soure of pollution," he said.

POSTCARD by Stan Kaplan

The bull fight season is in the spring. The top of it is in March. But at this time of year we get the beginners — sometimes called "debutantes."

These are the young men who yearn to be another Manolete. A new Joselito.

Their eyes fill when they hear the band play: "The Virgin of the Macarena." They are courageous and ambitious.

But like pro ball, you need experience. And bull fighting is a game where you can't make a little mistake.

☆ ☆ ☆

The Madrid ring is a grand affair. Red stone arches Tiers of seats rising like a colosseum—which it is, for Spain was a Roman outpost. Three Roman emperors were born near Seville.

Most Americans like the ring and the pageantry But they don't dig the Spanish emotion They would like to give the bull a more even chance Maybe like letting him stick banderillo darts in the bullfighter.

There's a little bar down under the stands. After a couple of bulls, you find some Americans down there discussing the chances of the Firty-niners.

They get quite emotional about it.

☆ ☆ ☆

In these beginner fights, the bull has quite a good chance. One boy was gored the other day at Linares — the same ring where the Miura bull killed Manolete.

When a bullfighter is thrown up for grabs, it makes the Americans happy.

The part the Americans don't like is when the picadors—padded and on horseback—stick the spear in the neck of the charging bull.

The idea of this is to weaken the bull's neck muscles. To keep his head low. Matadors cannot fight a bull who has not been piced

He must be piced just so much—a delicate balance. If the picador nails him too hard, the bull does not have a good chance and the crowd boos.

If they get really mad, they throw their seat cushions.

The Madrid papers write florid stories of the fights.

"Jimenez was badly hurt by the horn. But this man of Andalusia, a truly brave and honest bullfighter, insisted on getting up. He brushed everybody aside and seizing the sword, he finished off the animal whom he had fought so perfectly and who had gored him so treacherously."

(Ah, there are sports writers everywhere!)

☆ ☆ ☆

What this idiot Jimenz did was cape the bull around, then he turned his back on him. Showing the crowd he had dominated the animal and his contempt for him.

While he was making this grandstand play, the bull simply walked up behind him and stuck his horn in him.

Jimenez will live. But he will eat standing up for quite awhile.

☆ ☆ ☆

Though the bull fights are Little League, the weather for watching them is splendid. October and November are Madrid's best months. The summers are frightfully hot; the winters would chill a well digger.

Futbol — soccer — is tremendously popular here as it is all over Europe.

The Spanish have seen our why Americans get emotional about it.

The Spanish do not like boxing either. A Madrileno said: "I saw a boxing match when I was in New York. At Madison Square Garden. I would never go again."

☆ ☆ ☆

He said he watched two fights. Then he went out and had a drink at the bar in the lobby. (Like the Americans who go under the bullfights stands here.)

He said: "You see, the Spanish do not like brutal sports."

Engineering 'Proteges' Announced

Twelve students in the College of Engineering and Architecture at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln have begun a year-long "protege" association with an equal number of professionals working in the fields in which the students are studying.

The professional engineers will spend time periodically with the engineering students, showing them the practical operational aspects of engineering.

The professionals will return to the campus in April during Engineers Week as guests of their student "proteges".

The "protege" project is sponsored by the Engineering Executive Board of the College.

The participants, area of engineering, students and professionals are:

Foreign Trade Vital Job Factor

Washington — In terms of employment, every $1 billion worth of goods and services the United States exports supports about 100,000 jobs.

Combined with the employment involved in imports, total jobs related to foreign trade range up to 4.5 million—more than the number of people over age 15 working on farms.

Bohn Is Winner Of $500 Stipend

A freshman in the College of Engineering and Architecture at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has been awarded the $500 New Holland Co. scholarship.

Recipient of the stipend is Donnie Lunn Bohn, son of Mr. and Adolph C. Bohn of Ravenna.

Top Court Makes Jolley Man Without A Country

Washington (AP) — Thomas Glenn Jolley, a modern man without a country, may have reached the end of the road in his fight to remain in the United States.

The 27-year-old North Carolina native who renounced his citizenship in Canada in 1967 to escape the draft did not win a single vote in the Supreme Court Tuesday on his appeal for a hearing. He faces deportation within 90 days — but to where?

Jolley, now working as a news reporter in Tallahassee, Fla., never applied for Canadian citizenship and Canada has no legal obligation to take him back. An Immigration and Naturalization Service spokesman said Canada will be asked to allow Jolley to live there.

If Canada agrees, said chief counsel Charles Gordon of the Immigration Service, then Jolley will cross the border voluntarily or be forced to go there. If Canada refuses, Gordon said, "We will have to find a country that will accept him."

The court made no comment on several claims raised by Jolley's lawyers in an effort to avert deportation. Their main point was that he did not give up his citizenship voluntarily since he renounced it to avoid Army service.

When the news reached Jolley in Tallahassee he said he was not surprised and that he doesn't know what legal avenues remain open. He said he wants to remain in the United States and he still might have a chance if no country can be found to accept him.

In other actions, the court shored up the rights of men and women to be treated equally on the job. In one case the justices let stand a ruling that Pan American World Airways must consider men for stewards. In a second case, the court refused to review a ruling — and thus let it stand — that a South Bend, Ind., brewery cannot force women to retire at 62 while allowing men to work until they are 65.

The justices turned down an appeal by Gov. George Wallace of Alabama attacking the exemption of "superficially charitable, religious, educational or scientific" organizations from the federal income tax.

Wallace argued that groups he described as the "pro-Viet Cong American Friends Service Committee" and the "leftist Urban League" are tax shelters for the wealthy few.

House Passes Pesticide Bill

Washington (AP) — The House passed 288 to 91 a pesticides-control bill Tuesday after crushing several proposed changes that environmentalists said were crucial to creating effective new legislation.

A series of amendments offered by Rep. John G. Dow, D-N.Y., and his supporters, was rejected as the House went along with the bill approved by its Agriculture Committee.

A major revision, endorsed by Agriculture Committee Chairman H. R. Poage, D-Tex., to permit states to impose whatever additional restrictions they wish on all pesticides, was approved, 167 to 56. The original committee bill would have pre-empted the power of states to put more restrictions on what would be designated as general-use pesticides.

Poage, describing the bill as a compromise of views offered by both sides, said the legislation would give current law a full overhaul and would grant the Environmental Protection Agency vast new powers over makers, distributors and users of pesticides — covering everything from farm products, except fertilizers, to insecticide sprays used in homes.

Ex-Convict Gives Up; Rape, Kidnaping, Assault Charged

Concord, Calif. (UPI) — A pint-sized ex-convict surrendered to police Tuesday and freed a 15-year-old girl kidnaped two days ago in a wild melee in which two persons were shot.

Pleasant Hill, Calif., Police Chief Edward S. Kreins said Marvin Joseph Pontarelli, 29, originally from Washington State, first threatened to kill pretty blonde Debbie Devore after police surrounded a rented home in Concord where she was held.

The suspect released her and surrendered after two hours of "soft dialogue" with Kreins, the girl and her father.

Pontarelli, who was described by Kreins as standing five-feet-six and weighing 140 pounds, was charged with kidnaping, two counts of attempted murder, two counts of assault with a deadly weapon, burglary, and three counts of rape.

Dragged From Home

The teen-aged girl was dragged early Sunday morning from the Pleasant Hill home of Mr. and Mrs. John Whitlow, where she had gone to spend the night with the couple's daughter, Susan, also 15.

The kidnaper slugged Miss Whitlow on the head with a pistol and shot her father, John, 56, and her mother, Doris, 55, before escaping out a patio door. The Whitlows' wounds were not serious.

Kreins said the suspect "saw the girls at a carnival Saturday night, followed them home, and was in the house for an hour while everybody was asleep before he made his move."

As the kidnaper fled with his victim, a police car gave chase but the patrolman lost control and smashed into a highway divider. However, the description of the suspect's new red Mustang helped police find him Monday night.

'Heard Girl Holler'

When 30 police officers, including FBI agents and Concord and Pleasant Hill policemen, arrived at the home leased by Pontarelli, "we heard the girl holler that she was upstairs," Kreins said. "He (the suspect) said he had a gun on her and would kill her if the police came in.

"The girl apparently had good rapport with him and was able to talk with him," Kreins said. Her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Devore, arrived and the father also talked to the kidnaper.

ICC Suspends Rail Freight Hike

Washington (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission said Tuesday it has suspended railroad rate increases it had approved for after Phase 1 of the wage-price freeze.

ICC Chairman George Stafford said in a statement only the Cost of Living Council can modify the commission's ruling.

All increases in rates and charges scheduled to become effective after Nov. 13 have been suspended.

Funds Released For Projects In Nebras

WASHINGTON (AP) — A total of $8.3 million, previously appropriated by Congress for fiscal 1972 which ends next June 30, was released by the Office of Management and Budget Tuesday for projects in or affecting Nebraska.

Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., said the funds include $750,000 as a start toward relocating the tiny community of Niobrara which is slowly being inundated by rising water tables. The total cost of the Niobrara relocation has been estimated at $7.8 million. The Niobrara project will be handled by the Corps of Engineers.

Other construction funds released Tuesday include $2 million to the Corps of Engineers for use in the Papio Creek flood control and recreation project in the Omaha area. Total cost of that project, which includes construction of 21 dams, has been estimated at $38 million. A total of $1,310,000 was assigned to that project in the last fiscal year.

The Bureau of Reclamation received $400,000 for use in the Mid-State Reclamation Project in central Nebraska.

And the Corps of Engineers received $2,250,000 for levy improvements and $2,900,000 for work in improving a nine-foot navigational channel on the Missouri River from Sioux City, Iowa, to its mouth. Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri are affected by that project, Curtis said.

Definition Of Sub-Standard Housing Needed

The State Housing Advisory Council decided Tuesday a definition of sub-standard housing should be established.

Don Sievers, chairman of the seven-member advisory unit, said it was felt the definition would be particularly useful by such agencies as welfare.

"They (the welfare department) know, for instance, that in effect they are subsidizing sub-standard housing in some cases," he said, "but so far no definition has been established to pinpoint what is below standard."

The council was created last month by Gov. J. J. Exon and the meeting Tuesday was its first. It was created at the same time the governor released the second part of a statewide housing study.

Sievers said the council also decided to investigate the possibility of adding more members. The council is made up of representatives from various state agencies.

Exon said its purpose would be to define the role government would play in the housing field.

Sievers is employed by the State Department of Economic Development.

Muskie Claims Nixon Plays Pollution Politics

Portland, Ore. (AP) — Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, said Tuesday that the Nixon administration "is using indirect behind-the-scenes pressure in the House to dilute the water pollution bill that was passed unanimously by the Senate."

Muskie said the President is now opposing the bill either because of Muskie's identification with it or because he "doesn't have the environmental backbone to support a tough bill."

Muskie spoke at an airport news conference on his two day political swing through Oregon.

Feeling Pressure

He said that when the bill was before the Senate, "the administration at no point undertook to make a case against it. Whatever its doubts, they have never been stated." Muskie said Nixon is feeling pressure from industry.

"We must force the administration to say whether it is opposed and why it is opposed," he said.

Muskie, now the leading Democratic presidential candidate in several Oregon polls, attacked the Nixon economic record in an address to 200 persons at a coffee party in the lumber port of Coos Bay.

Inflation Hit

He said that during the Nixon administration, unemployment has increased from 3.2 to more than 6%, inflation from 4.5 to 6.3%, and the balance of payments from an annual surplus of $1.6 billion to a deficit of $13 billion.

"That is our economic performance in 2½ years of the Nixon administration. Growth has disappeared.

"I'll take the old prosperity, the one that we knew in eight years of Democratic administrations," he said.

Muskie said Nixon's approach to all problems has been one of too little and too late.

Referring to Russian fishermen who have been fishing off both coasts, Muskie urged a "policy to preserve fishing as opposed to exploitation from the outside."

'LITTLE GULPER' GULPS

This device, looking much like a brother to a sick brontosaurus, is called a "litter gulper." The machine is the first of its kind and unlike its extinct brother, will likely never run out of a "food" supply. The machine has rotating steel fingers at the end of an aluminum boom to scoop up bottles, cans, paper and other trash. It is touted as a fast and cheap way to clean litter from the nation's highways. The device was being demonstrated Tuesday on Capitol Hill in Washington.

New Aid Course Charted For Doctor Training

Washington (AP) — The House Tuesday finished congressional action on bills charting a $3.8 billion new course for federal aid in training doctors and nurses.

By voice vote, the House sent to President Nixon a pair of measures authorizing a three-year federal spending program to help speed the education of professional health personnel.

Included in the massive package of help for the nation's 106 medical schools are special incentives for institutions to develop three-year programs to train physicians. Most curricula now last four years.

The two bills — one covering doctors, the other nurses — make available twice what Nixon had sought. But sponsors say they expect Nixon will sign them in view of what they term serious shortages of manpower and widespread financial trouble experienced by about half the nation's medical schools.

The legislation, approved by the Senate last month, provides for the first time a system of payments to medical schools based on a formula involving the number of students, increases in enrollment, and an institution's efforts to shorten the time involved in medical education.

Institutional support currently amounts to about $500 per student each year. Under the so-called capitation grants for schools of medicine, dentistry and osteopathy, the schedule would be $2,500 for each student during his first, second and third years; $4,000 for each student in the fourth year if he is graduating; $6,000 for each student who graduates in the third year as a result of a speeded-up course.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., chief sponsors of the bills, called the legislation a major congressional response to a health care crisis. They said it aims at stabilizing finances of schools so they can direct energies to the nation's needs.

In order to qualify for basic institutional support, a school must assure substantial increases in its enrollment by next September.

Court Hears Argument In Welfare Fraud Case

The Nebraska Supreme Court Tuesday heard the oral arguments in a case involving a welfare mother from Omaha charged with fraudulently accepting Aid to Dependent Children benefits.

Mrs. Ophelia Bohannon's attorney told the high court that the Welfare Department was attempting to hide its own inefficiency in charging her with fraud.

"They (the Douglas County Welfare Department) keep her on ADC when she tried to get off, then charge and convict her of fraud under absolutely bizarre circumstances," the lawyer said.

Mrs. Bohannon was previously convicted by a lower court of defrauding the state of $35 through failure to disclose a financial arrangement.

However, Attorney Clayton Shrout said Mrs. Bohannon's caseworker admitted during the district court trial that she knew of Mrs. Bohannon's holding joint title to a Cadillac and some real estate.

Clifford Jones, the man whom she held the titles for, was the real owner, Mrs. Bohannon maintained.

"I just don't understand this," Shrout said; "they take her off when she says she is married, put her back on when it was discovered she wasn't, then a few months later they charge her with wrong-doing."

However, Assistant Attorney General Harold Mosher said the truth was she did in fact own the land and yet told the welfare office she did not.

Sentence Upheld

Austin, Tex (UPI) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled freedom of speech does not give a person the right to burn an American flag. The court upheld a four-year sentence given a Dallas youth for burning a flag during a protest demonstration at a Dallas park last year.

Iowa Highway Group Gets Bids To Finish Interstate 29

Ames, Iowa (UPI) — The Iowa Highway Commission Tuesday received bids for the final stretch of Interstate 29 in Iowa, which is scheduled for completion on Nov. 18, 1972.

In the bid openings, the commission said the apparent low bidder for the final 19 miles to the Missouri border was Koss Construction Co., of Des Moines. The bids were for the final stretch of paving in the southwest corner of the state.

The bids were scheduled to be considered by the commission Wednesday.

The work was broken down into two sections with the south section of 8.7 miles north from the Missouri line bid at $2.8 million and the next 10.1 miles bid at $3.3 million.

Board Won't Cut 'Hair' At Pershing

The Pershing Municipal Auditorium Advisory Board Tuesday voted 4-3 to accept a booking of the controversial rock musical "Hair" should the show be offered to Lincoln.

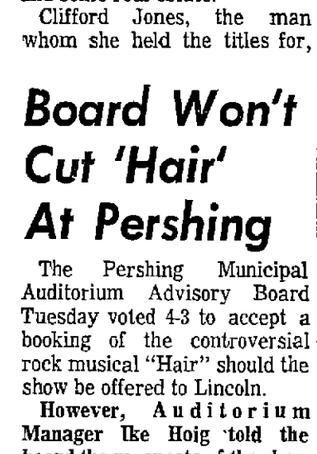

However, Auditorium Manager Ike Hoig told the board the prospects of the show being offered in Lincoln "are very dim."

Hoig requested the board's guidance vote as to whether the booking should be accepted if offered in the future.

The 4-3 vote put an end to several months of attempts to ban the show completely from the auditorium.

Board Chairman Dick Chapin said he switched his vote in favor of the show because he didn't want to act as a censor.

John Hoppe, recently named to the advisory board succeeding Gene Eaton, attended his first meeting Tuesday.

Nixon Urges Congress To Revive Foreign Aid

Chicago (AP) — President Nixon, leapfrogging half-way across the continent to help Republicans build up a 1972 campaign war chest, called on Congress Tuesday night to rise above partisanship and revive the foreign aid program — or face greatly increased danger of war in the world.

Sounding a theme of peace with prosperity, Nixon appeared in person at $500 per plate "salute to the President" dinners in New York and Chicago — and via closed circuit television in 18 other cities from coast to coast.

He used the forum not only to help the GOP raise an estimated $5 million, but also to urge Congress to keep alive the foreign aid program struck down by the Senate two weeks ago.

About 2,500 demonstrators gathered outside the Hilton Hotel here four hours before the President was due to arrive. Police said about half a dozen persons were arrested after objects were thrown into the street.

But by the time Nixon landed the crowd had dwindled to about 500 as the temperature dropped to 32 degrees and a brisk wind swept in from Lake Michigan.

Earlier, in New York, about 200 demonstrators were kept at a distance from the Americana Hotel, where Nixon was speaking. A block away, 50 counterpickets demonstrated in favor of the President. Mounted police kept both groups in their separate areas.

Nixon's main pitch at both dinners was on behalf of the foreign aid program.

"If the United States at this particular time should determine that it will discontinue its programs of mutual assistance for countries abroad . . it can only mean that the world will become much more unstable, that the dangers of war in the world will greatly increase and that the United States will no longer be a world power respected in the world," Nixon said in his first public comment on the foreign aid crisis.

The foreign, assistance program, he said, is above partisanship and it must be continued

"I trust it will be, by this Congress," he said.

Pancake Eaters Contribute $1,800 To Aid Love Library

The "eat pancakes for Love" fund raising effort for Love Memorial Library netted about $1,800, according to Mike Wirth, one of the coordinators of the event.

The proceeds from the pancake feed, cosponsored by Kappa Alpha Theta and Farmhouse fraternities, will bring the amount in the Love Library fund to about $5,000, according to Dru Toebben, president of the Tassels.

The Love Library fund in the University of Nebraska foundation was started this fall by the Tassels and Corncobs, NU pep organizations, to purchase books and equipment.

Wirth said he was "well pleased" with the results of the feed, held in the NU Student Union.

"We were turning out pancakes as fast as we could from 4.30 to 8:15 p.m," he said "The volunteers worked tremendously hard and the Student Union people were very cooperative."

Wirth said several Lincoln food dealers contributed most of the food for the feed, but that $200 to $300 would be taken out of the $2,100 grossed to pay for butter, some NU Student Union fees and bills for 220 volt and gas line attachments to the cooking griddle.

Wirth said efforts were being made to have the Union Board waive some of the Student Union fees. He said the board would probably make a decision on the fees by the first of next week

Dick Tracy's Car Is Stolen

Pottstown, Pa. (AP) — Someone stole Dick Tracy's car!

Pottstown Police Chief Dick Tracy left his car at the Reading Railroad station in this eastern Pennsylvania community Monday night for his wife Barbara, who commutes by train to work in Philadelphia.

But Mrs. Tracy was unable to find the car when she returned from work. Chief Tracy checked with the railroad in case they had towed the car away, but no luck.

A bumper sticker on the rear of the missing car proudly proclaims "Support Your Local Police."

Injunction Granted In Draft Case

Los Angeles (UPI) — A federal judge Tuesday granted a 60-day injunction against the Selective Service to a 23-year-old artist who argued that a little-known loophole in the draft law forbids the government to draft anyone until Dec. 28.

U.S. District Judge Robert J. Kelleher noted that the argument by Karl S. Bohn of Santa Barbara, Calif., "seems to present a case of national importance."

Kelleher granted Bohn an injunction against his draft board, preventing it from inducting him for 60 days. He set Dec. 2 as the date of the next hearing.

Bohn's case rests on his contention that a section of the draft law reads "no person shall be inducted or ordered into active service without his consent under this title within

President Nixon signed the law Sept 28, meaning that legally nobody can be dratfed before Dec. 28, Bohn and his attorneys argue.

The clause was part of the original draft law passed when the draft was revived in 1948 after World War II, and the 90-day moratorium was apparently intended to give the Selective Service time to get into operation again.

Vote On Student Loan Procedure Set

State Investment Officer Fred Kuethe said Tuesday the Investment Council will vote on whether to contract with the University of Nebraska to act as a clearing house for the student loan program at its Nov. 17 meeting.

Such an arrangement, Kuethe said, would free his office of the voluminous paper work connected with the federally-guaranteed loan program.

The council has already contracted with the State College Board of Trustees for it to act as the follow-up agent involved with repayment of loans.

Under the proposed agreement, the University through the Financial Aid Office, would provide the services involved with securing a loan for students.

The University Board of Regents last Friday approved its participation as the program's procurement agent.

"This doesn't rule banks as procurement agents out of the picture," Kuethe said; "it just gives the council another option to work through."

In addition, Kuethe said the University would act not only as the procurement agent for students attending state-supported colleges; but also for those students attending private colleges, junior colleges and vocational-technical colleges.

"All students attending schools in Nebraska will be eligible for loans," Kuethe said.

The requirements for participation in the program include a full-time student classification as defined by the colleges and financial need.

The Investment Officer said the $1 million program authorized by the 1971 Legislature will not begin until more of the mechanics are worked out. The initial pilot of the program will involve approximately $100,000.

Nor, Kuethe said, does he know how many banks will participate.

Under the program, the Investment Council will use $1 million of the $43 million Teachers' Retirement Fund to underwrite federally guaranteed loans from banks.

The council then purchases notes in blocks of $5,000, thus allowing the lender to make more loans available.

Safe Unsafe

Oslo (AP) — Thieves broke into a shopping center, found the combination to a safe on a piece of paper in an unlocked desk drawer, opened the safe and got away with $1,700 police reported.

Nader Group May Be Formed In State Soon

Omaha (AP) — A statewide organization formed along consumer advocate Ralph Nader's principles may be operating in Nebraska by next fall, Joe Highland said Monday.

Highland, a Nader associate, is in Nebraska this week to help organize Public Improvement Research for Man, a local group. Highland is a staff member of Nader's Center for the Study of Responsive Law in Washington.

Highland, 27-year-old former University of Minnesota student, said a similar group he helped organize among students in Minnesota last year now has raised enough money to hire a small professional staff.

Nelson Kieff of Omaha is temporary state coordinator of Public Involvement Research for Man. He said a petition drive for a special fee to support the group will be organized over the Christmas vacation.

Highland spoke at the University of Nebraska at Omaha and Creighton University Monday and will talk at other colleges across the state Thursday.

Voters At Alda OK Bond Issue

Alda (UPI) — Voters here have approved an $80,000 bond issue to be used for construction of a new municipal water system.

Town Clerk Burdette L. Ronnau said the issue passed 65-18. Bids will be let soon and construction is to start early in the spring.

The new system will serve the entire community. At present, residents in the north end of town do not have a town water supply.

Four Youths Face Charges In Explosion

Kearney (AP) — Buffalo County Attorney Andrew McMullen said Tuesday he plans formal charges in the case of four youths in connection with an explosion Thursday night, but the formal charge probably will not be the same one contained in the warrant on which they were arrested.

Police Sgt. Ed Kearns obtained a warrant from District Judge S. S. Sidner accusing the four youths of illegal possession of explosives. It named Ed Popple, 18, and Ron Nelson, 17, both of Axtell, and Mike Fox and Kelley Somner, both 15, of Kearney.

Police entered the case after the four youths reported to a hospital for treatment of minor injuries, saying they were walking from their car to the Kearney State College Library when the explosion occurred.

Kearns said Tuesday further investigation showed the explosion occurred in the north edge of Kearney rather than on the college campus, and that the substance involved was a mixture of acetylene and oxygen in a plastic garbage disposal type bag, which had detonated prematurely.

None of the boys is in custody.

Douglas County Won't Support Dike

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Omaha — A motion by Douglas County Supervisor Jerry Hassett of Omaha that would have made the county board the local sponsor of a flood-control dike around King Lake died Tuesday morning for lack of a second.

King Lake, lying in the flood-prone Elkhorn River basin, was partially flooded when ice jams caused the Elkhorn to overflow its banks last Febuary. It was the latest of a series of floods to hit the town in the last 25 years.

The Army Corps of Engineers has offered to build a ring dike around the town with some $330,000 in federal matching funds, a ready appropriated by Congress, provided that King Lake can get local sponsorship to the tune of $170,000.

Hassett said he made his motion based on a recommendation by County Supervisor George Erhart, who appeared at the board meeting to say he considered the dike a feasible project, and a study by the Corps indicating that the dike would not substantially raise the level of flood waters in adjacent unprotected land, as some critics of the plan had charged.

Hassett said King Lake residents feel they do not have a broad enough tax base to finance the measure themselves, and that the state would be unlikely to sponsor the project. The town can now try to get total federal funding for the dike, Hassett said, or approach the county board again later.

"As of now, the project is dead," he said. "It could be revived, but the chances of securing a majority vote of the Douglas County board are not likely."

Councilmen's Trip To Hawaii Will Cost Taxpayers $3,000

Omaha (AP) —Omaha taxpayers will have to pay more than $3,000 to pay for six of seven City Council members to fly to Honolulu, Hawaii, later this month for the annual meeting of the National League of Cities.

Only Councilman Warren Swigart, who objected Aug. 23 to sending "many people" from one department to one convention, isn't planning to attend the Nov. 28-Dec. 1 meeting.

Vouchers for the $459 air fare and the $65 registration fee for each of the six councilmen have been filed with the finance Department, a total of $3,144. Vouchers requesting money for hotel bills, meals and other expenses haven't been filed, according to department records.

Five of the council members also plan to take their wives to Hawaii and each has been billed for his wife's transportation cost, the vouchers show.

City records don't show whether any of the councilmen will stay over for the Nebraska-Hawaii football game Dec. 4.

Sarpy Board Approves IDA Bonds for Plant

Papillion (AP) — The Sarpy County Board approved Monday the issuance of $3.5 million in bonds under the Industrial Development Amendment to build a National By-Products Inc plant near its present rendering works about two miles south of Bellevue.

The area has been the home of a by-product plant for more than 60 years and National has been there more than 30 years. The firm makes grease, tallow, soap and feed from waste animals.

Christmas Tree Cutting Allowed In Forest Areas

Halsey (AP) — Families will once again be able to cut their own Christmas trees at the Bessey and Niobrara divisions of the National Forest near Halsey and Nenzel.

Verne Schultz, district ranger for the two forest divisions, noted, however, that only red cedar trees will be allowed to be cut this year.

Cutting will be allowed the first two weekends in December, Dec. 4-5 and Dec. 11-12. In past years, persons entering the forest have been able to cut down pine, but this was not allowed in 1971.

Castro To Arrive In Chile; First Latin American Trip Since 1959

The New York Times

By JUAN de ONIS

Santiago, Chile — Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba will arrive here Wednesday from Havana on his first trip to Latin America in more than 11 years.

The announcement of the official visit by the leftwing government of President Salvador Allende Gossens came as Communist and Socialist youth squads painted city walls with welcome signs and pictures of Dr. Castro appeared in the capital under bright early summer skies.

Castro is expected to be here for ten days, during which, he will address a mass rally here, visit the Chuquicamata copper mine, recently expropriated from its U.S. owners, the port city of Valparaiso, the steel and coal center at Concepcion, and go fishing for trout in the glacial streams of Southern Chile.

A leaflet campaign by the rightwing anti-Communist group called "Fatherland and Liberty" — attacking the Cuban Communist regime and urging Castro to "stay at home" drew a denunciation from the Foreign Ministry which deplored "this attempt to create an adverse and hostile climate" for the visit.

Most Chileans, however, were curious to see the Cuban leader, and among leftists particularly, there was an enthusiastic desire to see Castro on Chilean soil.

Breakdown

Castro's visit to Chile symbolizes the breakdown of a hemispheric policy of isolation of the Castro regime that the United States has promoted since 1961.

The visit here, with a stopover in Peru, will bring Castro back on the Latin American scene in a somewhat new role, more as a goodwill emissary to what Havana regards as "progressive" governments than as a revolutionary firebrand.

It will be the first time since 1959 that Castro has visited any Latin American country, and his first trip outside of Cuba since 1967, when he went to the Soviet Union.

For Allende, the visit not only cements the bridge of political friendship between Chile's leftwing government and the Cuban government, but has domestic political importance.

Allende has had problems since his presidential election campaign last year with the Revolutionary Left Movement (MIR), a pro-Cuban action group that promotes peasant land invasions, preaches violent revolution, and influences radical sectors of Allende's Socialist Party.

POSTERS . . . of Castro in Santiago, Chile, prepare for arrival of the Cuban premier.

Castro's presence here, side by side with Allende, is expected to serve as a revolutionary endorsement of the Chilean president's nonviolent "road to socialism" through legal, electoral means of ballots, not bullets.

For the United States and other members of the Organization of American States, which expelled the Castro government from the hemispheric organization in 1962 and ordered a diplomatic and economic boycott in 1964, the visit may put this policy in a new light.

The policy of isolation and economic denial imposed on Cuba is suffering the desertion of Latin American governments that are adopting more independent foreign policies as U.S. economic cooperation with this area is reduced.

Gen. Juan Velasco Alvarado, Peru's military president, said he will go to the airport in Lima to meet with Castro when he makes an expected stopover there on the Havana-to-Santiago flight.

As if to prepare this visit, Cuban foreign minister Raul Roa recently attended in Lima a meeting of the world's underdeveloped countries.

Engineered By Chile

The participation of Cuba in the Lima meeting was engineered by Chile, which has taken on the role of restoring Cuba to "respectable standing" in the Latin American community — with disregard for the decisions of the OAS.

Peru does not go this far. The Peruvian Foreign Ministry has contended that the OAS should revise its decisions, which were mandatory, and allow each member country to decide on its own what kind of relations it should have with Cuba.

The last time Castro came to Latin America, 1959, it was in the flush o his triumph over the regime of president Fulgencio Batista.

The Cuban leader was at the height of his popularity in Latin America. Large crowds gathered to cheer his every word and appearance.

But after these early visits, the presence of Castro and his increasingly militant regime began to be felt in less open and more uncomfortable ways in Latin America through a wave of subversive activities backed by Havana.

Elaborate System

Havana set up an elaborate system of support for sympathetic groups seeking to topple existing governments in the region and install pro-Cuban regimes.

Thousands of young Latin Americans were ferried to Cuba to receive training in revolutionary political action and guerrilla techniques. They then went back to their home countries with preparation, and often material support, to carry out subversive missions.

Cuban agents and money were directly involved in such major guerrilla efforts as those in Venezuela and Colombia — both against democratically elected governments — and in the high-water mark of Cuba's subversive effort, the ill-fated Bolivian guerrilla movement that was led by the late Ernesto "Che" Guevara with Castro's direct involvement in planning and political support.

None of these Cuban-directed guerrilla activities have brought down a Latin American government in a decade. In contrast, the first government really sympathetic to the Cuban revolution that has emerged in this period is the Chilean "popular unity" government of Allende, a Socialist, who came to power through a free, constitutional election.

Allende, who is almost 20 years older than the 44-year-old Cuban leader, was a frequent visitor to Havana before his election and attended a number of Cuban revolutionary celebrations. Now, Castro is awaited in the Latin American country that claims it is opening a "new road to socialism" through democratic political institutions, and without bloodshed.

Chile Wants To Talk Over Foreign Debts

Santiago, Chile (UPI) — Chile wants to renegotiate its $3 billion foreign debt, President Salvador Allende announced Tuesday. He emphasized that his government plans to honor all foreign debts contracted by previous governments

Allende made the announcement in an unannounced nationwide radio broadcast. He said renegotiation of the foreign debt, almost half of which is in the United States, will be carried out "to adequately satisfy national and foreign interests."

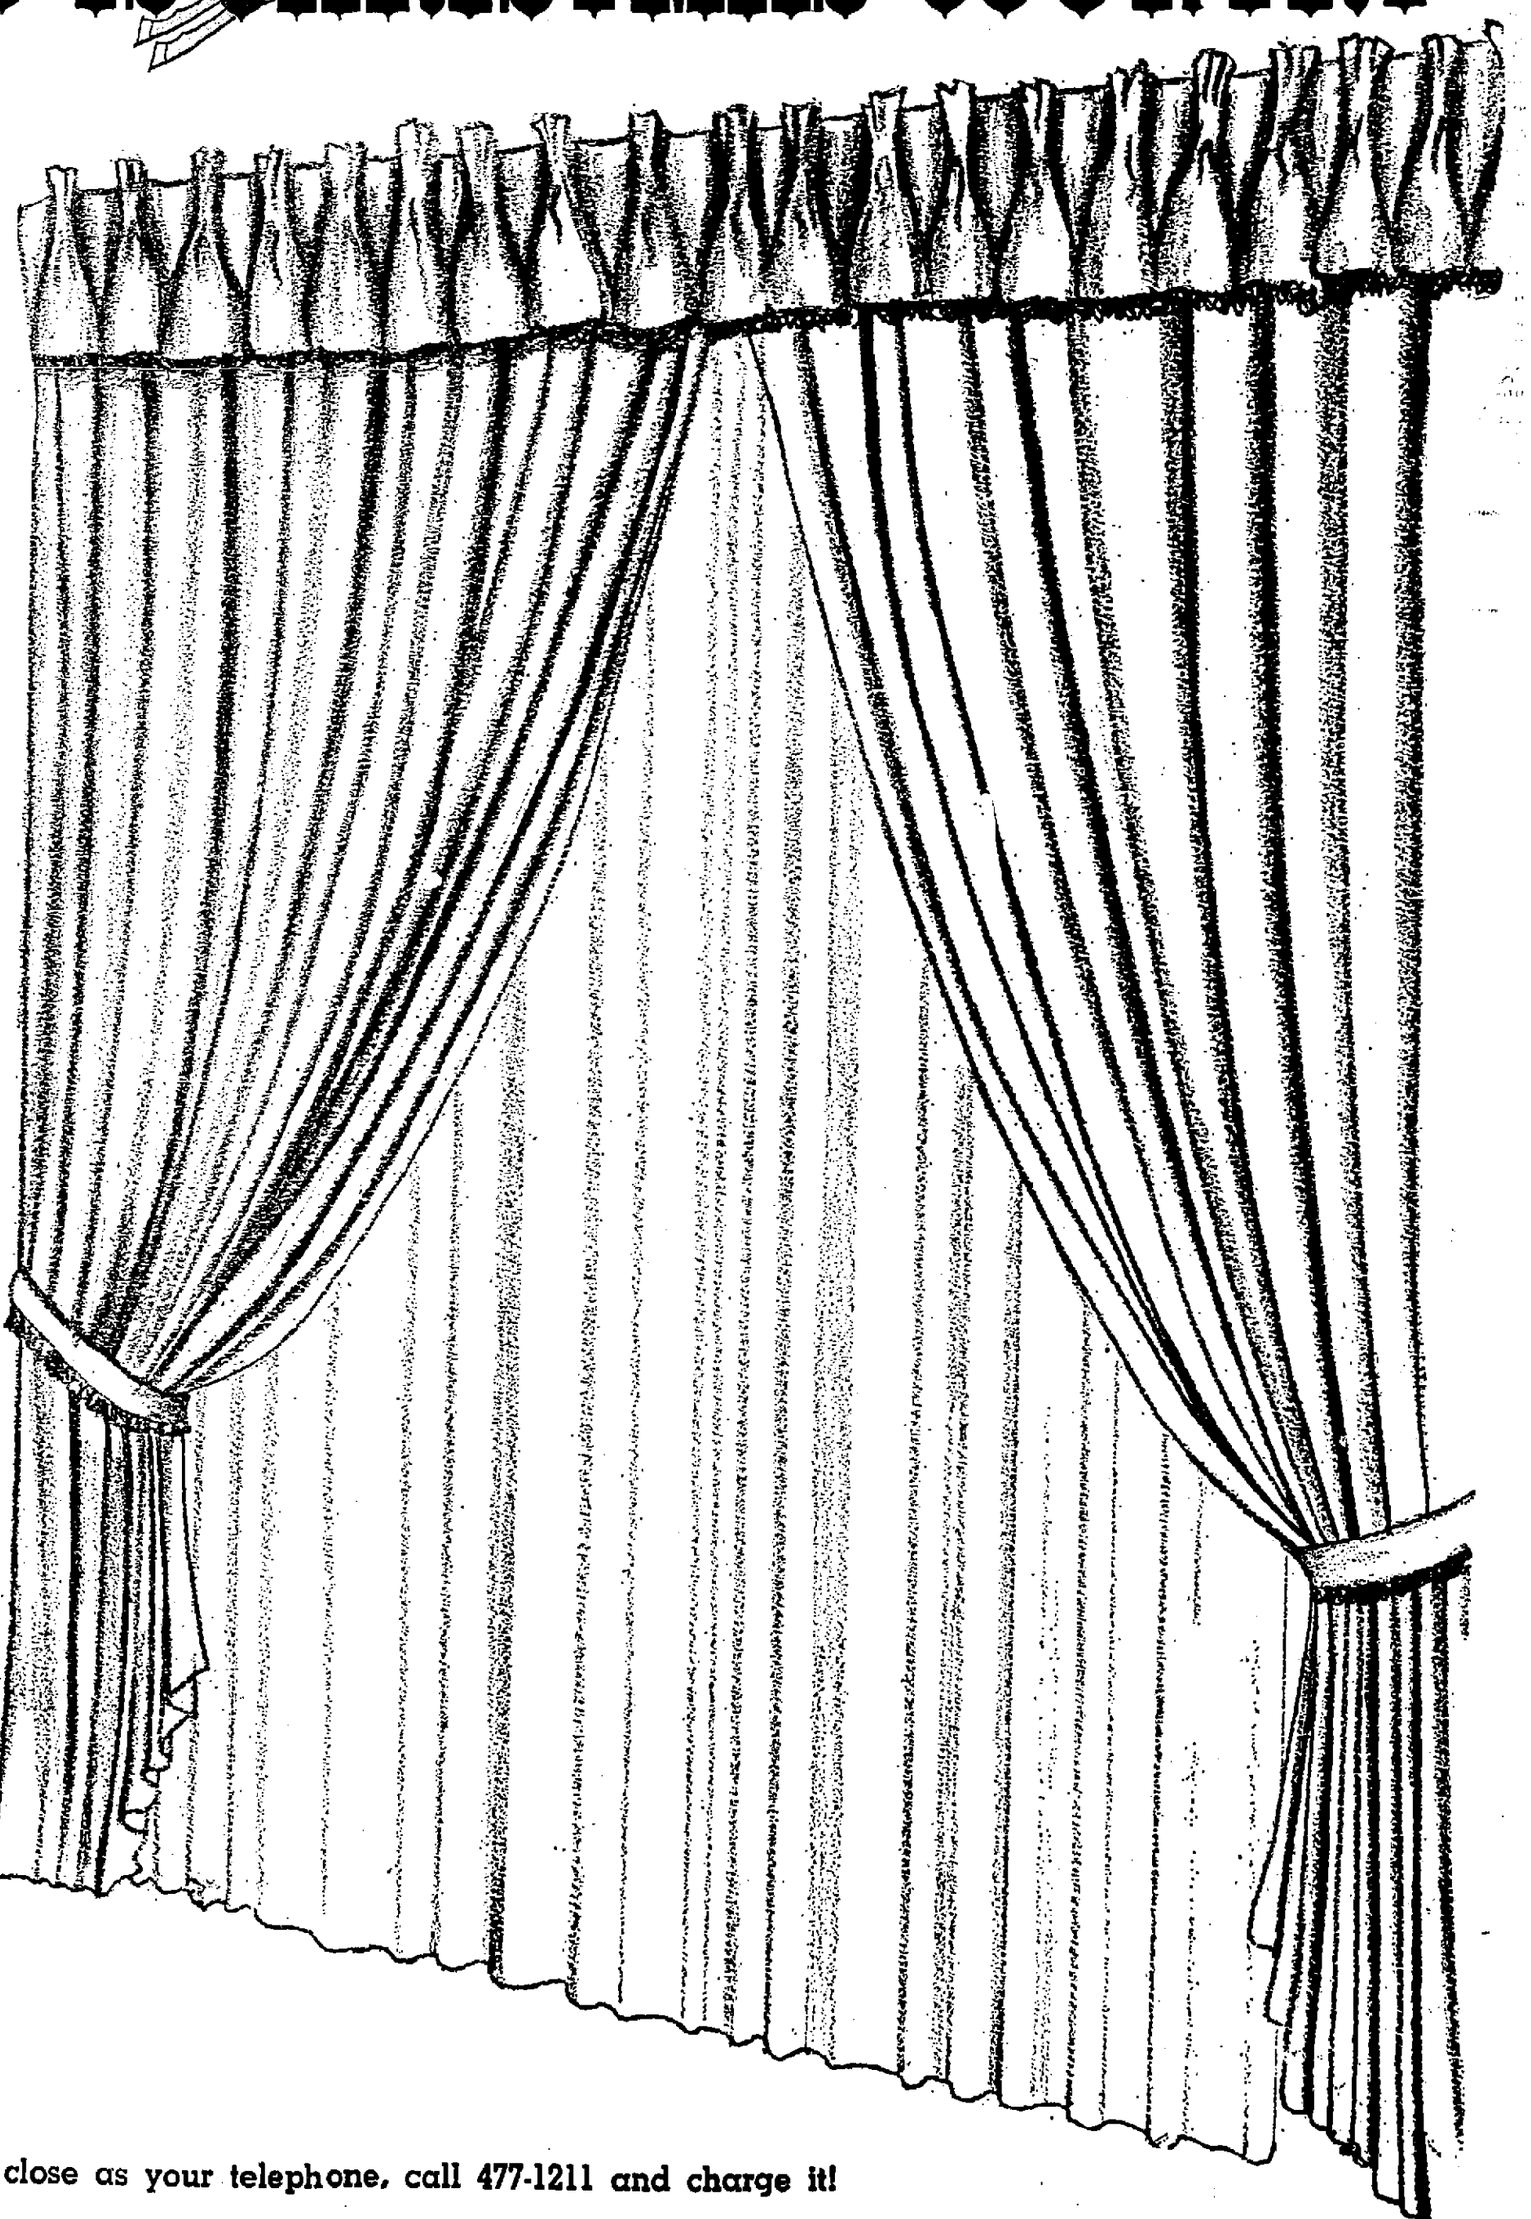

Allende said previous governments have put Chile in debt abroad to the extent of more than $3 billion, "making the country second only to Israel in the biggest per capita debt ratio in the world." He noted, however, that American copper companies whose properties were nationalized by his government earlier this year, owe the state an alleged $723 millionin excessive profits they made operating Chilean mines.

Allende said any country in exercise of its sovereignty can and must adopt whatever measures it considers necessary to its development. He noted that the United States, in order to equalize an unfavorable balance of payments, recently unilaterally adopted measures to this end.

Chile, he said, preferred not to use the U.S. formula. Instead, he said, it has decided to call its creditors together "to seek, through renegotiation, a new restructuring" of its foreign debt.

Reasons that led him to make his decision, Allende said, included the growing foreign debt through 1970, the anticipated flight of foreign exchange from Chile through amortizations and interest payments over the subsequent three years and the drying-up of dividend and tax payments by the nationalized copper companies. He also noted that the United States banking system had closed out an estimated $190 million line of credits previously extended to Chile.

This German fire clock was made of pewter about 1800 The numbers on the glass reservoir told how much oil was left. It was a poor time keeper
(Old Charter Clock collection)

BY RALPH AND TERRY KOVEL

When you burn the candle at both ends you really are using your time twice as fast as you should. That phrase comes from the use of a candle marked to denote the passage of time. Before the candle was used, time had been marked by burning damp, knotted grass ropes.

The clock lamp was developed by the 17th century A candlestick like base held a reservoir for oil and a space for a protruding wick The amount of oil remaining indicated the time.

The most famous of these lamps were called Cardan lamps. They are interesting examples of German - pewter making, but are poor time pieces Most of them were marked for eight hours, but the oil in the small reservoir could not burn that long. Filling the reservoir to exactly the right height at the right time and controlling the height of flame gave the correct time. It must have been difficult to keep appointments. Everyone had a different time.

Q. "Cmbergmı" is marked on my doll. Can you tell me about it? The mark may. say more, but the body is attached to the head in such a way that the rest is covered. The head is bisque. The body has joined arms and legs.

A Could the mark say G.M. Bergmann? He was a famous doll maker who worked in Germany after 1877. Bergmann came to America and, as a cowboy, fought the Indians in the West about 1870. He returned to Germany and began working in a doll factory. He started his own firm in 1889.

Most of his dolls had jointed composition bodies, although some had kid leather bodies. His firm used bisque heads made by other factories.

Q How can I tell the age of an old tin can that held food?

A Tin cans had soldered side seams and a hole at the top that was sealed with solder before 1915 The cans were made of steel and coated with tin They were cut and soldered by hand. The side seams were joined by crimping instead of soldering about 1915. This meant a slight ridge may be felt on the can. The hole at the top that was soldered was also omitted and the can top was all one piece.

Beer cans were first made in the 1930s and they have a triangular opening at the top. The pulltab type of can is a recent invention and has only been known since the 1960s.

Q When was the first cut glass made? I was told most was made between 1885 and 1905.

A The ancient Greeks made a form of cut glass. The type familiar to collectors started in England about 1715. Any glass decorated by a cutting process where part of the glass is removed with a cutting wheel, is called cut glass. The pieces today that are found in the shops were usually those from the Brilliant Period, 1880 to 1905 This is the very heavy, deeply cut glassware that has been popular for table wares.

Abby: 'good taste' is a vital factor

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote in saying she and her husband were embarrassed by a friend who carried on with his girl friend in public, "kissing, hugging, smooching and what not." She claimed it was bad manners, and you advised, "Tell Loverboy to knock off the love scenes in public."

I think you were both wrong! I see nothing wrong with showing affection in public. If people waited until they had total privacy, there would be very little affection shown. And if children were not exposed to displays of affection, they would grow up without knowing what "love" is.

My father is 57, and Mom is 48, and he has always kissed her whenever he felt like it. It didn't matter if we had company or not. And it wasn't a little peck on the cheek. He'd take her in his arms and really kiss her! And not lightly, and not just once, either. And it's the same today.

Once Mom joked, "You've mussed my hair and smeared my lipstick!" And Dad grabbed her again and said, "Who has a better right?" And that, in my opinion is the right attitude

RAISED RIGHT

DEAR RAISED: Hold it! I was also raised right, having seen my father hug and kiss my mother, plus giving her an occasional affectionate wack on the backside. But good taste demands limits. And limits we had in our house. Kids grow up knowing what "love" is without having seen it demonstrated thru to the last act.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you printed a letter from a husband saying his school-teacher wife wanted to go off to Europe for her summer vacation, and he said he would offer her a divorce if she went

Well, my wife of 14 years took our kids and went to Europe for 10 weeks with my blessing and I've learned a hundred times over how much my wife means to me. I honestly never realized what a wonderful wife I had. I recommend any man let his wife take a month or two vacation. It will rekindle their love He will soon learn how important a wife is He will also learn what a rotten job housekeeping is

Lovelorn in Ontario

DEAR LOVELORN: It's the old story: You never miss the water 'til the well runs dry.

THE LINCOLN STAR, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1971

A Child's World Has Its Problems

BY PHYLLIS WOOLLEN

Dear Mrs Woollen.

My name is (Tom) and I am 12 years old My older brother was killed in a car accident about a year ago, and I have been miserable ever since

The problem is my parents. Ever since my brother was killed, my parents don't let me do anything. They always want me to stay at home with them, and if I do go over to a friend's house, they call me all the time and worry about me. Sometimes I feel like I have a chain around me.

Don't get me wrong. My parents are nice people, and in fact they give me more than most of my friends get. I guess they're just afraid that something will happen to me, too. But, it is driving me crazy It's gotten to the point that I'm even getting afraid to do things.

What can I do to get my parents over this? ONLY SON

(The following discussion is under the supervision and guidance of the Child Guidance Center. Readers are invited to write in with problems they may be having with their children to: A Child's World, The Lincoln Star, 926 P St , Lincoln, Ne . 63501.)

What has occurred in this situation is not unusual following the death of one child, especially if there is only one remaining child. Tom's parents have become over-protective. This sort of reaction reflects feelings of guilt towards the lost child, whether or not the parents were in any way responsible for the death.

A harboring of guilt manifests itself with the child who is still living. Subconsciously the parents search for ways to avoid their remorse which is coupled with guilt, and they compensate by overindulging the second child. They will never allow themselves to not do as much as they can for Tom.

The results of this kind of behavior are detrimental to all concerned. The child who is over-protected cannot develop confidence in himself, in part because he is never allowed to experiment with and experience his own trials and errors. He develops a fear of the unknown and begins to patronize his parent's fear for him In a sense he becomes paralyzed by his parent's sense of guilt.

The over-indulged child develops expectations that are so high they cannot always be fulfilled—either in his youth or in the later years of his life, when he has left the family circle.

There is, unfortunately, not a great deal Tom can do to change his parent's reaction. He is one step ahead by being observant enough to realize their self-questioning concerning guilt and its reaction. His best posture would be to challenge his parents about the situation. If they refuse to talk to him, he should urge them to talk to someone else.

Dining With Wine

In English speaking countries, the best known Rhone red wine is called: Chateau-Neuf-du-Pape (Sho-toe-nuff-dew-Pop) one of the "classic growths". In the 14th Century the Papacy was moved temporarily from Rome to the city of Avignon, France, on the Rhone river. The first Pope to preside in the new headquarters was a former Archbishop of France who became Pope Clement the 5th. He was a Frenchman and a native of Bordeaux. It was under his guidance that the wines of Avignon were brought to a degree of perfection which they have held ever since. Chateau-Neuf-du-Pape is a wine of great warmth, richness and flavor. It possesses a deep crimson color, it is generous and full-bodied,and is one of the strongest French red wines made, being about 14% alcohol. While the Bordeaux wines are made from one variety of grape and the wines of Burgundy are usually blends of the pickings of several vineyards; the Chateau-Neuf-du-Pape is a wine which is made from as many as twelve different varieties of grape. These include the: Clairette, Terret Noir, Rousanne, Bourboulene, Mourvedre, Picpul, Counouse, Cinsault, Grenache, Syrah and others. Each of these grapes provide a characteristic which make Chateau-Neuf-du-Pape such an outstanding wine.

Chateau-Neuf-Du-Pape was almost unknown until the days of Napoleon, when it was brought to the attention of Parisians by the behaviour of one vineyard owner. This was the highly esteemed Marquis de la Nerthe, known throughout France as a ladies man and all-around "bon vivant". When asked how, at his advanced age he managed to remain so robust and virile, he replied that his secret was the wine from his own vineyard on the Rhone. It was not long before Chateau Neuf-du-Pape became the most popular of the Rhone wines and even today one hears of the remarkably potent aphrodiasical and medicinal qualities these wines possess.

Chateau-Neuf-d Pape is best served at room temperature with stews, ragouts (prepared with the same wine), beef, pot roast, venison, pheasant, wild duck, steak and cheese.

This is the hunting season and a wonderful way to prepare the day's 'bag' would be in this manner;

WILD DUCK POACHED IN WINE SAUCE
½ lb butter
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon red currant jelly
2 cups Chateau-Neuf-d Pape
1 jigger Benedictine
Breasts of wild duck
Salt and pepper

Melt the butter and add all of the ingredients except the duck. Mix well. Cut raw duck breasts and simmer in sauce for 12 minutes if they are small or up to 20 minutes if they are large. Add salt and pepper. Allow two single breasts per person. This recipe makes enough sauce for 4 to 6 breasts.

MONEY MATTERS

BY LINDA OLIG

It's about that time of the year again when we begin to think of holiday cooking, baking, and entertaining. Oh, but how hard that is on our food budgets!

The strange thing is that this particular season of the year makes sticking to the budget and planning ahead so very important

Preparing seasonal and once-a-year foods focuses more importance on advance planning and the shopping list.

When going through cookbooks, magazines, or the recipe suggestions in the local newspaper, it is well to make note of the required items as well as the amounts. Suggestions from family also should be considered — and holiday baking can become a family tradition by involving everyone and having a bake-in The children actually enjoy getting in on the act — and it's a learning experience, besides

Returning to the all-important shopping list, it is wise to have a note pad as a permanent fixture in the kitchen — for listing staples and other foods as the supplies are depleted.

While preparing that grocery list, be sure to check the food supplies on hand on storage shelves and in the refrigerator and freezer — and be sure to check out your emergency supply of canned goods and others

And don't forget to read the ads in Wednesday's LINCOLN STAR newspaper for those grocery specials. Write the advertised prices and the amount to be purchased beside the items included on the list. One extra-special hint is to stock up on foods that are listed at particularly low prices — except for the perishables, of course. This is difficult at first since the grocery bill will be considerably larger, but this practice rapidly snowballs Of course, plenty of storage space is a major requirement

Shopping by a list, and sticking to it, will eliminate extra trips to the store which can be costly and expose you to additional impulse buying.

Arrange the listed items so that shopping can be more quickly completed. Categorizing the needed foods also will help to provide a checklist so you won't overlook any item. For example, group the produce, the dairy foods, the meats and the frozen foods.

Other things to consider before embarking on that regular trip to the supermarket include allowing adequate time, shopping early in the day when the selections are greatest and stores are less crowded and on the day when the fruits and vegetables are transported

One important factor in sticking to the list is not going when you are hungry—if you are hungry when shopping you will be tempted to pick up snack foods and those with little nutritive value and many calories.

NEXT WEEK—The shopping trip.

An Easy-To-Make Toy

What little boy hasn't dreamed of being a truck driver?

It is easy to realize that dream with some imagination, two cardboard boxes, aluminum foil, paste, several discarded foil pie-pans, and some spray paint.

One large box and a smaller one are needed for the truck. Remove the top flaps from each. Place the larger box with the open end down, then cut a window in the front, and one in each side, and a door in the rear. Also cut an opening at floor level at the front for leg room.

Next, place the small box against the large one so that the openings in each box match.

Brush thinned white glue or wallpaper paste on both boxes and cover loosely with heavy duty Alcoa Wrap. Use a cloth to rub foil against the glued box.

Use black tape to simulate front doors, and foil pie-pans, sprayed black, for wheels and headlights.

Then, open the door at the rear and let in all the animal friends!

Past LWC Presidents Are Honored

Tradition is just one part of a club's existence, but the organization's traditions can create enthusiasm and general good-will among members and the community.

One of the Lincoln Woman's Club's favorite traditions is the annual birthday luncheon. This year, the festivity was held at the University Club on Monday, Nov. 8.

Past presidents of the active organization were honored at the luncheon—and numerous officers of the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs also were in attendance at the annual affair.

Parties For Jane Hendry

During the past few weeks life for Miss Jane Hendry has been one party after another. Miss Hendry, as you know, has named Saturday, Nov. 20, as the date of her marriage to James Dobler. The wedding, as we have mentioned before, will take place at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon at St. Teresa's Church.

In addition to the many courtesies that already have complimented this particular bride-elect, there are more on this week's calendar.

This afternoon, for instance, Miss Hendry will be the honoree at a kitchen-gadget shower for which Mrs. J. P. Overgaard and Mrs. Harold Nelson will be hostesses at the home of Mrs. Overgaard. The guest list will include the members of a bridge club to which the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Lee Hendry, belongs.

Later in the week, on Friday — to be specific — Mrs. Martin Batliner, Mrs. George Haberlan and Mrs. A. B. Chaves will pay prenuptial courtesy to the soon-to-be bride when they entertain at a luncheon and a linen shower at the Nebraska Club.

* * *

At the Hillcrest Country Club next Sunday Mrs. Hendry will be a luncheon hostess when she entertains her daughter's bridal attendants and their mothers.

* * *

On the following Friday evening, Nov. 19, Mr. and Mrs. William O. Dobler will preside at dinner at The Knolls in prenuptal courtesy to their son and Miss Hendry. The dinner will follow the wedding rehearsal at the church.

Ladies' Day At Gateway

Tomorrow — Thursday, Nov. 11 isn't just another day on the calendar. It's much more than that to the women in Lincoln, and in the surrounding communities.

Thursday, Nov. 11 is "Ladies Day at Gateway" and it is sponsored by the Gateway Association and the Lincoln Technical College.

The day begins at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning and closes at 9 o'clock that evening, and all of the activity will take place in the Gateway Auditorium. There will be displays, instruction classes, and demonstrations.

The things one will be able to learn during the instruction periods and demonstrations are almost unbelievable.

For example: Mrs. Julius Humann will give you all of the ins and outs — and the secrets of entertaining and being a good hostess. That will take place between 10 o'clock and 10:30 o'clock in the morning. Beginning at 10:45 and continuing through until 11:15 o'clock will be instruction and demonstration of candlemaking. That will be done by Mrs. D. F. Huber. Mrs. Harland Taylor takes over from 11:30 o'clock until noon, and her specialty will be cake decorating.

Artist Mrs. Wayne Barclay will be on hand from 1 o'clock until 1:30 to discuss decorative painting, and following that comes "Antique Collectables," which is in the charge of Mrs. Auralea Nelsen.

And there will be those who hardly will be able to wait until 2:30 o'clock when Mrs. Joseph D. Carnes will present some great ideas on creative crafts.

Enjoying a preview of some of the items that will be on display Thursday are — left to right — Mrs. Humann, Mrs. Huber, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Barclay and Mrs. Carnes.

The bidding:

Opening lead — eight of diamonds.

The signal is an extremely valuable weapon that permits the defenders to indicate where they are weak or strong, the suits they would like to have led and, in general, how best to conduct the defense.

It is sometimes possible for declarer to interfere with this exchange of information by preempting the play in a manner that makes it difficult for the defenders to signal their holdings.

Here is such a case. South was in four spades doubled and he could tell from the opening lead (1) that West had a singleton diamond and (2) that West almost surely had the king of spades for his double.

Declarer won the diamond with the ace and, had he made the mistake of playing a spade to the ace and continuing with the queen or jack, he would undoubtedly have gone down. West would win with the king, as East signaled with a high club, and would put East on lead with a club.

East would then cash the king of diamonds and continue with the queen, thus guaranteeing West another trump trick in the form of the ten.

So, in order to prevent East from signaling, declarer played a spade to the queen at trick two. West won with the king but was now faced with the problem of how to put partner on lead for the vital diamond return.

Unluckily, but understandably, he elected to play a heart at trick three and as a result South made the contract. Declarer was exceptionally well rewarded for jamming the opponents' lines of communication.

FOOD

ideas for holiday baking

You may not be able to hear them today, or perhaps not even tomorrow, but those reindeer decked in sleighbells, are getting closer and closer.

Now is the time to begin the planning of your Christmas season baking whether those goodies be for home consumption, or are to be given as gifts to friends and neighbors.

We are offering two Christmas bread recipes this morning, and both are simple to do and delightful to taste. Here they are:

Jiffy Danish Crescent Ring, reminiscent of regal Scandinavian pastries, is off to a time-saving start with refrigerated crescent roll dough. No mixing, measuring or kneading; you just open the can of dough and carry on!

You'll like this ring's sweet nutty filling that is subtly spiced with cinnamon and cardamon. An egg white glaze is brushed atop the dough then sprinkled with sugar to give an extra flaky look.

Peppermint Yule Tree is created quickly with a can of refrigerated almond or cinnamon Danish rolls. The individual rolls are cut in half and arranged to form a tree. After baking drizzle with peppermint sparkled glaze and "decorate" with crushed peppermint candy. Another time, why not stud with golden raisins, candied fruit or blanched almonds.

JIFFY DANISH CRESCENT RING

⅓ cup sugar
⅓ cup chopped almonds, pecans or walnuts
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground cardamon, if desired.
2 cans (8 oz. ea.) Refrigerated Quick Crescent Dinner Rolls
¼ cup butter or margarine, softened
1 egg white
1 tablespoon water
2 tablespoons sugar
Oven 375 degrees
1 large ring
8 to 10 servings

In small bowl, combine sugar, nuts, cinnamon and cardamon; set aside. Separate each can crescent dough into 2 large rectangles. Place 3 large rectangles together (long sides together) and remaining large rectangle across the bottom. Firmly press edges and perforations to seal (this prevents separation during baking). Roll or pat out to form a rectangle about 18x10 inches. Spread softened butter over dough; sprinkle with sugar-almond mixture. Starting at longer side, roll up rectangle, pressing ends to seal. On ungreased cookie sheet, place seam-side down. Form into a ring; firmly press ends together. With scissors or sharp knife, cut almost through ring at ½ inch intervals. Turn each section on its side bringing every other section to inside of ring. Combine egg white and water; brush over ring. Sprinkle with sugar. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes until golden brown. Serve warm.

PEPPERMINT YULE TREE

1 can (11 oz.) Pillsbury Refrigerated Quick Almond or Cinnamon Raisin Danish Rolls with Icing
¼ teaspoon peppermint flavoring
3 to 4 tablespoons crushed peppermint candy or slivered almonds
Oven 400 degrees
1 Coffee Cake

Separate dough into 8 rolls; cut each roll in half. On ungreased cookie sheet, arrange roll halves to form a Christmas tree shape. Place 4 halves, cut edge toward bottom of cookie sheet for the first row, 3 halves for the next two rows, 2 halves for the fourth row, and one half each for the last two rows. Place the remaining 2 halves, rounded edges together, at bottom to form the tree trunk. Bake at 400 degrees for 9 to 13 minutes until golden brown. Combine peppermint flavoring and icing; drizzle over coffee cake. Sprinkle with peppermint candy or almonds.

Orange Fruitcake

Remember the Christmas orange that you always found tucked in the very bottom of your Christmas stocking on that happy morning? Even today, orange is a traditional holiday flavor that is reminiscent of Christmases past.

GOLDEN ORANGE FRUITCAKE

1 package date bar mix
1-3 cup hot water
1-3 cup orange juice
3 eggs
¼ cup all-purpose flour (regular or instantized)
¼ cup orange marmalade
¾ teaspoon baking powder
1 cup cut-up candied pineapple
1 cup golden raisins
1 cup chopped nuts
¼ cup orange marmalade

Heat oven to 325 degrees. Grease and flour loaf pan, 9x5x3 inches. In large bowl blend date filling from date bar mix package and hot water. Add crumbly mix, orange juice, eggs, flour, ¼ cup orange marmalade and the baking powder; mix thoroughly. Fold in pineapple, raisins and nuts. Pour into prepared pan. Bake about 1 hour and 20 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool thoroughly. Wrap and refrigerate. Before serving heat ¼ cup orange marmalade until thin; spread over top of cake. If desired, garnish with orange twist. Makes 1 loaf.

Chinese Ribs— Delicious

"Breathes there a woman with soul so dead she never to herself has said — 'If I didn't have to clean that broiler I would have Chinese Pork Ribs — or maybe even Devilled Beef Ribs for dinner tonight, — but oh, that broiler!' "

Pardon the paraphrase on the writings of Sir Walter Scott, but we couldn't pass up these recipes for the Chinese Pork Ribs and the beef ribs, and how to keep your broiler tidy.

CHINESE STYLE PORK RIBS

4 to 5 pounds country style pork spareribs
4 cloves garlic
1 tablespoon salt
Generous sprinkling of pepper
1 small can pineapple chunks, drained
1 10½ ounce can chicken broth
½ cup soy sauce
½ cup catsup
1 onion diced

Line broiler pan with heavy duty foil. Cut spareribs into serving portions, removing fat that can be trimmed out easily. Place under broiler and brown, turning once. Brush with the soy sauce while browning as this helps give the ribs good color. Turn off broiler and set oven thermostat at 300 degrees. Remove broiler pan. Crush garlic with the salt, with the tip of a heavy knife and sprinkle over ribs. Add any remaining soy sauce and all other ingredients. Cover with a second sheet of foil, crimping it to the liner foil. Place in oven and bake for 2 hours or until fork tender. Remove foil cover. Remove from oven and tip pan so juices run to the corner. Skim off fat. If a thickened sauce is desired, combine 2 tablespoons corn starch with ⅓ cup sherry or water and stir into the juices. Cover lightly and return to oven for 10 minutes. Stir once during this time. Serve these ribs with rice and a salad for a hearty dinner. 8 servings.

DEVILED SHORT RIBS OF BEEF

4 to 5 pounds short ribs, cut in 3 inch lengths
1 medium onion, chopped
1 carrot, diced
1 green pepper, chopped
1 10½ ounce can beef broth
1 cup catsup
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
2 teaspoons salt
generous grating of pepper

Line the range broiler with heavy duty aluminum foil. Trim the ribs of excess fat where possible. Arrange in pan and brown under broiler lightly, turning once. Add vegetables while meat is browning so they are partially browned. Turn off broiler and reset thermostat for 300 degrees. Remove broiler pan, add remaining ingredients stirring them around to combine. (Save ½ cup broth to use in thickening gravy, if desired.)

Cover food with a second sheet of foil, crimping it to the liner and bake in the oven for 2 hours or until meat is tender. Remove pan from oven and remove foil cover. Tip pan so juices run to a corner. Skim excess fat. To thicken gravy, mix 4 tablespoons flour with the reserved broth. Stir into the pan juices and lightly cover. Return to oven for 10 minutes. Stir once during this time so juices are evenly thickened. Serve with buttered noodles and a salad. 8 servings.

Cookie Jar Goodies

No one would dream of not having the cookie jar filled to overflowing as the holiday season approaches. Here are some delectable ways to do it.

MINCEMEAT OATMEAL BARS

½ cup butter or margarine, softened
¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 tsp grated lemon rind
¼ cup milk
1 cup sifted enriched flour
¼ tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. salt
½ tsp. nutmeg
½ tsp. cinnamon
1½ cups quick cooking oats
1 cup mincemeat

Cream butter, brown sugar and lemon rind until light. Blend in milk. Sift flour, soda, salt and spices together. Blend into creamed mixture. Add oatmeal, beating until well mixed. Pat half of oatmeal mixture into bottom of well-greased 8" square pan. Spread mincemeat evenly over dough. Drop remaining oatmeal mixture over top by spoonfuls and gently pat over top in even layer to cover mincemeat. Bake in 350 degrees oven 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown. Cool in pan. Cut into bars.

School Board Plans To Pay All Legal Salary Increases

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday voted unanimously to notify Lincoln teachers that it intends to pay as much of their negotiated salary increases as federal regulations will allow.

Supt. John Prasch told the board at a regular meeting that news accounts of federal Pay Board decisions would appear to qualify all teachers for their negotiated raises beginning next week.

"Personally," commented board member Ed Copple, "I'd like to pay them way back from the word 'go,' but we should follow the regulations."

Notify Teachers

He suggested that teachers should be notified that the board intends to pay teachers' their negotiated contracts subject to the limitations as spelled out in the federal regulations.

The regulations apparently preclude payment of retroactive pay for the freeze period.

Prasch said news accounts would appear to allow Lincoln raises, although he noted that individual teachers would receive increases in excess of 5.5%, the limit set by the Pay Board.

Within Limits

But Prasch said the average raise rate would fall within that limit.

He said unless official regulations are published soon, the school board may have to hold off on the increases for another month, since the payroll run begins in mid-month.

Taking the suggestion of Copple and others, the board voted to notify teachers that raises would be paid, subject to the official regulations.

On another matter, the board was given a copy of proposed revisions in the personnel handbook.

Maternity Leave Clause

Among the proposals is one which would establish, for the first time, a maternity leave clause for nontenured teachers. Current policy permits only tenured teachers leave due to pregnancy.

The revisions would also call for prior board approval for employes who wish "to participate in political activity which might interfere with the normal work requirement so that the necessary adjustments can be made."

Another revision would change the procedures for evaluation of both tenured and nontenured teachers.

The board also approved two pilot projects — one with Nebraska Wesleyan University for student teacher internships and another with the Lincoln Area-wide Model Project on Aging to provide "drop-in" lunches to senior citizens.

Full-Time Basis

The NWU project would establish a semester-long internship on a full-time basis for prospective teachers as a replacement for the current part-time student teacher arrangements.

The "drop-in" lunch project will be tried at Park Elementary, where senior citizens from the area will eat a school-prepared lunch just after the regular student lunch time.

The schools will be paid 75 cents per lunch, sadi Prasch, for the January through June experiment.

In a letter to the schools, a coordinator for the project said it would provide a way to support the ability of older citizens to live independently and ensure good nutrition.

'Have Reservations'

"We have reservations about parts of it," Prasch said of the project. But he suggested it be tried in an attempt to discover what problems may ensue.

During a discussion on organizational changes in Lincoln schools, Copple said he was concerned that the new "open classroom" concepts may do harm to the "underachiever" whose motivation may not be high enough for less structured classrooms.

On a separate matter, the board approved a request for continuation of the Career Opportunities Program after hearing that 70% of the low-income citizens had remained in the program.

The federal program puts low-income citizens into the classroom as aides and gives them a stipend to study at the University of Nebraska.

SCARF ADMIRED

Pat Nixon, the First Lady, admires a scarf held by singer Dionne Warwicke Tuesday at the White House. The scarf duplicates a sheet of the 1971 Christmas Seals, a sheet of which is held by John H. Biddle, president of the National Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association. The seals were presented to the First Lady along with the scarf. The event kicked off the annual fund-raising campaign by the association.

3 Air And Sea Disasters Abroad Kill Scores Of Soldiers, Seamen

By The Associated Press

Air and sea disasters abroad killed scores of soldiers and seamen Tuesday.

A French freighter broke up in battering Atlantic waves off the coast of France and most of her 39-member crew was feared lost. Forty-six Italian paratroopers perished along with six British airmen when their British transport plane crashed and burned in the Ligurian Sea.

Four Brazilian airmen were killed in collision of two military planes over an air base south of Rio de Janeiro. And off the coast of South Africa a British tanker caught fire, but all aboard were safely picked up by rescue vessels.

The French freighter Maori was off the west coast of France, headed for Le Havre when she broke up in 50 mile-per-hour winds that stirred up 15-foot waves.

Conditions Treacherous

Rescue vessels that steamed in to aid the Maori reported weather conditions so treacherous that crewmen's bodies bobbing in the waves could not be pulled aboard. The 9,400-ton freighter, whose home port is Dunkerque, went under about 580 miles west of La Rochelle. Her crew was French.

French air force pilots searcing for survivors reported sighting large chunks of the hull, an overturned launch, lifebelts and sailors swimming for their lives in the waves.

The German freighter Wegesak lifted one crewman to safety. But the craft reported sighting 13 bodies floating in their lifebelts.

'Men Swimming'

The pilot of a French rescue plane who dropped an emergency raft and other supplies soon after the ship broke up said "there was wreckage on the surface and men swimming about the wreckage. We didn't see a single lifeboat floating normally with men aboard. I think saving them is going to be very tough."

The Maori was sailing from New Caledonia, a French overseas territory in the Pacific, near Australia, with a cargo of nickel.

Maritime sources speculated that the nickel, in the form of bars, might have slipped its moorings during the storm and burst through the hull.

The Italian Defense Ministry said the British transport carrying Italian paratroopers was participating in routine military maneuvers with Italy. After taking off from Pisa bound for Sardinia, it crashed into the water a few miles from the port of Leghorn on Italy's northwest coast.

Authorities said all aboard were killed.

One Body Sighted

A ministry spokesman said only one body was sighted along with scattered pieces of the C130 Hercules transport craft. Helicopters and ships spent all day crisscrossing the storm-tossed crash site.

There was no evidence that any of the paratroopers had any time to bail out.

The captain of the British tanker off South Africa was able to telephone London that tragedy had been averted.

Meals On Wheels Helps Keep Old-Timers Healthy

Benkelman (AP)—Malnutrition, one of the worst enemies of old-timers and single persons living alone, is losing its battle in this southwest Nebraska community of 1,349 persons.

Opponents are a crew of civic-minded citizens giving freely of their time and talents. The end result is well-balanced meals where there would otherwise be none.

Now-retired hospital administrator Joe Laughlin and Dundy County Welfare Director Mrs. Ellis Gummere pioneered the project two years ago—shortly after the community of 1,400 completed its new medical facility.

"When Medicare came in, we saw a need to keep these old-timers out of the hospital as much as possible because of the limited amount of time they were covered," Laughlin said.

One of the biggest problems with a person living alone or an elderly retired couple, especially just after a hospital stay, is that they won't eat right and end up back in the hospital, Laughlin said.

So Laughlin, Mrs. Gummere, the hospital and the ministerial association got together and created "meals on wheels."

The program provides a complete noon meal five days a week, delivered to a person's home.

"Women from each church take turns delivering the food," explains kitchen employe Kathy Reiman. "Except for variations in diet prescribed by their doctors, we give them the same thing that we serve in the hospital," she said.

The menus are changed daily to give variety, and each meal is sold for a "no-profit dollar."

To qualify, a person must go through his doctor. If the applicant either can't prepare a balanced meal for himself or just hasn't been doing so, he's eligible for the program.

The money for the meals is paid either by the person receiving it or his family. A volunteer worker prepares statements at the end of the month so it won't be a bother to the hospital.

There are no federal, state or local tax dollars involved.

After two years and now looking in from the outside, Laughlin is sure he made the right decision in bringing the hospital in on the program.

"It's a wonderful thing, especially in this part of the country, where old people are our principal industry," Laughlin said. "Do you realize that between 65% and 70% of our patients out there were on Medicare?"

Steps Needed To Implement Ruling Being Studied By School District

Lincoln Schools Supt. John Prasch said Tuesday the school district is investigating the steps which would be necessary to implement a court decision ordering reinstatement of a tenured teacher.

But Prasch also said no decision had been made on whether the school board would appeal the U.S. District Court ruling which struck down the board's decision to fire Robert L. Johnson.

Prasch's comments came after a board executive session on the Johnson matter and other personnel items.

Last spring, the school board voted to uphold Prasch's recommendation to terminate Johnson's contract on grounds of alleged incompetency and failure to give evidence of professional growth.

But Johnson took the case to the federal court, and last week Judge Robert Van Pelt ordered the school district to reinstate the former junior high school mathematics teacher.

Johnson, who no longer lives in Lincoln, told The Star last week from his home in Maryland that he does not intend to return to the Lincoln school system.

He is now working in the Washington office of the National Education Association.

During the board's public session Tuesday, two board members commented that teacher appraisal procedures should be changed in light of the Johnson decision.

During a discussion of proposed changes in a handbook for school personnel, Robert Wekesser suggested teacher appraisal practices "need more work after that court decision."

"This won't work at all," he said of the old system.

"This court decision has changed a lot," agreed Ed Copple. "We need to look at the whole thing."

School officials, in cooperation with representatives of the Lincoln Education Association, have been drafting a new teacher appraisal format.

Profits Gone With The Smoke

Bradford, England (AP) — The owner of the first pub in Britain to ban cigarettes said Tuesday his profits have gone with the smoke.

Takings in Jack Shower's tavern have slumped $125 a night. He says he has lost $6,250 a year turnover in cigarette sales.

But Showers, 70, is determined to soldier on.

"I have no regrets," he said, "even though my pocket is being hit hard.

"I still think smoking is a filthy habit."

Meeting Cancelled

The Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Board did not meet Tuesday night because they didn't have a quorum.

Two Youths Are Honored By Optimists

Two Lincoln youths were awarded trophies and certificates of appreciation from the Sunrise Optimist Club at a Wednesday morning breakfast.

Jill McMaster, 2421 Ryons, a student at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, and Larry Adams, 1500 N. 52nd, a junior at Northeast High School, were presented with the awards in connection with Youth Appreciation Week (Nov. 8-14).

Jill is president of the NU Red Cross and is a Lancaster County representative to Mexico in the Friendship with Latin America program. She is a member of the YWCA, Chi Omega sorority, and Pi Sigma Alpha, a political science honorary. Her activities in other areas include being a Blue Bird leader in a poverty area.

Larry has been active in Red Cross since junior high, including work as a Red Cross volunteer at the Madonna Home. He is a member of Junior Achievement and the St. Elizabeth Community Health Center Medical Explorers. Larry also has had a part in a Northeast High School play.

End Of Madison Racing?

Perhaps the biggest news coming out of the Wednesday-Thursday session of the Nebraska Racing Commisision in Omaha will be an announcement of the death of another Nebraska race track.

The last to go under was Mitchell. Before that it was Alliance. This week, it could be Madison.

There are few people in Nebraska racing, who are held in any higher regard than is Butch Moyer, who runs the Madison strip, and it may not be an easy decision for commissioners Harry Farnham, Robert Logsdon and Bob Berggren to make.

But aside from keeping it around for sentimental reasons, little evidence can be presented to show that racing should be continued at the Northeast Nebraska plant.

With its small purses and its small mutuel handle, the track in recent years has done little to benefit either horsemen or the state.

Because it barely makes it past the million-dollar exemption figure, Madison in the last five years has contributed only $11,542.72 in the form of the four per cent pari-mutuel tax to the state treasury.

This is less than any of the other tracks have contributed in a single year.

Economy Up At Tracks

If the nation's economy is supposed to be in trouble, you couldn't tell it at Nebraska race tracks where patrons bet nearly $8 million more in 1971 than in 1970.

A total of $69,975,449 was pushed through the betting windows at the six tracks this year compared with $61,356,625 in 1970.

And that helped the state coffers out by better than $300,000. The tracks paid the state treasury $2,523,017.96 in pari-mutuel taxes this year compared with $2,214,739.04 last year.

Each bettor at the track this year bet $3.4 more than he did a year ago with the average bettor spending $59.67 in his trip to the track in 1971 compared with $56.33 in 1970.

The two-year comparisons by tracks for 1970 and 1971 in mutuel handle, attendance and pari-mutuel tax paid to the state:

Huskers, Irish In Sugar Bowl

Oklahoma City sports columnist Bob Hurt a couple of weeks ago gave his major bowl pairings predictions, which didn't include Nebraska.

Fellow Oklahoma City columnist Volney Meece has also joined the guessing game and he has Nebraska meeting Notre Dame in the Sugar Bowl.

His other pairings: Orange — Oklahoma vs. Alabama; Cotton — Arkansas vs. Penn State; Gator — Auburn vs. Georgia.

His Gator Bowl matchup isn't very likely since Auburn and Georgia meet this week and bowls are extremely reluctant to make rematches. And the ink was hardly dry on the predictions before Arkansas was apparently out of the Cotton Bowl.

Tagge Heisman Candidate?

The National Observer lists Nebraska quarterback Jerry Tagge as one of seven players it considers leading candidates for this year's Heisman Trophy.

"Lack of a Heisman publicity campaign will hurt him," write Douglas Looney observes, "but some voters likely will look to the Cornhuskers for 'somebody' to list and that somebody is Tagge."

Others on the National Observer list are Greg Pruitt of Oklahoma, Pat, Sullivan of Auburn, Johnny Musso of Alabama, Ed Marinaro of Cornell, Chuck Ealey of Toledo and Sonny Sixkiller of Washington.

Boos Turn To Cheers For K-State Quarterback

. . . MORRISON EARNS BIG EIGHT BACK OF WEEK HONOR

Kansas City (AP) — A month ago, people were booing Dennis Morrison, the Kansas State quarterback.

Everybody except Wildcat Coach Vince Gibson, Morrison's teammates and die-hard Kansas State students had lost confidence in the quarterback.

Morrison completed only 16 of 47 passes for 177 yards in the Wildcats' first three games. The left-handed passer connected on 15 of 32 for 178 yards against Colorado but went back to his old ways against Kansas, hitting on only six of 24 for 97 yards.

Morrison's passing life changed when the Wildcats returned to the pro set offense with two wide receivers and dropback passing against Oklahoma. Morrison threw 29 strikes on 48 tosses for 297 yards against the Sooners.

Since then, his rise has been tremendous. Morrison hit 23 receivers on 43 pitches for 303 yards and three touchdowns in last Saturday's second half turnabout 35-23 victory over Oklahoma State.

For his performance, Morrison was named Big Eight Conference Back of the Week in a unanimous vote by a panel of sports writers.

"Dennis Morrison is a completely different player than at the start of the season," Gibson said. "He's confident, he's got poise and he can scramble. What a difference a quarterback makes. Morrison is now a leader."

Morrison said the comeback against Oklahoma State "was the biggest thrill of my life. If we play like we did against Oklahoma State and score 35 points, we might beat Nebraska Saturday."

Morrison hit five of seven passes, including a 55-yard strike to Bill Butler, on Kansas State's 99-yard drive for its first touchdown against the Cowboys. He was four for four on another successful drive.

Morrison now has moved into the lead in the Big Eight passing race with 119 completions on 252 passes for 1,470 yards or 163.3 yards a game.

Gibson said Morrison "has amazed us. He is throwing as good now as Lynn Dickey did." Dickey established every Big Eight passing record before he completed his career at Kansas State last season.

Other players nominated for Back of the Week were Jack Mildren of Oklahoma, Johnny Rodgers of Nebraska, Lorenzo Brinkley of Missouri, Cleveland Vann of Oklahoma State, Bo Mathews of Colorado and Kenny Page of Kansas.

WRITERS NAME TORRE MVP

. . . Stargell NL Runnerup

New York (AP) — Joe Torre of the St. Louis Cardinals, who led the major leagues in batting with a .363 average and in runs batted in with 137, was an overwhelming choice Tuesday as the National League's Most Valuable Player for 1971.

The 31-year-old third baseman received 21 of the 24 first-place votes cast by a special committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Torre drew a total of 318 points compared to 222 for runnerup Willie Stargell, the majors home run king and outfielder for the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates, who got the remaining three first-place votes.

Outfielder Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves finished third with 180 points.

Torre became the 12th Cardinal to win the MVP award in the 40-year history of the BBWA award. Bob Elliott of the 1947 Boston Braves and Ken Boyer of the 1964 Cards were the only other NL third basemen to win the award.

Torre also led the National League in hits with 230 and total bases with 352 to become the first NL player to lead in four categories since Stan Musial of the Cardinals led with eight in 1948.

Torre, a Brooklyn, N.Y. native, is a younger brother of Frank, a former Milwaukee Braves and Philadelphia Phillies first baseman. The 6-foot-1, 210-pound former catcher-first baseman was a fat 240-pounder in little demand just out of high school. But the Braves signed him in 1960 for their Eau Claire farm club.

The right-handed slugger joined the parent club the next year, and followed the team in its move to Atlanta in 1966.

A holdout in 1969 and engaged in a feud with Braves management, he was traded to the Cards March 17, 1969 for first baseman Orlando Cepeda.

"I'm very happy," he said at the time. "You certainly can't have any complaints when you get traded to a club like the Cardinals. I think maybe I'll be able to make some money with them."

After winding up the 1970 season with a .325 batting average, second in the league, Torre signed for the 1971 season for an estimated $115,000. He moved to third base in 1970 when regular Mike Shannon became ill.

Torre, the first Cardinal to lead the league in hitting since Musial's .376 in 1948, missed only two games in 1971. He was hitless in only 28 and only three times went two games without a hit, never after May 19. He had two hits in 42 games, three in 21, four in three and five in one.

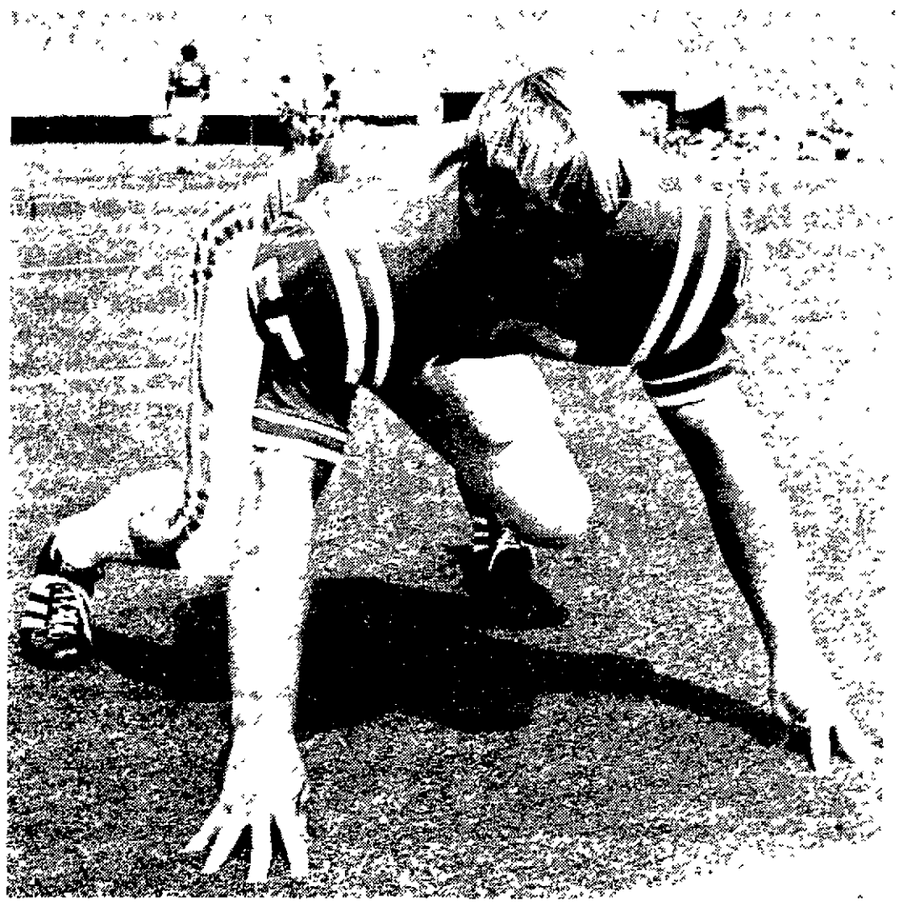

He drove in the winning runs 22 times during the season.

The 30-year-old Stargell led the majors in home runs with 48, one more than Aaron and twice as many as Torre. It was Stargell's performance early in the season that put the Pirates in front and led them to the East Division title over runnerup St. Louis.

Bobby Bonds of San Francisco finished fourth and the Pirates' Roberto Clemente was fifth in the balloting.

Ferguson Jenkins of the Chicago Cubs, who won the Cy Young award as the NL's best pitcher, was seventh. In all, 26 players received votes but only the top three finishers were named on all 24 ballots.

Votes were awarded on a basis of 14 points for first, nine for second, eight for third etc. through 10 places.

BACK HOME ON DEFENSE . . . Bill Janssen.

Wandering Black Shirt Janssen Returns Home

. . . BROKEN ARM AFTER WINNING CENTER JOB GETS HIM BACK ON DEFENSE

Bill Janssen is finally at home — on the defensive unit where he started his career at Nebraska.

One of the most versatile Huskers, Janssen has logged time at three other positions between his freshman season and now. Including his high school career at Grand Forks, N.D., he has had experience at six spots, three on offense and three on defense.

I've just played defense so long, that's just the side of the game I enjoy more," he says. "It's the better side to be on."

A letterman junior, Janssen came to Nebraska in 1968. After playing linebacker and offensive tackle during his prep career, he spent his freshman season with the Huskers as a defensive tackle.

He moved to defensive end at the start of his sophomore season, and had logged enough time there by the middle of the year to earn his first letter. Then, in midseason, he was switched to offensive guard, where he finished the year.

During spring ball that year, he was given a try at center, and had won the starting job until a broken arm in practice the week before the season opener with Southern Cal forced him to sit out the entire year.

At the time, Janssen called the setback "about the biggest disappointment of my life.

"Coach Devaney gave me a choice when I had my broken arm of where I wanted to play, and I told him I'd play anywhere," he says.

So, Janssen is back with the Black Shirts at the right tackle spot. He feels his strength is rushing defense.

"My pass rushing leaves a lot to be desired," he says. "Myself, I'm not satisfied with it. I try to get better at it all the time, but I just feel stronger against the run."

He explains that he would rather face linemen who are bigger than himself because they are generally slower.

"Bob Childs of Kansas was the biggest guy I've faced this year, but not necessarily the best," he says. "Surprisingly, the bigger guys haven't hit us that hard this year."

Janssen's nickname, "Shot," came from his aggressive play during his first year at Nebraska.

"When I was a freshman, I had a lot of hits on guys that weren't really playing, guys that were out of the play or just kind of watching," he explains.

"I hit some guys and hurt them when they weren't expecting it, so some guys started calling me "Cheap Shot," now they've dropped the "Cheap" part, but the "Shot" just stuck."

—LOPSIDED NELSON SETBACK CAUSES SHIFT—

Alliance Club Tops Class D Ratings

By VIRGIL PARKER
Prep Sports Writer

While the eight-man high school football top ten ratings list features but one minor change this week, Alliance St. Agnes assumes the leadership role as a major shift occurs in the Class D ranks.

Nelson, No. 1 in Class D most of the season, suffered a lopsided 40-0 setback to Red Cloud in its final outing.

Though the loss came at the hands of a Class C club, the scope of the score drops Nelson to third in the current rankings.

St. Agnes, which itself has tangled with seven Class C outfits in nine outings, earns the top spot on the basis of a perfect record which includes four shutouts in the last five games.

Dix, which also moves up a notch at Nelson's expense, has an even more spectacular record on the surface, but none of the nine Dix foes came from the heavier populated division.

Dix, despite playing all Class D teams, lays solid claim to the runnerup position after winning eight of its nine games via the shutout route. The other was an easy 45-6 victory.

In all, Dix scored 259 points while giving up but that one touchdown.

After Nelson, the order of the next four teams is the same on the Class D list as a week ago. Silver Creek, an early leader, jumps back in at No. 8, while Spalding Academy moves up from tenth to ninth.

Newcastle fell from favor, while Elmwood slips from eighth to tenth after losing to a good Class C club.

Callaway, Wolbach and Cambridge appear to have the best chance of cracking next week's final ratings.

The eight-man top ten, with Giltner again rated No. 1, is the same as last week through the first six positions.

Paxton, seventh a week ago, disappears after losing to Stapleton, which is now ninth.

Cedar Rapids and Mead advance at Paxton's expense, while Doniphan remains tenth.

If further changes occur in the final ratings, East Butler, Elk Creek and Humphrey are among those waiting at the head of the line in the wings.

4—Sumner (8-1)	9—Spalding Academy (6-1-2)

K-State Offense Presents Problems

By HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

By going back to his former style of offense, Kansas State coach Vince Gibson will present the Nebraska defense with some problems they haven't faced since last year's game with the Wildcats, Husker head coach Bob Devaney said Tuesday.

"We haven't played anyone this year that you can compare with Kansas State's offense," Devaney said. "The only thing that resembles it is last year's Kansas State offense."

The special problems the K-State offense poses for the Huskers are in the area of defending against a dropback passer.

"It's harder to get to a dropback passer than it is the play action type passers we've faced the past two weeks in Colorado and Iowa State," Devaney explained.

"This is particularly true in long yardage situations because the Kansas State line is used to protecting the passer while Colorado and Iowa State are not because of the play action passes they normally try to throw."

Instead of the kind of offensive plays the Huskers have been seeing, Devaney noted that this week they'll be looking at draw plays, screen passes and dump passes.

"Our linebackers are apt to have a busy day," he predicted, "because they throw a lot of passes to their backs, but they also have the speed to go deep on you."

The Husker coach also pointed out that in the past three weeks Kansas State has scored 28, 28 and 35 points and added, "That's quite a few points, particularly that 28 againts Oklahoma because the Kansas State defense wasn't presenting the offense with the ball much."

Oklahoma in racking up 75 points against the Wildcats scored 11 of the 12 times it had the ball.

Despite their poor showing against Oklahoma, Devaney pointed out that the Kansas State defense has always been tough on his Huskers.

"Even though we scored 51 points against them last year, we had a lot of things go right for us," he noted. "We had a lot of interceptions that day; what did Lynn Dickey throw, about seven interceptions, didn't he?

"We didn't just haul off and blow them out of the tub."

Defensive tackle John Dutton, whose 6-7 frame has been inserted into the lineup on passing situations, returned to work with the Huskers Tuesday and Devaney said he apparently recovered from a sprained ankle suffered in last Saturdays' win over Iowa State.

However, linebacker Bill Sloey and reserve slotback Glen Garson, both with leg injuries, remained question marks for the Kansas State game. "We may not make a decision on them until Thursday," Devaney said.

Links Bow To Omaha Westside

Omaha — It isn't easy to point to one man and say he made all the difference in the world between winning and losing, but that's just the case with Omaha Westside's fullback Steve Lindsay.

Lindsay made the difference in the score as Westside thumped the Lincoln High Links 26-14 here Tuesday afternoon in a make-up game at Westside Stadium.

Lindsay scored two of Westside's four touchdowns on runs of 63 and 53 yards then kicked two extra points to cap his performance. He also gained 169 yards in 13 carries for a 13 yard average.

The Links' Bob Knollenberg almost made up the deficit caused by Lindsay by intercepting two Westside passes and catching six from quarterback Bob Folsom for 89 yards and one TD.

Westside took the lead in the first quarter when Jim Mierendorf crashed over from three yards out and Lindsay booted the extra point to make it 7-0.

Then Mark Brock caught a 24 yard pass from Bill Latenser and Lindsay broke away for his 63 yard jaunt and added one more PAT to make it 20-0 before the Links could get on the scoreboard.

The Links recovered a fumble on Westside's 43 yard line and marched to pay dirt in nine plays with Buster Barber slashing off-tackle for the tally and Pat Weixelman adding the point after to finish the first half trailing 20-7.

When the Links returned to the field in the third quarter, Knollenberg picked off a Latenser pass then six plays later, snagged an 11 yard aerial from Folsom which made it 20-14 after another Weixelman extra point.

But the Links hopes were shattered in the fourth period when Lindsay swept right end for 53 yards and the final score of the contest.

Orioles Lose Contest

Kyoto, Japan (UPI) — Home runs by Sadaharu Oh, Kokuji Nagaike, Yutaka Fukumoto and Shigeo Nagashima backed the seven-hit pitching of underhanding Hiashi Yamada Tuesday as the American League champion Baltimore Orioles were defeated 8-2 by a combined team of the Yomiuri Giants and Hankyu Braves.

Ali Believes In Staying Active

. . . NOT WORRIED BY FRAZIER STALL REPORTS

Houston (AP) — Muhammad Ali said Tuesday he wasn't worried by reports that champion Joe Frazier might not fight him again until 1974 and in fact, he didn't care if he ever fought Frazier again.

"I'm above all that now," Ali said. "I don't have to have some white commissioner say to me, 'You are the champion, go and be praised.' I am accepted by the people."

Ali said he was remaining active and making money but Frazier was not.

"Between now and 1974, I've got $3 million dollars to make in commitments," Ali said before a training session for his Nov. 17 fight in the Astrodome against Buster Mathis.

"He's going around with his band making $37.50 a night," Ali said. "He needs me for the gate."

Ali said it was embarrassing for Frazier to sign for a fight with someone else because he couldn't get the same guarantee that Ali said he draws.

"Frazier can't demand what I demand," Ali said. "You think Frazier could get a $300,000 guarantee to fight Buster Mathis?

"It means a lot to a fighter when he gets as good as me and Frazier, what people think about him as a champion," Ali said. "Look at Floyd Patterson. It took him three years to settle with Ingemar Johannsen.

"I came right back and fought Liston again and I stayed active. In three years I fight 15 times."

Ali said he thought Frazier was afraid of him.

"No man could take the beating I gave him and not think about it," Ali said. "Sometimes I'll get hit by a sparring partner and maybe it'll hurt my lip a little and I'll get to wondering 'can he do that again?' "

Ali said if he were a hungry fighter he might have a different attitude about fighting Frazier.

"But my case is so different," he said. "I don't need the title to get acceptance. I'm just an exception. There's not anyone else like me."

Ali skipped rope and worked on the speed bag Tuesday but did not spar. Mathis meanwhile went six rounds in the ring and also worked on the speed bag, skipped rope and worked on his special punching bag named "The Ali."

Former Player Charges Saints With Negligence

New Orleans (AP) — A former New Orleans Saints' defensive back filed a $1 million suit against the National Football League team Tuesday charging that he was injured in a game while under the influence of drugs administered by the club physician.

Elijah Nevett filed the suit in Civil District Court. He claimed he broke some ribs in the Nov. 8, 1970 game but was sent back in after being given several injections which made him woozy.

He injured a knee later in the game and, he noted, it has kept him from earning a living in the sport. Nevett was traded to Oakland earlier this year but failed to make the team.

The suit said Dr. J. Kenneth Saer and coach Jerry Smith were negligent for sending him into the game after being given the drugs.

Yank Pair Advance In Italian Net Open

Bologna, Italy (AP) — Sixth-seeded Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., and seventh-seeded Arthur Ashe of Richmond, Va., led a quarter of Americans into the third round of the Italian Open Tennis Tournament Tuesday night.

Riessen trounced veteran Britisher Graham Stilwell 6-2, 6-1, while Ashe needed a tie-breaker in the second set to beat 19-year-old Massimo Barazzutti of Italy 6-2, 7-6.

Beatrice's Klaus Captures Player Of The Week Honors

. . . TOUCHDOWN PASSES KEY TO WIN

By VIRGIL PARKER
Prep Sports Writer

Coach Bob Starr's Beatrice Orangemen were basically a run-oriented team this fall while storming to a fine 7-2 record.

As a result, bruising ball carriers Paul Cramer and Bill Armstrong get most of the headlines.

But last Saturday night, when Beatrice stunned defending state champion Lincoln Southeast, 28-26, it was the touchdown passes of less-heralded quarterback Dan Klaus which got the Orangemen out in front at the start and then won the game in the closing seconds.

The two crucial Klaus aerials not only helped gain victory but bring the Beatrice junior the additional honor as Player of the Week.

Others who had outstanding games over the past weekend and deserve special recognition include:

Dave Connor, Kearney — Led the defense in a 10-0 shutout of McCook. It was the second straight blanking of a foe for the Bearcats, the first time they've turned such a trick since 1966.

Steve Applebee, Clay Center — Just a freshman, Applebee dazzled by running for two touchdowns and passing for another in a 24-0 victory over Exeter.

Lynn Adam and Maynard Schriner, Wilcox — Playing side by side in the offensive line, this pair consistently opened up the holes for the Wilcox ground game to secure a 28-27 victory over Sumner and complete a perfect 9-0 season.

Jeff Didier, David City Aquinas — His touchdown runs of 12 and 63 yards sparked Aquinas to a 12-6 triumph over heavily favored Columbus Lakeview.

Gary Vavrina, Clarkson — Had a hand in three TD's while leading Clarkson to a 35-12 win over Dodge and gave the Red Devils a unblemished 9-0 campaign.

Tom Butzke, Gresham — He crashed over with just 45 seconds remaining to give the Blackbirds a 28-24 victory over Hordville.

Dale Young, Hampton — Finished the season with over 1,000 yards as he gained more than 100 yards and scored two touchdowns in a 60-19 win over Monroe.

Bobby Baker, Battle Creek — Passed for all three Brave TD's in a 22-8 triumph over Humphrey St. Francis.

Randy Benish, Norfolk — A top passing quarterback, Benish turned to the run in guiding the Panthers to a 29-6 win over South Sioux City. He dashed for three TD's while gaining 112 yards in 11 carries.

Joe McMeekin, Columbus Scotus — His two placement boots were the difference in a 14-13 victory over Ord and an 8-1 regular season record.

Williams Hired By Cleveland

Cleveland (AP) — Former Philadelphia Eagles' head coach Jerry Williams was hired as an offensive backfield coach by the Cleveland Browns Tuesday.

He will direct the team's passing attack.

Williams was fired Oct. 5 by Eagles' owner Leonard Tose after the team lost its first three games. He was replaced by Ed Khayat.

Browns' owner Art Modell said Williams was hired at the urging of Head Coach Nick Skorich to fill the void left by the death of offensive backfield coach Howard "Sonny" Keyes on Oct. 21.

Curtis Backs NU

Washington (UPI) — Nebraska Sen. Carl T. Curtis and Oklahoma Sen. Henry Bellmon, both Republicans, have reached agreement on a wager on the Thanksgiving Day football game between No. 1 ranked Nebraska and No. 2 ranked Oklahoma.

The stakes: A dinner of Nebraska pheasant and roasting ears and a dinner of Oklahoma quail and pecan pie.

In a letter to Curtis, Bellmon said: "While there is little doubt in my mind about the outcome of the Nov. 25 encounter, I thought perhaps a little friendly wager might make the game more interesting."

Bellmon covered all the angles and said in case of a tie, "I guess we will have to let the vice president decide who gets what."

In his reply accepting the bet, Curtis said: "What better Thanksgiving Day could one look forward to than to attend the church of his choice on Thanksgiving morning and then go to the football game and watch the proud and good Oklahoma football team go down to defeat? I think they are a good football team but not quite good enough."

Sooner Punters Practice More

Norman, Okla (AP) — University of Oklahoma punters put in extra time on the practice field Tuesday as the Sooners settled down to preparations for next Saturday's football game against Kansas here.

Coach Chuck Fairbanks said he was pleased with the Sooner workout and added: "We had a real good practice. Everyone is enthusiastic. I think we got quite a bit done today."

The Sooner squad spent a long session on protection for the passer and on the triple option

Fairbanks, who has not been entirely pleased with his team's kicking game recently, put punters Joe Wylie and John Carroll through extra drills. Fairbanks said he hopes to get Wylie back in action punting in order to allow Carroll to concentrate on other kicking chores.

NHL Approves New Franchises

New York (AP) — The National Hockey League's Board of Governors voted Tuesday to grant new franchises to Atlanta and Long Island with the teams scheduled to begin play next season.

In addition, the governors concluded two days of meetings by voting unanimously to add two additional franchises for the 1974-75 season. That would swell to 18 the number of clubs in the league which only five years ago had just six teams.

The price of each of the four additional franchises is $6 million—the same amount it cost Buffalo and Vancouver to join the league last year

Schembechler Mad At Press

. . . BUT SAYS COACHES EVEN WORSE THAN WRITERS

Ann Arbor, Mich. (AP) — Bo Schembechler, University of Michigan football coach, has said many times he doesn't believe in polls until a season has ended.

Yet he seems to be peeved that his third-ranked Wolverines are not rated No. 1.

"We will never be No. 1 in the nation because of the press," he insisted angrily at his weekly press luncheon.

He teed off on the press soon after he arrived, criticizing one Detroit writer for a story saying Michigan State still has a chance to go to the Rose Bowl.

MSU upset ninth-ranked Ohio State 17-10 Saturday and received quite a bit of newspaper space, more so than Michigan, which clobbered a weak Iowa team 63-7.

"Why don't you put two men on MSU and nobody on Michigan," Schembechler growled at the reporter, referring to press box coverage.

Bo is usually cordial with reporters, but he apparently believes his Wolverines, with a 9-0 record and impressive offensive and defensive statistics, deserve more publicity.

They lead the Big Ten with a 6-0 record and can clinch a Rose Bowl berth with a victory Saturday at Purdue.

The next week, they close the regular season with a game against arch-rival Ohio State, which is 5-1 in the conference and can still win or tie for the title. MSU is 4-2 and in third.

Of the two wire-service polls, one is of sports writers and broadcasters and the other of coaches.

Asked what he thought of the coaches' poll voting opinions Schembechler said, "They're worse than the writers."

Oklahoma Still Tops In Offense

New York — Despite being held by Missouri last week to its lowest totals since its opening game, Oklahoma continues to pace the nation's major colleges in total offense and rushing offense.

The Sooners are averaging 562.9 yards per game in total offense and 478.9 in rushing. Nebraska's total offense figure of 435.6 yards per game ranks the Huskers sixth.

Texas Coach Asks For Change In Rule

Austin, Tex. (UPI) — Texas football coach Darrell Royal said Tuesday he will back a move to change Southwest Conference recruiting rules that now give Oklahoma and other non-conference schools an advantage over league teams.

Under present rules, SWC schools cannot personally contact high school prospects until after their final high school game. But Oklahoma has a full time recruiter who visits the Texas prospects, and that recruiter isn't bound by the SWC rules since Oklahoma belongs to the Big Eight Conference.

"I'm speaking as one person, not for the Southwest Conference, but I'm going to try to get relief on when we can start contacting people," Royal said.

"I'm in favor of what we're doing now (in limiting contacts), but it's foolish to pass rules that restrict only ourselves. We as a conference can't afford to sit back and let schools from other states come in and contact boys. The late start that we get is too much for us to overcome in some instances," he said.

The University of Oklahoma, which soundly defeated Texas this year, shows 33 Texans on its roster and 10 Texans among its starters.

"I don't like to recruit all year round," Royal said. "I've been one over a long period of years to stick with the rules we have, but I've changed my mind."

Royal now advocates dropping the special SWC rules and letting conference schools abide by the NCAA rules, which permit coaches to contact prospects after their junior year in high school.

There has been speculation, however, that such a move would prompt the University Interscholastic League, which regulates Texas high school athletics, to pass its own rules eliminating any kind of early contact.

That idea also appeals to Royal. "Anything the UIL can do to stop it I'm in favor of," he said.

Turning specifically to Oklahoma, which has intensified its recruiting in Texas since 1967, Royal said "I don't blame Oklahoma for doing what it is. There's nothing illegal in what they're doing."

Gibson Glad Safety Returns

Manhattan, Kan. (AP) — Declaring that Nebraska has one of the top passing games in the country, Coach Vince Gibson said Tuesday he was glad that Ron Coppenbarger has returned to the Kansas State football team.

After a 95-minute workout, Gibson said the junior safety had helped the Wildcats secondary tremendously, noting Oklahoma State completed only four passes on the K-State first team Saturday.

The Wildcats defeated Oklahoma State 35-23.

Gibson said Nebraska, the nation's No. 1 team, is the type that likes "to mash you." He said Kansas State cannot "let them knock us out of there" next Saturday when the teams meet.

Worster, Miller Fined By Court

Hamilton, Ont. (AP) — Steve Worster, 22, and Seth Miller, 23, two former players with the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League, pleaded guilty in a provincial court Tuesday to charges of possession of marijuana. They were fined $100 each.

Worster was an All-American at the University of Texas before becoming a professional.

Miller and Worster were placed on voluntary waivers with no recall by the football club after their arrest. They returned to the United States following their initial court appearances Aug. 27.

Cleveland Signs Ken Aspromonte To Head Indians

Cleveland (AP) — Ken Aspromonte, a former journeyman Major League infielder, was named manager of the Cleveland Indians Tuesday and stressed the team would insist on strengthening "two or three positions" in any trade involving star pitcher Sam McDowell.

Gabe Paul, the club president, announced that Aspromonte had signed for the 1972 season. Salary terms were not disclosed.

Aspromonte, 40, will lead a team that lost 102 games in the 1971 season to tie the 1914 club as the losingest team in the Indians' history.

He succeeds Johnny Lipon, who was named manager when Alvin Dark was fired last July 30. Lipon's contract was not renewed at the end of the past season, and he signed as a coach with the Detroit Tigers.

Conference Championships Up For Grabs

Twenty-two high school football games remain on the prep slate.

All but three will decide conference championships and many will have a great effect on the final divisional top ten ratings to be published next week.

Class C pacesetter David City must face Class B rated Albion again in a Central Ten showdown, despite an earlier 28-6 victory.

Class D's new leader, St. Agnes, tangles with Bayard again for the Panhandle "C" title, though claiming a 16-0 triumph the first time around.

Others who will have another go are Hebron (16-6) against Wymore Southern for the Southern Nebraska crown, and Dorchester (20-0) versus Davenport in a Pioneer Conference playoff. All the previously mentioned games are slated Wednesday.

Friday's playoff schedule includes a Clarkson (18-14) rematch with Battle Creek in the Mid-State, and two eight-man championship clashes. Stuart, a 14-6 winner in the regular season, faces Cedar Rapids again for the Sandhills Gateway title, while Culbertson, which bombed Hayes Center 44-14 earlier, will try to do it again to take home the Southern Frontier trophy.

$1.4 Billion Transit System Wins Voters' OK In Atlanta

Atlanta (UPI) — A proposed $1.4 billion rapid transit system won narrow approval in Atlanta and its major suburban county Tuesday night, although voters in two other outlying counties elected to stay out of the system.

Populous Dekalb County voted 38,886 to 35,752 for the system, and with only two precincts uncounted the vote in Fulton County (Atlanta) was 54,425 to 52,723 for the system.

Voters in Gwinnett and Clayton Counties overwhelmingly rejected the proposal, which meant that it would not run in those counties.

Voters actually were balloting on a one-cent sales tax hike to help build the system. The rapid transit plan was defeated three years ago, when it would have been financed by property taxes.

MARTA

The plan called for the Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority (MARTA) to buy the Atlanta Transit System by mid-1972 and then drop fares from 40 cents to 15 cents, buy 490 new buses and set up more and longer routes.

MARTA also pledged to build by 1980 a 70-mile rapid transit system that would include 56 miles of rails and 14 miles of busways.

The federal government promised to pay two-thirds of the cost of building the system and made a $22.6 million installment payment last week.

Operational Subsidy

But since federal funds cannot be used to match local money to subsidize the 15-cent fare, the sales tax was proposed to pay for the operation subsidy, expected to require years.

MARTA proponents, led by Mayor Sam Massell, contended a rapid transit system was needed because of Atlanta's badly congested traffic and the city's high car accident rate.

Opponents charged that MARTA would become an uncontrollable "superagency" and that the one cent sales tax would raise more money than needed.

Some opponents also argued the system would help speed urban blacks into white suburbs.

OLD ENEMIES MEET

Old enemies met again at the Air Education Museum in Milwaukee when famed World War I combat ace Eddie Rickenbacker, 81, checked out a replica of a German Fokker DR-1 triplane. The Fokker triplane is one of the types of German aircraft Rickenbacker flew against in Europe. Rickenbacker took a side trip to see the museum from Chicago where he was to attend a dinner in his honor.

Alleged Bribe Attempt Involves Utah Bigwigs

Washington (AP) — Senate sources said Tuesday subpoenas are being issued to the Utah Democratic Party chairman and two other prominent Utah men, commanding their testimony about an alleged bribe attempt linked to special-interest legislation involving El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Earlier, Commerce Committee Chairman Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., announced an investigation of alleged pressure tactics by El Paso Gas to gain support for the legislation.

The bill before Congress would in effect, sanctify a 14-year-old merger involving El Paso which the Supreme Court has ruled four times violated antitrust law.

Magnuson said the subpoenas would be issued but did not name the recipients. Sources said those named in the subpoenas, to be issued Wednesday, were Democratic chairman John H. Klas, a vice president of Continental Bank in Salt Lake City; Lawrence A. Higgins Jr., executive vice president of the bank and Daniel Berman, campaign manager for a 1972 Democratic congressional candidate.

Meanwhile, Magnuson said the committee will defer action on a bill offered by Magnuson and 10 other Western senators to allow El Paso to retain its Northwest pipeline facilities acquired in a 1957 merger with Pacific Northwest Gas Co.

At the same time, Sens. Alan Cranston and John V. Tunney, both D-Calif., scheduled a news conference for Wednesday to announce their opposition to the bill. Until now they have not taken a firm position.

Sources said the two planned their announcement before the subpoena developments arose.

Klas told The Associated Press he did not know subpoenas were being issued. "This is the first I've heard of it," he said, adding "I've got to follow my lawyer's advice and I can say nothing about the matter."

Neither Higgins nor Berman, campaign manager for Wayne Owens, was immediately available for comment.

The incident under investigation was related at a committee hearing on the bill Oct. 22 by Beverly C Moore, an associate of consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Moore told the committee he had been informed by an unnamed Utah banker, who he said also had political connections, that an El Paso company representative had offered the bank a $100,000 interest-free deposit in exchange for his support for the bill.

Moore declined to name the principals publicly, asserting that the banker refused to come forward partly for fear of economic reprisals.

"On the basis of preliminary staff investigation of the incident," Magnuson announced Tuesday, "we are issuing subpoenas to obtain the testimony under oath of the principals involved in the alleged misconduct so that the members of the committee can evaluate the validity and significance of the allegations."

At the Oct. 22 hearing, an official of El Paso denounced the accusation as "an absolute, unmitigated lie."

J.C. Penney Co. tells admen newspapers are irreplaceable

The proper handling of a retail advertising account starts with knowing that the "backbone of our advertising effort is still our newspaper advertising," the nation's foremost advertising agency executives were informed this week by William R. Johnson, sales promotion manager, J. C. Penney Company.

Johnson, in an address Thursday (May 13) at the 1971 American Association of Advertising Agencies annual meeting at the Greenbrier in West Virginia, told the agency heads there is no getting around newspapers as the retailer's basic medium for advertising.

"Some advertising people, especially in agencies," he said, "believe this is because we (retailers) are too inflexible in terms of media, and are inclined to think too traditionally. Just try to tell this to our store managers who know what it takes to attract customers to the stores.

Don't cut budgets!

"Our store managers know that their newspaper ads produce sales dollars. They are perfectly willing, even eager, to use radio and television in carefully selected lines, but don't try to cut back on their newspaper budget. Broadcast is something you do with new money when increased advertising dollars are available to you."

Johnson said the effectiveness of newspaper advertising for a retailer is not hard to understand. "All you have to do," he said, "is notice how your wife reads her paper. She reads it like a shopping news. Sure she reads the news, the editorials, but if she wants to outfit her kids with shoes for school, she looks through the retail ads in the paper to find out who's selling what kind of shoes, at how much . . . or how much they've been reduced in price.

"Sometimes she even tears out the ad and carries it into the store. Every Penney store manager has seen this happen hundreds of times. He has yet to see a woman come into the store carrying a television commercial. And he cannot imagine a women sitting in front of a television set all day waiting for a children's shoe commercial. Can you?"

Immediate results

Johnson said "retail advertising has to work. It has to produce sales. So does national advertising have to work, but the difference is we find out, almost immediately. We know the next day if it produces. And so do our clients.

"When a store manager runs a children's shoe ad in Sunday's newspaper, he expects to see a crowded shoe department. The next day!"

The reason Penney decided to employ LaRoche, McCaffrey & McCall agency after 68 years of doing its own advertising was to help in preparing magazine and broadcast ads.

As far as newspaper advertising is concerned, Johnson said all ads are still being prepared by Penney's own Central Office advertising service department, which creates and produces 5,000 different newspaper ads each year. He said annual newspaper linage per its 1,700 stores runs from 8,000 lines in smaller outlets to over 2 million in the largest. "If we were an outside advertising agency, our newspaper billing alone would put us among the 20 largest agencies," Johnson declared.

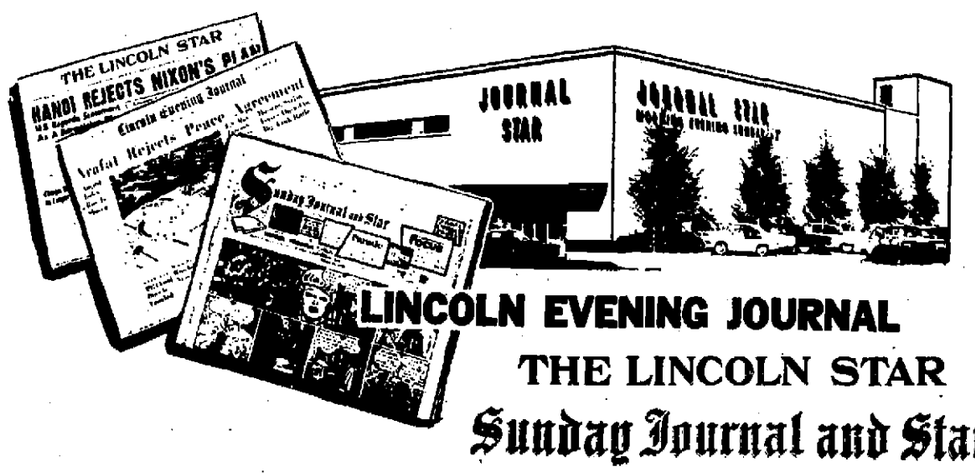

Agency's part in ads

He said the agency gets involved in newspaper advertising by supplying ideas on theme, layout and "their toughest criticism of the ads" produced by the Penney ad service staff.

Johnson said every retail operation in the country, whether a single store, several stores or a chain, could benefit from the help of an outside advertising agency.

In addition to making newspapers the top medium, Johnson said agencies will find other differences in handling a retail account, which he listed as follows:

- Speed. "Retail advertising presents deadlines that startle agency people."
- Volume. "The enormous volume of work changes in perspective. No ad is a masterpiece."
- Accountability. Every ad has to sell merchandise. No ineffective ad can be justified on the basis that "it creates a nice impression."
- Copy. "National ads can focus on a single item. Retail ads usually combine several items. It's a shame how many good headlines we have to throw away for this reason.
- Art. Retail advertising uses more art than photography. It's faster, and usually cheaper. The customer is trained to read them in a kind of visual shorthand."
- Television. "Our production costs have to be lower because in most cases our spots run for a much shorter length of time."

Selective Buying Buoys Stock Mart

New York (AP) — Selective buying in some recently depressed issues buoyed the stock market a bit Tuesday. Trading perked up a bit but remained relatively light.

Analysts said that while some investors still shopped for bargains left over from recent market declines, most investors found little incentive for market activity in the news background.

Many investors continued to stay out of the market waiting for some indication of a market trend and formal decisions by the Pay Board and Wage Commission, according to brokers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks managed a tiny gain for the day, closing up 0.37 at 837.91.

Advances outnumbered declines 717 to 642 among the 1,680 issues traded on the Big Board as 12.02 million shares changed hands. Volume, though light, was still an improvement over Monday's turnover of 8.52 million shares.

The New York Stock Exchange index of more than 1,300 common stocks closed up .04 at 54.16, while Standard & Poor's 500-stock average was up .07 at 94.46.

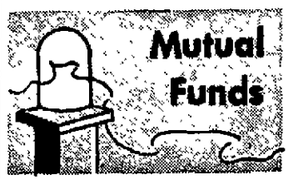

The Associated Press 60-stock average added .2 to close at 308.7. Industrials gained .2, rails dropped .2, and utilities added .7.

On the American Stock Exchange, the price-change index dipped .01 to 24.49, as 2.78 million shares were traded. Volume Monday had been 2.05 million shares. Of the 1,134 shares traded on the Amex, 461 declined and 354 advanced.

Royal Dutch Petroleum was the most-actively traded Big Board issue, closing up ½ at 34¼ on 195,000 shares including a block of 167,000 shares at 34.

A total of 83 blocks of 10,000 shares or more were traded on the Big Board, compared with a revised total of 49 such blocks Monday.

Corporate bonds were higher. U.S. governments were lower.

Conference With Students Sponsored By Executives

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

Merryle Rukeyser

Business Baiting

Corporate executives, properly concerned with the rebirth of a new style form of business baiting, which is sometimes disguised by seductive names such as consumerism, recently financed and participated in a Washington conference with college students.

This event paralleled a campaign of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to give insights to the public aspects of business in TV spots.

Such efforts are in line with this writer's recommendation that those who control the pursestrings should use part of their resources to create a better understanding of the institution of competitive enterprise. Expenditures in truthful concept advertising can be justified as a means of protecting the moral franchise of private industry.

In this spirit, Stewart S. Cort, chairman of Bethlehem Steel Corportion, was the keynoter at Washington. Cort correctly took pride in the increased desire of various groups to communicate It is a mistake, however, for business, suffering from a sense of original sin, to concede too much to its detractors. The aim should be a scientific approach which sets forth the truth about business and relations with employees, customers, suppliers, and investors.

Emphasis on Research

Thee should be greater emphasis on research. Too frequently so-called academic scholars assume that they discharge their duty by summarizing and collating the ex parte charges about the modern corporation appearing in documents of public hearings. A truly workmanlike role would be to go beyond such propaganda from whatever source to an objective study of the functions of the various parts of the economic body and their relationships to one another. In the setting of standards, business should inculcate the idea that with academic freedom should go a sense of academic responsibility Part of the dissatisfaction of college students with the Establishment comes from emotional and biased prejudicial statements by half baked academicians.

Business should further open their doors to scholars for study and investigation.

Cort illuminated the prevailing confusion when he analysed the allegation that "business is overly concerned with profits and not with public responsibility."

It is misleading and demagogic to set profits versus "public responsibility." A law abiding company, selling useful products at fair prices and paying good labor rates, is per se socially useful and is discharging an important "public responsibility." The survival of the private corporation will not rest on incidental charities and "social" gimmicks but upon its total performance especially in its own niche.

It is silly to assume you can determine the truth by taking polls on the extent of misconceptions.

Must Recoup Costs

In order to stay in business, an enterprise must recoup its costs through price tags placed on the goods and services it merchandises. A company chronically in the red is in the process of losing its franchise. Costs include payments to direct employees, purchase of goods and services from others, invisible costs such as depreciation, incidental to the wearing out of corporate assets, and tax payments which contribute to the support of government. In addition, the surviving enterprise must recognize the cost of capital. Interest and amortization on bonds constitute a fixed cost. but the return on the equity—on stocks—consists of whatever is left over after all prior costs have been met.

Only the free market is equipped to determine the size of profits. Usually the big profit maker is the efficient producer. He treats fairly all elements—labor, customers, suppliers and investors—whereas the slim profit maker or the one with chronic losses wastes resources in inefficiency and sweats labor, exploits customers, defaults at times on suppliers, and disappoints investors

A major function of voluntary business, which links up with the creative mind in science, invention and engineering, is to instill discipline. Competent management gets others to produce better than they would without such inspiration and supervision.

(Mr. Rukeyser will be pleased to receive inquiries from readers concerning their financial problems. Letters with stamped, self addressed envelopes should be sent in care of The Lincoln Star. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column Others, to the extent time permits, will be handled by mail.)

Staff Cut Is Planned By Anaconda

New York (AP) — Anaconda Co. says it plans to trim its staff, phase out several marginal operations and increase domestic copper production in an effort to recover from the los of its expropriated Chilean mines.

Anaconda President John B. M. Place said Monday the initial cost-cutting will save at least $25 million a year in employment costs. Several high level officials have resigned and the staff at New York corporate headquarters is in the process of being halved to 250 employes, he said.

The company is in the process of closing four plants of its Anaconda American Brass Co. subsidiary, employing about 300 persons, he said. The company has already indicated its intention to get out of the zinc business and possibly drop its lead business.

Copper production at the firm's three major western mines will rise to more than 250,000 tons annually for the next several years, while plans call for increasing annual capacity to 300,000 tons by 1975, Place said. Last year, production at the three mines totalled slightly over 242,000 tons, he added.

Attacks Against Non-Phosphate Detergents Hit

Indianapolis, Ind. (UPI) — A conservationist Tuesday termed "appalling" what he called "the shotgun attacks against non-phosphate cleaning compounds by the surgeon general and the Environmental Protection Agency."

Thomas E. Dustin, executive secretary of the Indiana Izaak Walton League, made the comment in a statement prepared for presentation at a hearing of the Indiana Stream Pollution Control Board.

Dustin said "certain spokesmen for the federal administration and self-proclaimed experts . . . are trying to pull the detergent industry's financial investments out of the fire like so many chestnuts" by using "scare and terror tactics"

"They appear to have lumped the whole bag of non-phosphate detergents and other cleaning agents into a single target for vituperative assault, thereby serving no interest but the phosphate detergent investments," Dustin said

Body Is Found In Salt Creek

Butcher identified the man as Allen Matejka, of 315 No 18

Butcher said the body was noticed by a University of Nebraska student who was jogging in the area

Butcher said the body looked like it hadn't been in the water over 2 or 3 days and that an autopsy would be performed Wednesday to determine the probable cause of death.

Bid Rejection May Delay Sioux City Bridge Design

AMES, Iowa (AP) — A possible delay of at least six months in the design of the Interstate 129 bridge linking Sioux City, Iowa, with South Sioux City, Neb., may be caused by the rejection by state officials Tuesday of bids for borings to determine necessary footings for the span.

The Iowa State Highway Commission turned down a bid of $48,944 by the Nebraska Testing Lab, Omaha, Neb., to do the work because the figure exceeded by $18,000 the commission's estimate of cost.

The Omaha firm submitted the lowest of four bids which ranged to $121,000. The bids were opened by a consulting firm which is doing the design work for the state.

An additional bid was received after the official time of opening bids, and remained unopened.

Commission Vice Chairman Stephen Garst of Coon Rapids, said the span would cost about $15 million and a six-month delay could result in a $300,000 increase because of inflation.

Comparing that $300,000 figure with the additional $18,000 assessment to get the boring done before low water and ice make boring impossible, Garst said, "I'll bet the odds" indicating he would prefer to spend the additional $18,000 now to save the possible inflationary increase.

But his opinion was not shared by commissioners William O. Gray of Cedar Rapids, Robert Rigler of New Hampton and Harry Reed of Winterset as they voted to reject those bids and ask for new bids.

Jacobs Waives Right To Hearing In Slaying Case

Omaha (AP) — Robert Julian Jacobs, 31, accused of kidnaping and murdering 12-year-old Allen Schmidt, waived his right to a preliminary hearing Tuesday and will be charged in District Court.

Jacobs also is accused of kidnaping and stabbing Allen's brother Leslie, 10, on Oct. 16. Leslie has since been released from the hospital.

Judge John E. Murphy said formal charges against Jacobs would be read in open court on Nov. 24.

Assistant Public Defender Bennett Hornstein said the defense agreed to forego the preliminary hearing because, "We don't want any more publicity."

Woman Injured In 1-Car Crash

A Lincoln woman was listed in "poor" condition at St. Elizabeth Health Center with injuries she received in a one-car accident on 70th between South Wedgewood and A early Tuesday morning, according to police reports.

Police said Anne Magee, 46, of 7100 South, suffered a broken hip, broken ribs, a ruptured bladder and head cuts when the car she was driving went out of control, left the roadway and rolled over.

The woman was southbound on 70th when she lost control of her vehicle, went left of center into the ditch and then rolled over twice and came to rest on the lawn of East High School, police said.

A GREAT NEW HEARING AID

It is the most unusual hearing aid the writer has ever seen in the many years in this hearing aid field. It's remarkable! This aid is truly a revolutionary advancement for the average hard-of-hearing person — an Audiologist in Norway has written "The most significant advancement in Hearing Aid design since the transistor . . ." I truly believe that the new MAICO MARK 100 will offer most hard-of-hearing persons the most dramatic hearing improvement they have ever known. I would be glad to compare it with any other hearing aid now in use that is in a similar power range, or even those that may have a greater gain — HEARING IS BELIEVING!

Ulster Confronts Major Crisis Of Its 50 Years

©The New York Times

By BERNARD WEINRAUB

Belfast, Northern Ireland — Torn by a new surge of urban guerrilla warfare, Ulster is confronting the major social and political crisis of its 50-year history.

Government officials, Roman Catholics and Protestants, moderates and extremists on both sides agree that Ulster faces a dramatic political shift that will result in London's assuming new initiatives and powers in this tormented province of the United Kingdom.

At the highest level of the Protestant-dominated provincial government there is growing anxiety that the semi-independent parliament at Stormont Castle will be suspended and some form of direct rule from London will take its place. With that the precarious dominance of the million Ulster Protestants over the half-million Catholics will topple.

'Crunch Situation'

"It is now a crunch situation," one senior official in the Northern Ireland government said Tuesday. "There is a feeling among Protestants — a real feeling — of the possibility of betrayal by Westminster."

Tom Conaty, chairman of the Central Citizens Defense Committee, a powerful group in the Catholic ghetto, said: "This thing is going to break. It won't go on. We're sick of violence but it's going to continue unless Stormont is abolished.

"Northern Ireland is like a 50-year toothache. Direct rule would be like going to the dentist. It will hurt for awhile but we'll get used to it."

Although the half-million Roman Catholic minority in Northern Ireland yearns for unification with the Irish Republic to the south, the immediate aim of Catholic leaders is an end to the Stormont parliament, which they view as dedicated to Protestant dominance.

The million Protestants in Northern Ireland — who fear that the republic in the south will eventually engulf them — view direct rule as a first step toward unification.

Internment Policy

What sparked the current crisis in Northern Ireland was the wave of arson, bombings and killings that followed the government's internment measures to root out the Irish Republican Army. Since internment began, three months ago Tuesday, a total of 96 persons have been killed, including 61 civilians, 28 soldiers and seven policemen.

The most recent incident occurred shortly before 5 p.m. Tuesday when a British soldier was shot and killed by a sniper.

Belfast itself is now a stricken city. Shops and pubs are boarded up at dusk. Buses stop running at 9:30 p.m. Airline service into the city is curtailed. By night, the city's darkened main street, Royal Avenue, is eerily silent except for the rumble of armored cars and voices crackling over military radios. Business in the center of Belfast has dropped more than 40% since internment.

As in Saigon, South Vietnam, residents and visitors avoid sitting beside windows for fear of being shot.

Packet Packing Pigeon's Pot Puzzles Police

Flint, Mich. (AP) — A Flint man reported to police that he found a stray bird among his homing pigeons Monday and discovered it had a packet and note attached to one leg.

The note read, "Please enjoy." Police said the green leaves in the packet were marijuana plants.

Joseph Emrick is housing the stray pigeon until police decide on their next move.

Independence Voters Reject Increase In School Taxes

Independence, Mo. (UPI) — Residents of this Kansas City suburb, home of former President Harry S. Truman, Tuesday soundly rejected a proposed school tax increase that would have reopened the city's 25 public schools.

The outcome left uncertain the fate of 17,000 students who have been out of class since Nov. 1, when officials closed the schools because they lacked money to meet the November teacher payroll.

With returns in from all but one of the city's 12 polling places, plus absentee ballots, the vote was 8,070 in favor and 8,153 against, with a two-third majority needed for passage.

Officials had promised to reopen schools Wednesday if the increase were approved. But they said a defeat would keep them closed until month end.

It was the seventh time two years a 95-cent tax i crease was defeated. Duri that time the only increase t school board got through was 25-cent increase which can last year.

Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is six or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures gives you.
